

Anderson Hunted In Every Village And City in Indiana

Officers Are Instructed To Take Author of "Vengeance Murders" Either Dead or Alive.

"ONE-ARM" WOLFE CLAIMS AN ALIBI

Muncie Is Thrilled With Excitement of Trying To Catch Nationally-Known Desperado.

DETECTIVE WARNED THAT HE IS "NEXT"

Toledo, Ohio, August 15.—George "Dutch" Anderson, slayer of Ben Hance and his wife in Muncie, Ind., Friday afternoon, was in Toledo less than eight hours after the crime was committed.

This was made known today when W. J. King, head of a private detective agency in Cleveland, received a letter from Anderson, threatening him with death. The letter was written from the Secor hotel, Toledo, and read, "King, you are next." It was signed "Dutch."

Muncie, Ind., August 15.—(AP)—Forty members of the local police force, armed with riot guns, left the local police station tonight for an undivided destination, which newspapermen said might result in the capture of George "Dutch" Anderson, accused of the fatal shooting of Ben Hance, of near here, and his wife, on a road near here yesterday. Chief of Police Randolph's only comment was: "We have a hot tip."

Twenty minutes after leaving headquarters, the officers returned. Chief Randolph stated that his men raided two apartments in a notorious part of the city on tips that Anderson had been seen there. No trace of him was found, however.

All of the officers were ordered to remain at headquarters the rest of the night. Chief Randolph declaring he has definite information that Anderson is in Muncie. Squads of officers continued combing that part of the city known as the underworld after the riot squads had left.

Muncie, Ind., August 15.—The leader of the "murder of vengeance"—George "Dutch" Anderson, escaped convict, pal and tutor of Gerald Chapman, the "prince of bandits"—was being hunted Saturday in every hamlet and city in Indiana by officers instructed to "take him, dead or alive."

The latest crime to be added to the long list of his prodigious enterprises was the murder of Ben Hance and his wife, who lived on a farm near here, and who were once friends of the notorious Chapman-Anderson gang. Hance, seeking immunity for his own criminal activities, "squealed" and helped the state of Connecticut to convict Chapman, who is now in a cell at Hartford.

Curiously enough the police here say that they were just about to "close in" on Anderson when he and Charles "One-Arm" Wolfe murdered Hance along a country highway late Friday. Wolfe, a former policeman of Hartford, Ind., was captured a few hours later when he appeared at the home of his mother-in-law. Wolfe offered no resistance and manifested surprise at the arrest. He said he would prove an alibi.

With Wolfe safely in a cell, the search for Anderson was renewed with intensity. Nothing definite as to progress of the man hunt was given.

A Woman's Charm

Poets through the ages have sung of woman's charm, and defined for us, in many different languages, its meaning and the secret of its attainment. The woman of 1925 has learned for herself that charm, in appearance and personality, is very important, but that surroundings play a heavy part also, and that she must keep pace with the times. The clever woman of today is, therefore, always on the alert for suggestions to improve her home, her personality, her appearance. To such a woman, the department in the Classified Section, "WOMAN'S SPECIALTIES," will prove a veritable treasure chest. Read it today.

FLORIDA FACTIONS RESTING ON ARMS OVER 'LOST LAND'

Delegation of Homesteaders To Carry Appeal To Governor Martin Against Collier Claims.

Tampa, Fla., August 15.—Both sides rested on their arms today in the Marco "lost land" controversy, pending the outcome of an appeal to Governor John W. Martin with a petition signed by members of the W. G. Williams faction, asking the removal of Marco island of Sheriff W. R. Maynard, who is protecting the interests of Barron G. Collier, with armed deputies.

A delegation of homesteaders, who say Collier had fenced and posted armed guards around government land which they want to homestead, will take the petition, signed by 150 voters of Collier county, to the state capital next week, after Governor Martin returns from an inspection trip to other part of the Everglades. Meantime, the situation is calmer and both sides are awaiting the arrival of federal land officials from Washington to settle the dispute at a public hearing.

Hotel at San Marco Burns. Following a tilt between homesteaders and two deputies, who were ordered from the White House at Marco, where they have been staying, by W. G. Williams, leader of one faction, and who is said to have purchased the town, the power and light plant of the hotel, owned by Williams, was destroyed by fire of mysterious origin. The property loss is about $1,000. Williams adherents profess to see in the occurrence an act of reprisal for the ousting of the deputies, though Williams has made no accusations against anyone in particular.

According to Sheriff Maynard, the deputies were ousted from the hotel and were ordered by Williams not to even enter the postoffice. Williams also declared, the sheriff said, that residents of the island would be evicted if they harbor any of his officers. So far, three arrests have been made, two for charges of being drunk and disorderly and another for aggravated assault with a dangerous weapon.

Deputy's Disappearance Explained. The mysterious disappearance of Deputy Sheriff J. H. Cox and his wife some time ago was explained today when it was said, he probably left the settlement after a warrant was sworn out, charging him with the attempted murder of Howard Helveston, fisherman. The trouble on the island between old settlers and newcomers on one side and interests of Barron G. Collier, New York advertising man and Florida developer, on the other side, broke from an under-current of dissatisfaction last June, when six of the settlers' faction attempted a survey of land Collier claimed was in his purchase, and which the homesteaders contended was omitted from a government survey in 1879, and therefore open to homestead claims.

WALES MAKES HIT IN LATIN AMERICA

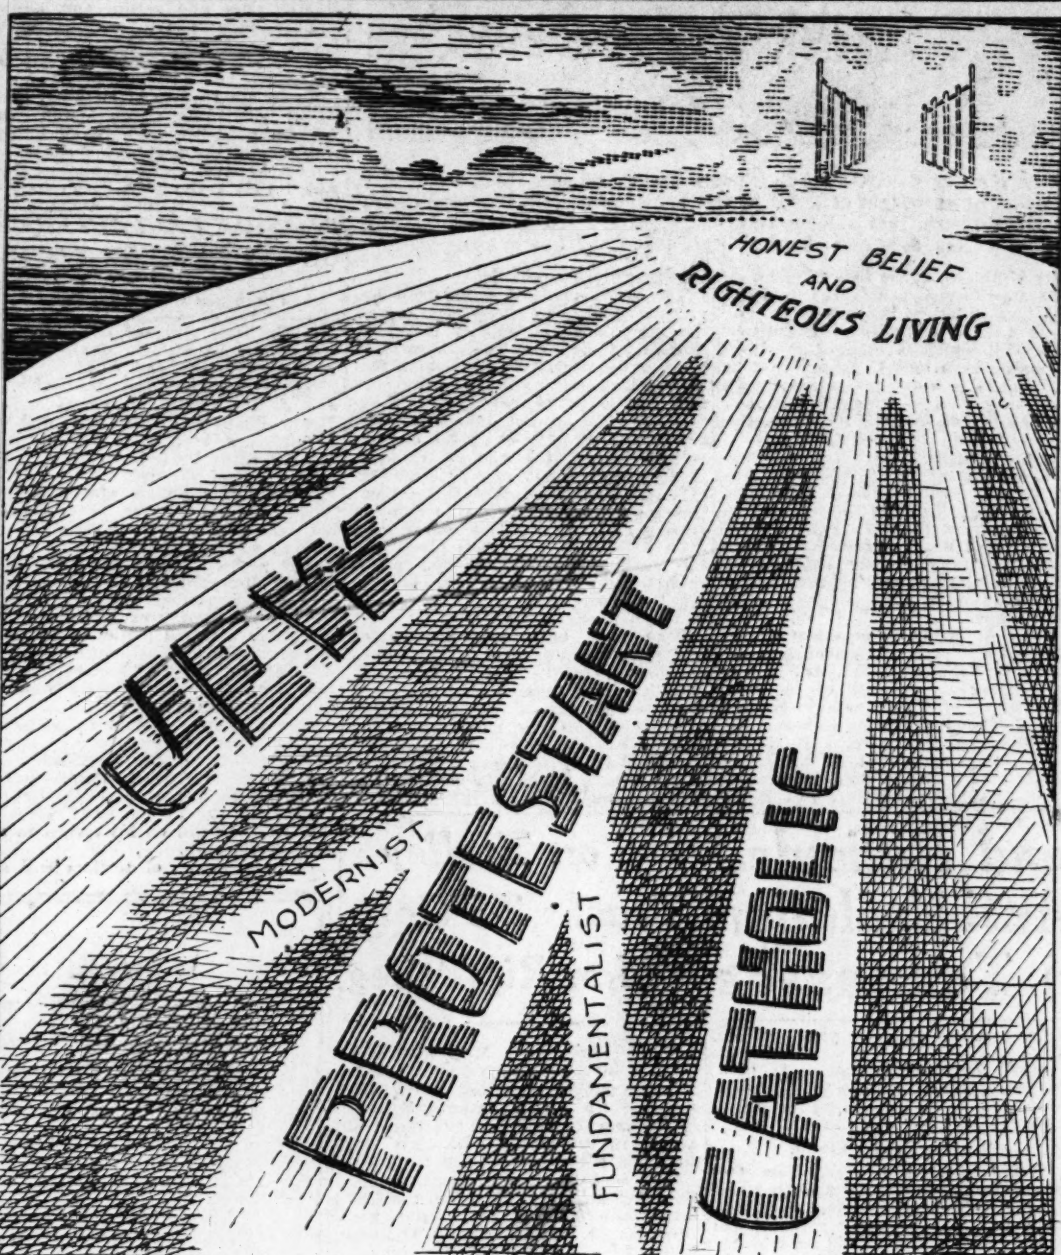

Responds in Spanish to Toast at Luncheon in Montevideo—Leaves Today for Buenos Aires.

Montevideo, Uruguay, August 15.—(AP)—The Prince of Wales today made a most favorable impression at a luncheon given by the Anglo-Uruguayan community of Montevideo, by responding in Spanish to a toast.

"Muchas gracias por esta linda fiesta. Viva el Uruguay!" said the prince, which means, "Thank you very much for this very beautiful fete. Long live Uruguay!"

Wales' words were received with tumultuous applause, and, in return for the compliment, the luncheon guests joined heartily in singing the traditional British post-prandial song, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

DANCING AT TYBEE TODAY IS PROMISED

Judge Strange at Statesboro Grants Temporary Injunction Against Enforcing Sunday Law.

Savannah, Ga., August 15.—Judge Strange, of the Ogeechee circuit sitting at Statesboro today, signed an order for a temporary injunction against Tybee officials and Chatham county officials prohibiting them from interfering with Sunday dancing on Durden and Powers pavilion on the island.

Council for W. D. Durden, one of the proprietors of the dance pavilion, applied for injunction and a hearing is set for Wednesday before Judge Meldrum in Chatham superior court. Judge Strange signed the order because Judge Meldrum was out of the city.

Mayor Harris stated that in view of the injunction he was powerless to stop dancing this Sunday, though if it does occur, a case will undoubtedly be made. Solicitor General Hartridge had a warrant issued today charging violation of the law last Sunday. Town Clerk Buckley of Tybee, is given as the complaining witness on the back of the warrant, and newspaper men are likely to be subpoenaed.

The injunction arises out of Mr. Durden's expressed intention to test the validity of the law.

Durden in his petition declared that his property would be jeopardized and its value ruined if contemplated arrests on the pavilion tomorrow should materialize. It was upon this allegation that Judge Strange granted the petition for temporary injunction.

The anti-Sunday dancing law was

The message, forwarded by Arthur A. Collins, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, added that direct voice communication had been established with the expedition, he having picked up at noon today the voice of John L. Reinartz, chief operator aboard the Bowdoin.

Two Women In Kentucky Are Sheriffs

Both Appointed To Fill Out Terms of Husbands Who Were Killed.

Hickman, Ky., August 15.—(AP)—Kentucky has two women sheriffs, the first time in the history of the state that two women have held the position of rounding up the lawless in different counties at the same time.

One of them, Mrs. Addie West, was appointed and sworn in as sheriff of Fulton county here today. The other is Mrs. Lois Roach, of Mayfield, Graves county.

Both women attained their offices through appointment following the deaths of their husbands, who were killed in line of duty.

Joe West, sheriff of Fulton county, was shot to death last Tuesday by Monroe Heasterly. Heasterly recently was released from an asylum.

Mrs. Roach succeeded to the office of sheriff some time ago.

The Bonin islands are north of Guam, about midway between that island and Yokohama, and far to the northeast of the Philippines.

London, August 15.—The proposed Japanese naval maneuvers at Bonin are responsive to the American naval maneuvers carried out this summer during the fleet's cruise to Hawaii, according to a dispatch from Tokyo to The Evening News.

The Japanese fleet will simulate naval war with an attack and defense of strategic points.

COOLIDGE'S DAY WITH FATHER ALMOST SPOILED

Plymouth, Vt., August 15.—(AP)—Toothache, which took him to the dentist twice today, almost spoiled the first day of President Coolidge's over-Sunday visit here with his father. The president lost no time, after a rest last night, in motoring to Woodstock, 16 miles away, to look up Dr. J. R. Jewett, a friend since college days, who removed a crown that was causing trouble and put in a temporary filling. Late in the day Mr. Coolidge again went to his office for treatment.

CIVIL ENGINEERS HONOR NORCROSS

Plans Announced for Erecting Memorial at Georgia Tech for Norman Wreck Victim.

Representatives of four of the greatest engineering organizations in the country acting through the Georgia section of the American Society of Civil Engineers will erect a memorial at Georgia Tech to the late Paul H. Norcross, noted Atlanta engineer, who was drowned in the Mississippi river when the steamer Norman sank May 8. The memorial will be a granite seat eight feet long and four feet high containing a bronze tablet. It will be presented to Georgia Tech with formal exercises in October.

When the memorial is presented some of the foremost engineers of the country will come to Atlanta to take part in the ceremonies. Wilson Sherman Kinneer, of New York, president of the American Institute of Consulting Engineers, will preside. One of the principal addresses will be delivered by Robert Ridgeway, president of the American Society of Civil Engineers. The memorial will be presented to Georgia Tech for the engineering societies by George W. Fuller, of New York.

Members of Atlanta organizations with which Mr. Norcross was affiliated, including the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce of which he was once president, will participate in the ceremonies.

Mr. Norcross was one of Atlanta's most active and progressive citizens. He was a director of the American Society of Civil Engineers, member of the American Institute of Consulting Engineers, secretary of the engineering board of review and trustee of the American Waterworks association.

BURGLARS ROUTED BY DEMPSEY DOGS

Actress Wife of Champion Pugilist, Fearing Plot, Refuses To Let Him Chase Them Away.

Los Angeles, August 15.—(AP)—Four men broke into the Hollywood home of Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion pugilist, last night, spent considerable time on the lower floor while the fighter was in bed above, and finally were routed by the Dempsey dogs. Nothing was stolen, the champion said.

Dempsey and his wife, Estelle Taylor Dempsey, film actress, who had retired when the intruders broke the back door to gain admittance, were at a loss today to explain the raid, in view of the fact that nothing was stolen and that last apparently was not the housebreakers' object.

$11,436,510 INCREASE IN TAXABLE PROPERTY OF COUNTY REVEALED

Man Who Turned Broadway At Night Into Daylight Dies

OSCAR J. GUDE WAS PIONEER IN HIS FIELD

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York, August 15.—Oscar J. Gude, the man who said, "Let there be light on Broadway," and turned a shadowy, ramshackle street into the one and only gay white way with the gleam of his own aurora borealis, is dead in Bad Nauheim, Germany.

And just to show Broadway what a man he was, a workman in Gude's electrical shop will yank a switch one of these nights and plunge the street back into the darkness that enveloped it when Gude came along with a gleaming idea 25 years ago and staked out a path along which night should never fall. For one minute the millions of bulbs in Gude's own shop-made firmament—the cynical, glittering twinklers which once inspired a poet of Tin Pan Alley to write, "There's a broken heart for every light on Broadway"—will blink out and Broadway, groping in the fiery light of the taxi headlights, will realize that O. J. Gude was somebody, as he certainly was, although the proportion of people who overheard his name is probably no greater than one in one thousand.

Gude's secretary, a man who knew him when his only light was a glittering hunch, conceived the notion of dousing the midnight sun as a tribute to the fellow who gave George M. Cohan something to sing about in the first place. The O. J. Gude company, which is now a big trust, comprising 21 firms, will pick the date, which probably will be the night of the day of his funeral.

Until ten years ago, Gude himself was pretty well known along the street, for he used to do considerable basking in the radiance of his own achievement. He was here and there in the clubs and cafes, meeting the advertising men and peddling space along the Broadway skyline from which he was ready to proclaim in letters of fire the matchless durability of this man's chewing gum, to describe the wasp-hermit fragrance and social correctness of the tobacco that came in a muslin sack, or to

GEORGIA IS FACING TROOPSSURRENDER TO FRENCH, SPANISH

Tetuan, Spanish Morocco, August 15.—(AP)—Five thousand rebel tribesmen unconditionally surrendered to the French and Spanish forces which captured the Sarsar heights position. The prisoners constituted the entire Rifian garrison which held the formidable and strategic Sarsar upland. The surrender is believed to have ended the Franco-Spanish military problem in the region where the two armies have joined forces.

The victory was celebrated by the commanders of the French and Spanish forces which participated in it—Colonel Freydenberg and General Riquelme, when they breakfasted together at Hualti.

COTTON MILL HEAD KILLS ELECTRICIAN

Attention Paid by Latter to Former's Daughter Believed Responsible for Cold-Blooded Murder.

Rockingham, N. C., August 15.—(AP)—W. B. Cole, wealthy cotton manufacturer, president of the Hannah Picket cotton mill, was held in jail tonight without privilege of bail, on recommendation of the coroner's jury, following an inquest in the case of the death of W. W. Ormond, electrician, who was shot and killed by Cole on one of the principal streets of Rockingham late today.

According to testimony before the coroner's jury, Ormond was seated in his automobile in front of the manufacturer's building, on Main street, when Cole stepped from the curb, approached the car, drew a pistol, fired three shots at Ormond, returned to his office nearby and laid the weapon on his desk. He was taken immediately to the hospital, where he died in 10 minutes, one bullet from the pistol having pierced his heart.

The manufacturer made no comment, so far as could be learned, either just prior to the shooting or afterwards. He has remained silent since. Shortly after the shooting, Cole was arrested at his home by the acting sheriff and placed in jail.

W. W. Ormond, who is 23 years of age, accompanied by his brother, Alton Ormond, arrived in Rockingham from Raleigh this morning, on their way to Myrtle Beach, S. C. It was said, deceased was a son of Rev. A. L. Ormond, Methodist minister and former pastor in this town. He resides now at Nashville, N. C. The young man was unmarried. Cole has a family and has long been prominent in business, church and social circles. No motive has been assigned for his act, though it was reported tonight that he objected to attentions paid his daughter by Ormond.

TRIAL OF RAWLINGS TO OPEN MONDAY

Wrightsville, Ga., August 15.—Lawyers announced tonight that everything is in readiness for the trial of C. G. Rawlings, prominent Washington county man and former banker, charged with murder in connection with the shooting of G. A. Tarbuton, his former partner. The trial is scheduled to begin on Monday.

J. J. Tanner, owner of the joint farms of Rawlings and Tarbuton following his conviction and given a life sentence, is being held in jail here, pending appeal for new trial.

The killing of Tarbuton last February created great interest throughout middle Georgia.

Tanner was walking behind Tarbuton on a hunt for hawks at the time the latter was fatally shot. Tanner claimed the shotgun was carrying was discharged accidentally when he stumbled.

Rawlings, who was walking behind Tanner, stated he did not see the actual shooting, but when he heard the report of the gun, Tanner was on the ground, and Tarbuton was falling.

At the instance of Tarbuton's son, Plucker, 21, the case was investigated with the result that Tanner was charged with the murder of Tarbuton and Rawlings was ordered held as accessory. Two negroes also were held as material witnesses.

At a preliminary hearing before Justice, each case being tried separately, Tanner was ordered held, and Rawlings was freed. Later the John county grand jury indicted both Tanner and Rawlings.

Rawlings is a prominent banker of Sandersville and a member of a well-known Georgia family.

It is said that Rawlings' joint farming operations with Tarbuton included about 30,000 acres of land.

It is the contention of the state that Tarbuton was killed in order that approximately $300,000 life insurance might be collected and diverted to his indolence. It is the contention of the defense that he was killed accidentally.

$3,000,000 Cement Plant Begins Operation On Southern Railway Line Below Macon

Birdseye view of the $3,000,000 cement plant at Clinchfield, Ga., below Macon, on the Southern railway, which employs 200 men, ships ten cars a day, or an output of 75,000 barrels per month. This plant, built within the past few months on a spot which was formerly just a highway crossing, at a railroad, uses practically all local material and is another indication of the development of Georgia industrially.

Clinchfield, Ga., August 15.—(Special.)—This station, 20 miles south of Macon, on the Georgia Southern & Florida line of the Southern Railway system, which is brought from various southern mines. The limestone and kaolin deposits are in practically inexhaustible quantities, the company owning 800 acres and having the mineral rights on between 2,000 and 3,000 acres in addition.

The plant at Clinchfield was constructed by men who have been highly successful in the operation of cement plants in other parts of the country and who recognized the splendid opportunity for the development of the industry at this point and were willing to back their judgment with their money.

Peay Praised and Ridiculed For Signing Anti-Evolution Law Passed in Tennessee

Comment Ranges From Unprintable Sarcasm and Denunciation to Highest Commendation.

Nashville, Tenn., August 15.—(AP.)—Praise in the highest to ridicule unprintable, for signing the Tennessee anti-evolution law, is found in letters received by Governor Austin Peay from the United States and foreign countries.

The governor tonight opened to the Associated Press a mass of communications, little of which he had read, dealing with the action of the state legislature in passing the Butler bill, barring teaching of the theory of evolution from the public schools, and with his approving it.

Peay's only comment was: "I want the country to know what kind of people are in it."

Though a majority of the letters are commendatory of the governor's action, some are sarcastic and denunciations, directed toward Tennessee and the south, written by individuals.

Some Writers Sarcastic.

Certain overtures in the "evolution file" greet the chief executive of Tennessee with such expressions as "twisting the arm of your office," "to the sorrowing governor," and "Governor (2) Austin Peay."

Excerpts from some of the letters in the file made public by Governor Peay follow:

William Jennings Bryan—Please accept my cordial congratulations on the great service you have rendered in signing the anti-evolution bill. The Christian parents of the state owe you a debt of gratitude for saving their children from the poisonous influence of an unproven hypothesis that gives man a jungle ancestry and chills his spiritual nature. The south is now leading the nation in defense of Bible Christianity. Other states, north and south will follow the example of Tennessee.

W. E. Gibson, Birmingham, Ala.—Some one should start a cheap sideshow and exhibit you (Judge Raulston) and Peay as antediluvian specimens of intolerance. . . . It appears but a short while more you will be praying to Bryan instead of a deity.

Would Order Tail for Scopes.

J. H. Ragdale, Fort Myers, Fla.—It would be well to order a tail for Scopes from Scott-Roblock and send him to the woods.

Walter White, Dayton, Tenn.—Scopes' former superior—I am of the opinion that this is the greatest state of Tennessee has taken since the saloon was abolished.

The Rt. Rev. James M. Maxon, bishop of Tennessee, Protestant Episcopal church—I consider such restrictive legislation not only unfortunate, but calamitous.

N. W. Dougherty, professor civil engineering, University of Tennessee—I do not see the need of such legislation.

R. W. Donahat, Huntington, W. Va.—I have the honor of offering my congratulations for your approval of the act of a brave legislature in cutting off the dragon head of evolution (devilution).

R. E. Cantwell, Chicago—Under authority vested in me as a scab, I herewith create you, sublime damn fool of the universe.

E. J. Beck, Detroit—Is Tennessee civilized?

E. B. Chaffin, Nashville, Tenn.—I appeal to you in behalf of humanity and not monkeys, for God's sake, save the children.

Common Sense, Mobile, Ala.—The scientific world extends its sympathy to the governor and his companions in the sad bereavement recently suffered, losing their reason and common sense, joining that long procession of anti-evolutionists traveling the "Great Beyond" via the pons asinorum.

C. L. Mohr, Wolschaft, Stuttgart, Germany—I read here in Europe your efforts to preserve the version of the Bible on the creation. The Ku Klux Klan seems to be of the same opinion.

Agrees With New Law.

Leonard Joy, Detroit—The universe is too immense to be easily convinced and explained by any half-learned mortal man, be he even a Darwin or a Darrow.

Will Gould, Los Angeles—The scientists may develop potatoes, but they will be potatoes still.

NEGRO HURT BY AUTO OF LAWRENCE DE GIVE

Albert Summery, negro street sweeper, received a fractured skull, a broken leg and cuts and bruises about the body Saturday morning when he was knocked down by an automobile driven by Lawrence De Give, of 68 Peachtree street.

The negro was carried to Grady hospital. Physicians state that his condition is serious.

Patrolman W. F. Anderson was told that Mr. De Give was driving at not more than 15 miles an hour, that the negro walked in front of the automobile, and that the accident was unavoidable. A case of reckless driving was made by Patrolman Anderson.

FORD BALKS HOLDUP AND SAVES $150 ROLL

Detectives Saturday were working on several clues that may lead to arrests of two men who, shortly after 2 o'clock in the morning, attacked in Grant park L. Ford, proprietor of the cafe at 139 Decatur street.

When the car driven by Ford threw a tire the two men leaped from some shrubbery by the side of the road and attacked the auto. He repulsed his assailants and escaped in his car. He had $150 in his pocket at the time.

BRYAN ASKS FOR AID IN SEARCH FOR WIFE

Police were asked Saturday by J. T. Bryan of 376 East Fair street to assist in the search for his wife, Mrs. Irene Bryan, 27, who has been missing from home since last Sunday.

Mrs. Bryan refused to accompany her husband and young son to Grant Park at that time, stating that she was going to the park with another young woman, he said. She has not been heard from since.

NEGRO IS CHARGED WITH ROBBING SCHWAB RESIDENCE

Spurgeon Haley, negro, of 226 East Meritts avenue, Saturday afternoon was bound over to DeKalb county superior court by Recorder Pro-Ten Murphy M. Holloway on charges of burglary, in connection with robbery of the residence of Mrs. Otto Schwab, of 128 Briarcliff road, on August 12, when a large quantity of clothing, including silks and satins, was stolen.

Lilly May Short, negro, of 5 Leach street, was held as a material witness and was placed under a $500 bond.

About $200 worth of clothing, identified as articles stolen from the Schwab residence were found in the residence of the negroes. When questioned by the officers, the negroes stated that Haley gave them to her.

FLORIDA FACTIONS REST ON ARMS OVER LOSSES

The six were arrested on charges of trespassing by Sheriff Maynard, representing Collier, and fined.

The defendants were: C. E. Exum, Jr., J. W. Carter, J. G. Hall, Jr., Henry Hall, E. V. Jordan and S. G. Williams, a brother of W. G. Williams, leading the settlers' fight. They claimed they pleaded guilty to the charges under duress and will seek damages from Collier in a federal suit, charging false imprisonment, according to their spokesmen.

The petition asking the removal of Sheriff Maynard and his armed officers was presented to Circuit Judge George W. Storter at Everglades, but the judge declared action in the case should wait until the removal of the sheriff is decided by the state.

The governor, with other members of the internal improvement board, is on a tour of the Everglades, investigating homestead claims before he can decide whether to remove the state, and the appointment probably will be scheduled on his return to the capital Tuesday.

The delegation of settlers' will ask for the removal of the sheriff and his deputies on the ground, it is claimed, that "they are armed beyond reason and are allied with the agents of Collier against the citizens of Marco."

Only 56 acres are involved in the dispute, according to R. A. Henderson, representative of Collier, who declared the purchase of the town of Marco has not been completed by Williams. He denies that any roads on "the island have been blocked by Collier's agents."

DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR TO MAKE INVESTIGATION

Washington, August 15.—(AP.)—The department of the interior is about to enter the Florida situation, where two groups are contending over land on Marco island. Secretary Work has ordered a searching investigation of the troubles.

Department officials have received communications from both sides, but they have decided that first-hand information is necessary. T. C. Havell, acting commissioner of public lands of the department, will go to the scene with a government engineer as soon and public hearing will be held.

The island was surveyed in 1849 under the old contract-survey system, and it was considered possible at the department that a stretch of land was overlooked. It develops that stretches remain unsurveyed, the ownership still must be determined, and until the ground is gone over thoroughly, officials here will make no comment.

COLLIER GIVES HIS SIDE IN CONTROVERSY OVER LAND

New York, August 15.—(AP.)—Baron G. Collier today said, in telling of the Marco island homestead trouble, that a man named W. G. Williams took an option on about 54 acres of land on Marco island, Fla., which was held by the Collier interests.

"He immediately tried to sell this land to me," said Mr. Collier, "with the idea that I would buy it. When Williams and his followers invaded the island, we put up a fence to protect our property. About twelve squatters were arrested and fined lightly for trespassing after they had cut down timber on our land. We obtained the aid of the sheriff to keep them from our property."

"Williams does not have the backing of the homesteaders on the island,"

My company, the Southern State Land company, bought part of the land from the natives, and they are with us. Most of the land we bought from the Louisville and Nashville railroad, which acquired it from the state of Florida, which in turn had obtained it from the United States government. We have legal deeds for all of our land—about 6,000 acres—which we have owned about three years. We have invested several million dollars there.

"I would like to call attention furthermore, to President Coolidge's order of December, 1924, withdrawing any public lands along the Florida coast. This order makes null an supposed homesteading Williams and his followers have done."

signed by the governor last Saturday. The dance was dancing at Tybee on Sunday and considerable discussion about it took place during the week. Copies of the law were not received in Savannah until Tuesday. Judge Strake, over long distance telephone to the Savannah Press this afternoon explained his action did not affect any court or state official, but was directed against the mayor and police force of Tybee only.

Whether court officials of Chatham county or state officials will interfere if Sunday dancing is attempted at Tybee tomorrow is a matter of conjecture.

Negroes Sell Potent Powders To Cure All Ills

Atlantic City, August 14.—Potent powders, such as "blackcat's ankle dust" and "King Solomon's marrow," the latter a particularly effective charm equalled only by "black cat's wishbone," are being offered to Atlantic City negroes as a cure for all ills and a solution of all problems. Even such substantial problems as jail bars and stone walls are said by the negroes to be satisfactorily solved by a powder described as "High John, the Conqueror."

Six small negroes were found distributing thousands of pamphlets advertising the voodoo mail order cure-all in the black belt Thursday.

"Spells of all kinds released and broken," promised the circular, "Love problems in all forms. High John, the Conqueror, Adam and Eve, black cat's ankle dust and all kinds of highly appreciated roots and herbs. Cash or credit."

Prices for the dusted witchery ranged from $1 to $1,000. Dr. C. D. Alexander, of New York, was named in the circular.

"Among the powders offered for sale were:

"Gofer dust (new moon) No. 1, $50; happy dust, $40; black cat's ankle dust, $500; black cat's wishbone, $1,000; King Solomon's marrow, $1,000; easy life powder, $100; tying down goods, $50; chasing away goods, $50; boss fix powders, $15; buzzard nest, $100."

"Tying down goods" is the name of a powder credited with the power of simulating a loved one's interest, a "bringback powder" is used to bring resident of the negro district explained, "a wandering wife or husband back home. 'Chasing away goods' is a powder designed to discourage an unwanted lover. 'Boss fix powders' are effective on employers when other arguments for a raise, vacation or a better job are ignored."

Rich Employees Enjoy Outing at Dixie Lake

Fifteen big trucks and 75 passenger automobiles were required Saturday to transport several hundred employees of M. Rich & Brothers company to Dixie Lakes for an all-day outing. Cars left early Saturday morning and while groups returned to the city late in the afternoon, many more remained over until the cooler hours of night to make the return trip. Employees were guests of Rich company officials. At Dixie Lakes swimming, boating, bathing, picnic lunch in abundance and other outdoor features were indulged in by my employees with all the zest of smaller boys and girls. JUDGE COMMUTES PRISON SENTENCE IN LIQUOR CASE

Savannah, Ga., August 15.—The sentence of one year and a day in the penitentiary imposed upon J. B. Bailey, 74, in the federal court upon conviction of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law, has been probated by Judge Barrett upon payment of a $10,000 fine by the defendant. L. K. Meldrum, chief deputy under Sheriff Dixon, has consented to act as probation officer, Mr. Bailey's term of probation being four years.

Bailey was convicted in December, 1923, at the time of the great liquor round up when members of the so-called "big four" were sentenced for conspiracy. He was the only one of the defendants to appeal his case, and the appeal is now pending in the supreme court of the United States. The appeal will be dismissed.

Car Used as Truck Temporarily Needs No Truck License

Waycross, Ga., August 15.—(Special.)—Due to several of the tobacco growers having been arrested recently for using their passenger cars as trucks without a truck license, the chamber of commerce of Waycross wired the secretary of state, S. G. McLendon for an official ruling. Mr. McLendon stated that where a passenger car was used only temporarily as a truck, later being reconverted into a passenger car, it need not be considered as a truck and the passenger car license would be sufficient.

The test is whether the car is used more as a truck than a passenger car. It is now expected that those who were fined after making an affidavit as to the facts and mailing this in to the office of the secretary of state will have the fine refunded.

PULASKI COUNTY LAND BOUGHT BY TOURISTS

Hawkinsville, Ga., August 15.—(Special.)—As a result of the campaign to flag tourists passing through Pulaski county to and from Florida, T. B. Ragan, a leading realtor, has recently sold three tracts to purchasers scattered over a wide area of the county. One was a tract in the Blue Spring district to a purchaser from Boston and St. Petersburg, Fla. Another was to a party from Lake Wales, Fla., while the third deal, closed up yesterday, was to a party from Indiana.

Each buyer paid cash for their purchases. The sale yesterday was a farm on the old Dixie highway, and the owner plans to move to it within the next ten days.

A soil survey made of Pulaski county some years ago revealed quite a diversity of types, and it is not difficult for a purchaser to get just the land he wants to grow his chosen crop. Tobacco growing this season has proved most successful, and the North Carolina expert here is so delighted that he plans to move his family down another season.

The county commissioners have issued a neat folder, setting forth the "possibilities in Pulaski," and it is helping to turn the trick.

About 25 families from the middle-west, who are interested in Pulaski county tobacco and cotton lands, are expected at an early date to look over the various offers here with a view of buying and locating here.

Several thousand acres will be planted in tobacco next year in this vicinity.

Unification To Figure In Delegate Elections

Will our position on the question of unification determine our vote for general conference delegates? Or, in other words, will we seek to elect representative men, as we have hitherto done, or will we seek to elect men holding our views on the question of unification? Some of the friends of unification have expressed their fear that those opposing the plan of unification will seek to elect men holding their views rather than representative men and we have been told that some of them are advocating that very thing.

None can deny that those opposing the plan of unification are acting within their rights, believing, as they say, that the plan is impracticable, ambiguous, and fails to provide for the solution of the problems it deals with. But how any one can justify himself, when he votes for general conference delegates, solely on the ground that they hold his views on the question of unification, is more than this writer can understand. It is generally conceded that the plan will be defeated—the elections of lay delegates to the annual conference seem to indicate it—and certainly its fate will be known before many of the annual conferences convene—then let that issue influence us in our choice of delegates to the general conference is to be guided by prejudice, to invite unfavorable criticism, and to strike a blow at the foundations of the church; for whenever any representative government, civil, ecclesiastical, or other, degenerates to the extent that the election of representatives is determined by favoritism or prejudice, its days are few and evil.

The vast majority of those opposing the plan of unification, the writer among them, have openly declared that they were in favor of unification on a proper basis. But if we seek to elect only men holding our views, and not our very best men, in plain Eng-emblazon upon the sky an intimation that a certain collection of tinware would glide over lumpy roads like gossamer riding a zephyr.

MAN WHO LIGHTED BROADWAY IS DEAD

Advised Pyle's hearing, those who augmented their first lessons in reading by studying out the earliest editions of the American bill-board may recall signs along the car lines advertising Pyle's Pearline, which was, according to these announcements, a soap of very superior talents. In making Pyle's Pearline memorable to the populace of that era, Gude earned enough money to build the first big electric sign on Broadway, a rather crude display, which sprang against the night on the roof of the old Twenty-Third street building, which stood where the Flatiron building is now.

It said: "Manhattan Beach swept by ocean breezes." Thomas Edison's incandescent lamp, the burning half-pipe in a bottle, as the current nifty described it, was still an experiment at the time and Gude, of course, had trouble keeping his sign alight.

There were only about 200 bulbs in it.

Million Signs on Broadway. Arthur Williams, a vice president of the New York Edison company, says that now there are more than a million lamps in the signs on Broadway alone and hundreds of thousands on streets to the east and west.

Gude was the first one to realize that a low roof, giving light on Broadway, was worth money. So he went along the street buying up the skyline or leasing it for long periods. The east side of Broadway is the shabby side and the crowds have always gravitated to the opposite walk. Gude noticed that. It occurred to him that the east side, therefore, was the place for signs. Not content with leasing the roofs, he even leased all floors above the first in several old buildings and plastered their facades with electric fireworks. The fire department discovered that it was a violation of the code to block the windows with signs, so Gude paid off the tenants, vacated the buildings and used them above the ground floor solely as props on which to hang his ads. The signs gave much more return than the tenants had been paying as rent.

Wrigley Ad His Masterpiece. Gude's masterpiece, of course, was the Wrigley chewing gum ad on the Putnam building, the famous sign with dancing spear-headed men. This one cost Wrigley $30,000 a year. It

Philobosian Presents Large New Rug Stock

Photograph shows part of the huge new stock of rugs and draperies on display by Stephen Philobosian, Inc.

In order to properly display the huge stock of new merchandise, Stephen Philobosian, Inc., dealer in Oriental and domestic rugs and draperies, has leased an adjoining store on Peachtree street, which practically doubles the former floor space of this concern.

For the last week all employees of the store have been working day and night getting this merchandise effectively displayed and in readiness for the value demonstration campaign which will be begun next Tuesday.

Mr. Philobosian, in company with one of his buyers, spent several weeks in the eastern markets recently, getting together this extraordinary collection of fine rugs and draperies, which now on display at his store, which offers a rare opportunity for prospective buyers of home furnishings to make selections.

Stephen Philobosian, Inc., is practically the exclusive Oriental rug and drapery store in the entire south.

was replaced two years ago by an ad for Cluett ginger ale. A few years ago Gude had a fight with the Thomas Cusack company over a sign site on upper Broadway. Gude built a very expensive sign and, to beautify the spot, his artists devised an artificial garden along the lower board.

A few days after it was completed, Cusack's men put up another sign about two feet in front of it, completely blanketing Gude's, Cusack had discovered that the site in front of Gude's belonged to another owner.

Mysterious Fires Occur. Gude, undiscovered, discovered that a third owner held title to the property just in front of Cusack's. He promptly moved his sign forward to the border of the property. Then mysterious fires began to break out in the small hours of the morning. First Gude's sign would catch fire and then Cusack's. The competition was becoming very unmanly. Something had to be done.

Something was done. Each firm decided that so resourceful a fighter as the other must make a very valuable partner. So they consolidated.

El-Krim's Riffian regulars and the native tribesmen who have been assisting him against the French are marvellously mobile. They can slip into the very center of the French area in small groups virtually without the knowledge of the French troops.

Riff Positions Bombarded. French planes vigorously bombarded Riffian positions along the Loukhos river north of Quezzan today in an effort to send the garrison northward toward the Riff, in which direction other Riffian regulars have retreated.

While the bombardment was in progress the Fraonra tribe, southeast of Quezzan, joined forces with the French troops.

The results of the four-month campaign along the Quereza are highly satisfactory. It is now clearly evident that practically the entire French zone has been cleared of unfriendly tribesmen, who fled northward with the retreating Riffian regulars. In the extreme west, along the Loukhos the French and Spanish are clearing the borders of the enemy.

COMPLETE VICTORY SEEN BY PARIS GOVERNMENT

Paris, August 15.—Complete victory over Abd-el-Krim in Morocco is expected by the government to result from military and political strategy which now is being rapidly executed.

The French military chiefs in Morocco are carrying out a program of reorganization of the battle front in order to establish it about where it was when the Franco-Riffian war began. This is to be effected in two ways: first, by rigorous policing of the French zone clear of the area of unfriendly tribes, which virtually is accomplished; and, second, to push French troops forward to strategic points, which would reestablish the border about the Riff.

When the success of this strategy is assured, France will send an ultimatum to Krim, and if Krim when chooses peace, France will be in a position to insist upon negotiations on a basis suitable to her.

ANDERSON IS HUNTED THROUGHOUT INDIANA

out by authorities, although there were innumerable rumors, one of them being that Anderson had gone directly to Indianapolis. Riff had been received here that the police, led by Jerry Kinney, inspector of detectives, are ransacking that city.

Muncie All Stirred Up. Meanwhile, this little Indiana town is stunned with excitement over the news that the long arm of the underworld has reached out to strike one of its citizens. Authorities give credence to the story that Chapman, from his prison cell, directed the murder of Hance.

Hance and his wife were returning to their farm from Muncie late Friday, when an automobile drove up beside them. The occupants began firing. Hance, struck by a bullet, was unable to control his car and it swerved, crashing in a ditch. He jumped out, firing at his assailants, and ran in the direction of a cornfield, but fell before reaching it. Mrs. Hance was struck by a stray bullet and died instantly.

There were witnesses. Automobiles from a distance saw the battle and identified the automobile. Before Hance died a few hours later, he told authorities that "Dutch" Anderson got me.

Chapman considered Hance one friend whom he could trust, and it of the gang. When Webster and his man invaded the house a few minutes later, they found the rooms filled with gunpowder smoke and stubs of cigarettes still burning.

Webster, through his "under cover" man, learned that Anderson and his accomplices were preparing to rob an Indiana bank on July 4. A trap was laid to catch the gang, but they failed to appear. The detective reported they became alarmed on the eve of the robbery and hurriedly left for Detroit.

It is Webster's belief that the gangsters learned the operative's identity the night before the bank robbery and hurried to Detroit, where they killed him. Webster declined to reveal the name of the missing man.

CHAPMAN NOT INFORMED OF MURDER OF HANCE

Hartford, Conn., August 15.—(AP)—So far as prison officials know, Gerald Chapman has not been informed of the reprisal that resulted in the death of Ben Hance and his wife.

Warden H. K. W. Scott said that the bandit had no visitors during the morning. His attorneys may call upon him at any time, but none of them this morning indicated any intention of visiting Chapman because of the shooting in Indiana.

The news of the double murder will have no effect so far as the guarding of Chapman is concerned, the warden said, as prison officials believe that the regular guard is so strong as to prevent any attempt from the outside to liberate the prisoner.

Chapman is under sentence to hang December 3. His appeal to the supreme court for a new trial will be heard early in October.

ANDERSON ALMOST CAUGHT LAST WEEK IN TOLEDO

Toledo, August 15.—(AP)—Detective Inspector Hias said today that George "Dutch" Anderson, who yesterday added murder to the long string of crimes of which he is accused, is known to have been in Toledo within the last week. He added that Anderson and a man, who answers the description of "One Arm" Wolfe, believed to have been Anderson's companion in the double murder of Mr. and Mrs. Hance, in Muncie, Ind., spent several days with Albert House, bank robber, who was arrested here Tuesday.

Police had received numerous reports that Anderson was spending some time in Toledo, and knew that he and House were friends and companions. When they raided the Wildwood residence Tuesday, they had expected to catch Anderson as well as House, it was revealed for the first time today. After the raid, it was learned that three men, now believed to have been Anderson, Wolfe and an unidentified man, had driven away.

OHIO BANK ROBBERIES ARE LAID ON ANDERSON

Toledo, Ohio, August 15.—(AP)—The search for George "Dutch" Anderson, member of Gerald Chapman's band, who, with Charles "One-Arm" Wolfe, is accused of shooting Ben Hance and his wife to death in Muncie, Ind., yesterday, extended into Ohio again today.

Police in Dayton and Ohio City, where banks were robbed yesterday, were trying to piece together threads of evidence to substantiate a theory that Anderson and Wolfe were responsible for the robberies.

The supposition is that the two left Toledo in an automobile for Muncie and robbed the banks on their way. At Ohio City, $5,000 was obtained.

In Dayton, one masked, two-gun robber obtained $28,000. The robbery was performed in the fashion in which Anderson is accused of having "pulled" other jobs.

Police know that Anderson was in Toledo this week. They raided an apartment Tuesday in an effort to capture him, but he had vanished. It was learned that three men, thought to have been Anderson, Wolfe and an unidentified man, had driven away 12 hours before the raid. Albert House, alleged bank robber, whose apartment was raided, was arrested.

Secret service agents have been working in Toledo and Detroit for more than a month in an effort to find Anderson.

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work. Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with your bile crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone to night.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it can not salivate or make you sick.—(adv.)

W. C. Rountree, M. D., Texarkana, Texas.

Dear Doctor: I was very nervous, had burning in my stomach all the time, could not eat or sleep, lost weight, skin turned brown, feet burned, mouth sore, swimming in the head, dizzy headaches, shortness of breath, constipation, and general weakness. HIGHWAY REPORT DUE ON TUESDAY

Report of the senate committee which has been investigating the state highway department probably will be drawn up sometime Monday and presented to the senate at next Tuesday's session, according to Chairman J. R. Hutcheson, chairman of the committee.

Over two weeks have been spent with daily public hearings investigating alleged irregularities in the department, adjournment sine die being taken Friday evening. Many witnesses were heard, including Chairman John N. Holder, of the state highway board; W. T. Anderson of Macon, former member of the board who charged irregularities and "temperamental unfitness" to the chairman; Stanley S. Bennett, third member of the board; Chief Engineer W. R. Neel and others.

As the hearings closed Friday Chairman Hutcheson announced that the entire committee wished to publicly go on record as severely criticizing the attitude of H. C. Spauld, former secretary-treasurer of the board; and C. R. Dawson, a private auditor who was employed by Governor Walker to audit the department, for their refusal to appear and testify. The committee could not compel the attendance of witnesses, only being empowered to hear voluntary testimony. At the closing hearing it was brought out by Attorney Sam L. Olive, representing the department, that there is a complete inventory on a card index file in the offices at East Point. Engineer Neel testified as to this though he said he could not testify as to technical bookkeeping matters, not being a bookkeeper, he said.

FULTON'S DELEGATION PRAISED BY OPPONENT

The Fulton county delegation in the house of representatives received a high compliment last week when a member who had led the opposition to a measure introduced and sponsored by the Fulton trio, congratulated the members on their victory over his opposition.

The measure was a resolution providing for purchase of the present governor's residence on The Prado as a permanent gubernatorial mansion. It carried overwhelmingly.

Representative Steed, of Taylor, had introduced and supported a substitute resolution to appoint a commission of investigation to examine all possible mansion sites and report back to the next legislature. This would have all property owned by the state, inasmuch as a similar investigating committee named last year had made a most thorough investigation and recommended the Prado property. The Steed substitute was voted down, after which the Taylor county representative congratulated the Fulton delegation.

"I never saw a county delegation in the Georgia legislature so uniformly successful in passing the measures it wanted," said Mr. Steed.

The Fulton representatives are Miss Bessie Kempton, J. O. Wood and Frank Hooper, Jr.

S. C. Mann, grandson of Major B. F. White, who, with E. J. King, wrote the songs which are sung by the association, was re-elected chairman. Other officers re-elected are: E. T. Stanley and J. P. Marks, vice chairmen; D. F. Hamilton, secretary and treasurer; and Rev. G. M. Roberts, of Buchanan, chaplain.

Recommendations of the resolutions committee that annual meetings be held at Fulton county courthouse, beginning Friday before the third Sunday in August of each year, and that a monument be erected over the grave of Major White were passed unanimously.

Resolution Plans Permanent Homage To State Soldiers

A resolution introduced in the house of representatives Saturday morning by Representative Cliff Hatcher, of Burke, would plan for a permanent memorial of Georgia men killed in action during the world war.

The resolution calls for creation of a joint legislative commission to work out a suitable memorial plan. The commission would be composed of three senators and five representatives, instructed to select a site and suitable memorial. It points out that Georgia's representation in the A. E. F. was proportionately larger than that of any other state and that there is as yet no suitable memorial.

The resolution was introduced at the request of the Gold Star Mothers of the state.

Mother Thinks Missing Woman Visiting Friends

New York, August 15.—(AP)—Search for Mrs. Isabella de Puy Thompson, member of a socially prominent family, who has been missing from her home at Kew Gardens, Long Island, since Sunday morning, was directed today to Maine and Nova Scotia, where her mother thinks, she may have gone to visit friends.

Mrs. Thompson, who is the 22-year-old wife of George Alanson Tracy Thompson, a former instructor at Columbia university, left her home before daylight and no word has since come to relatives from her. She left behind her five-month-old son. Her husband said that she did not have more than $10 when she disappeared. Failure of her husband to return home Saturday night for an elaborate dinner she had prepared may have caused the young woman to decide on leaving. Thompson said she appeared hurt when he took dinner with friends in New York, but that she said nothing to him about it.

GULFPORT GROCER HELD AS KIDNAPER OF YOUNG WOMAN

Gulfport, Miss., August 15.—Louis Mitchell, a groceryman of this city, is held here on a warrant charging him with kidnapping Miss Ruby Holloway, pretty 18-year-old daughter of W. M. Holloway, of Hattiesburg, who disappeared from Gulfport early Sunday morning, August 2.

The warrant for Mitchell's arrest was issued by Mayor J. W. Milner on information furnished by Jack Bourdine, a driver for a taxicab company, who stated that he was employed by Mitchell to take Miss Holloway from Gulfport to Biloxi in his car at 6 o'clock on the morning of August 2. Bourdine said he carried Miss Holloway to the Louisville and Nashville passenger station at Biloxi, where he left her, according to instructions. Police believe that she boarded a train and went to Mobile.

Mitchell denied his guilt and insisted that he knew nothing about the whereabouts of Miss Holloway.

Mitchell is about 35 years old and married. Miss Holloway was employed by him for three years and four months and boarded with him.

Miss Holloway disappeared August 2, after she had written her parents at Hattiesburg that she was going home on a vacation.

There is practically no power being produced there, he said, Macdon's supply coming from steam plants in the Birmingham district, while points north of Barnesville are being supplied by steam plants in the Muscle Shoals district.

There has been no curtailment of power here yet.

OFFICER IS THROWN FROM MOTORCYCLE GOING 88 MILES HOUR

Tampa, Fla., August 15.—(AP)—D. C. Keen, motorcycle traffic officer, is lingering between life and death in a hospital at Plant City today as the result of injuries sustained when he was thrown from his motorcycle while traveling at a rate estimated at 88 miles an hour.

Keen was after a speeder, it was said, when a tire blew out on a curve. The motorcycle struck a small coupe and he was thrown over the car and 40 feet through the air. The motorcycle was found 50 yards from the scene of the accident, half buried in the sand.

Mother and Son Beaten to Death; Husband Suspected

Camden, N. J., August 15.—(AP)—Mrs. Catherine Audia and her 4-year-old son, John, were beaten to death with a wooden mallet today in the cellar of their home. Mrs. Audia was dead when found by her cousin, Joseph Gentile, and the boy died shortly afterwards.

Police are looking for Joseph Audia, her husband, and a son, Frank Audia, 20. Both had been employed in Philadelphia, but the father was said to have quit his job today.

Gentile, a night worker, told the police that Mrs. Audia had prepared his breakfast about 6 a. m. and that he retired shortly afterwards. He discovered the crime when he arose shortly before noon. He declared that he had heard no commotion in the house and neighbors also declared that they had heard no unusual noises.

Circular Bares Secret Pact Between President Calles And Mexican Labor Forces

Dismissal of National Army and Substitution of Labor Military Force Is Chief Article.

New Orleans, August 15.—(AP)—Copies of circular number 699 of the central committee of the Mexican Federation of Labor, containing a purported agreement between P. Elias Calles, president of Mexico, and Luis N. Morones, secretary of commerce, signed November 29, 1924, on the eve of the Mexican president's inauguration into office, was made public here today by Gustavo Arce, former member of the Mexican congress, and Adolfo E. Hegewisch. Both are political exiles and were leaders in the late revolution. At the time of the agreement, Morones was a labor leader.

Publication of circular number 699, Senior Arce said, was in answer to a Washington dispatch recently, in which the Mexican embassy categorically denied the existence of such a contract.

Text of Agreement.

After a short introductory note the covenant, headed "Agreement entered into between the representative of the central committee of the Mexican Federation of Labor, Luis N. Morones, and General P. Elias Calles, for the ratification of the Mexican executive obligates himself to carry out the following engagements: "To respect in every way the movement of the labor organizations affiliated with the M. F. of L., to give facility and stand necessary expenses in the organization of federation; to slowly dismiss the national army a year after taking over the presidency and substitute same with battalions of union workers; to accept the general staff appointed by the M. F. of L., which will undertake new organization of the proletarian army . . . ; to use his influence with governors of states for good understanding with M. F. of L.; and to appoint M. Luis N. Morones, secretary of industry, commerce and labor, in order that he may organize the labor force under the program of the M. F. of L."

Federation's Obligations.
The federation, according to the circular, undertakes to comply with the following agreements: "To inform the federal government of any movement that unions may contemplate against capitalistic organizations; to inform the federal government in order to substitute the so-called national army; to appoint 20 persons to form a general staff of the new proletarian army; and to support with labor movements the policy and laws given by his government, especially so when they may tend to the payments to the federation or to the states."

The document, signed by Ricardo Trevino, general secretary, and Fernando Rodarte, secretary of the executive, in an audacious notation of appreciation of the "good intentions of our brother, Calles, in dismissing the great shame of our region—the thousand times traitorous federal army."

ACTION BY CALLES CLARIFIES SITUATION.

Mexico City, August 15.—(AP)—President Calles' recent declaration that the Mexican government would not tolerate a continuance of the present anarchistic practices in the application of the agrarian laws, the complete change of front on the part of the regional confederation of labor in its demands on capital, and the failure of the threatened general strike of radical labor organizations has clarified the situation in agrarian and industrial circles.

Following Calles' declaration, Secretary of Development Luis Leon issued a warning to the employees of the national agrarian commission, offering the full support of the government so long as the commission follows the government's instructions, out threatening energetic measures to deal with any employee who deviated from a marked line of conduct. Thus

It is hoped that the government's policy will be kept strictly within the letter of the law, barring the influence of politics, agitation and anarchism in the work of dividing up the land. At the same time, all landowners will be obliged strictly to uphold the rights of one another.

Strike Is Short Lived.
The threatened general strike by the communistic general confederation of workers, which began to take shape last Thursday when the workers of the Ericson Telephone company abandoned work, was short lived. An agreement was reached between the federal district government and the radicals who called off the strike. Sixteen goods factories were affected. Simultaneously, it was announced that the general confederation had called off the strike against the Huasteca Oil company in the Tampico oil field. Six thousand strikers there returned to work.

NORTHWEST KANSAS HIT BY TORNADO; DAMAGE IS HEAVY

McCook, Neb., August 15.—Sweeping over a 10-mile stretch, a tornado and near-cloudburst late Saturday destroyed thousands of dollars worth of property in northwestern Kansas.

It is estimated that between four and six inches of rain fell during the high wind at Hoxie and Seguin, flooding buildings and washing out 10 miles of track on the Union Pacific railroad. The damage at Seguin has been estimated at $40,000. A grain elevator and Catholic church were heavily damaged by the wind and rain. No detailed information from the stricken district has yet been obtained. It is reported that several persons were injured, but this has not been confirmed.

CHILE AND PERU ENVOYS EXCHANGE BITING SARCASM

Washington, August 15.—(AP)—While General Pershing is in South America trying to straighten out the tangled Tacna-Arica situation, the Peruvian and Chilean ambassadors here have engaged in some biting comment. Today the Chilean ambassador asserted in a letter to the Washington Post that the Chilean foreign minister considered the president of Peru had publicly expressed sentiments offensive to that country which would not go unanswered under different circumstances. In view of the fact that an arbitrator was at work, however, the Chileans had decided to exercise "repression."

On the other hand, the Peruvian ambassador has charged the refusal by police to allow the landing at Arica of Colonel Ordoñez, Peruvian boundary commissioner, was one of a series of "outrages."

This incident, apparently settled now, was characterized by the Chilean embassy as due to a misunderstanding by an under official of police.

From The Autobiography Of A Darned Big Fool

A FEW REMINISCENCES BY A MAN WHO HAS LIVED A LONG TIME
A Charter Member of the I. K. E. (I Know Everything) Club

When I Made My First Appearance—

I came into this world as a little barefoot boy, just as most other little boys come in—barefoot. The event didn't seem to cause any unusual excitement, according to all available records. From the best information obtainable it seems that my most noticeable trait was a desire to fill up my "tummy" and my entire time seems to have been taken up in trying to make a big bunch of grown-ups who had gathered around understand a continuous line of squalls and screams, which in just plain, every-day English would be interpreted as meaning "When Do We Eat?"

—and this wasn't such a foolish thing to do.

I Grow Up In The Usual Way—

As time went on I began to show signs of being a human being in the process, and really had a slight resemblance to one. So they decided they'd keep me and bought me some rigging that looked more like breeches and jackets than a towel folded corner-wise. I put these alleged boy clothes on, big pearl buttons, ruffles 'n' everything and sallies forth to try and make the grade and fulfill the prediction of one of the best women on earth, that I was a future president, and by such achievement not only please her but prove to some scoffing neighbors (and kinfolks) that I was "the stuff."

—pretty good start for a youngster, regardless.

I Begin To Reach Manhood's Estate—

After making a few grades in the home-town school, goodness-only-knows how, and feeling that I was the master of the printed word, particularly the kind that begins by asking "Do You See The Cat?" and then C-A-T, I began to feel my oats. Finally reached the stage of red neckties, Duke Cigarettes and that never-fading sign among the young males of the species—washing the neck and ears without being forced to do so. In other words, I had about "arrived" and had almost reached the stage where I could hire a horse and buggy and take "HEE!" to ride.

—not so bad either, but nothing particularly foolish.

The Home Town Gets Too Small—

Just as I was emerging from that stage of life which is commonly called adolescence I decided that I was entirely too good and too fast for the old town. I would resign from the mandolin club, help train another man to take my place in the Methodist Church Steps Quartette and give him personal instructions as to how to manage to save some of the money. I would take my departure with me and fare forth to the Golden West where men were men even if the plumbing was rotten. I would be a man among men; I'd carry two guns and drink liquor straight.

—and here's where I commenced being a real darned fool.

I Finally Land In Old Mobile—

In Mobile I landed me a job, just like thousands of others have done before. I was fightin' a Billing Desk for the Mobile & Ohio at $50.00 per (month) and only working from 7 a. m. until 6 p. m., balance of the time I could loaf around. Learned to dance forthwith, my fine tenor voice was soon recognized and I was a prime favorite around the Old Battle House (and other saloons). I had "arrived" at last. I managed to save some of the money and in due time (here came along a real estate man trying to sell me a building lot in Gulfport, Miss., for $400.00, but I was too wise to buy it. The Post Office now stands on that lot.

—and this was, my first real fool move—Solid Ivory dome

After A While I'm In Kansas City—

Had a real good job then, $75.00 per (month again) and I had a girl and she had friends and had friends and so on et cetera, and so forth, and had a good time, but still managed to save a little money. One day we went on a picnic "Way Out Troost Avenue" (about 26th Street), and out there was a typical real estate sub-division except that it was failing to sub-divide, and a hungry-looking real estate man tried to sell me lots at around $300.00, but NOT FOR ME, I was too wise to let any "slicker" get my money that way. Have recently understood that Kansas City's automobile row is around 26th and Troost Avenue.

—raw material for the fool killer; evolutionary stage.

On A Land Rush Down In Oklahoma—

Back in "them days" there was government land being opened up to settlers in Oklahoma. The plan was for an immense gathering on a line, horseback, buggies, buckboards—every mode of transportation except a go-cart. At the crack of a gun the gang all went and squatted on their choice 160 acres to have and to hold. I was there, a straddle of one of the fastest little pintos that ever pitched a puncher, but when the gun cracked I says to myself, says I, "Hell—what's the use, who wants that old prairie?" In that decision of a moment I threw away a fortune. That land has been producing oil almost ever since.

—and the idiot-annihilator missed another good chance.

As It Happened Up In Norfolk—

In 1902 I am in Norfolk-Portsmouth on the Seaboard. Had a good job and had saved some more money. Here comes another real estate "shark" trying to sell me some lots on Piney Beach car line at around $300.00, but "No, I'm too wise for that trick." "Just old broom-sage and battlefields." BUT, in 1905-6-7 there was a big exposition there and the property developed. Later the war came on and today what was a poor, winding country road is a 100-foot cement boulevard and no property for sale. Looks like Peachtree Road or Druid Hills of Atlanta.

—$3,000 invested here would have made me a millionaire.

And Right Here In Old Atlanta—

By this time I had gotten to be a traveling salesman, coming up all the time. Got ambitious. This was in 1906-7. A fellow offered me a two-story frame house on North Avenue for $1,500.00, $300.00 down and $20.00 per month. Couldn't trick me, I was too smart for that. Now, I have it on very good authority that the lot alone on which that house stood is actually worth more than $75,000.00 and steadily increasing in value. I can't claim much for foresight but do claim the world's championship for absolutely perfect hind-sight.

—Oh, what a wondrous thing it is to just know everything.

Conclusion:

A small investment and from ten to twenty years in either of the above cases would have made me independent, whereas I am now far from it, but under the law of averages and the insurance company's table of expectancy I have yet before me twenty to twenty-five years of time on this mundane sphere and am preparing for that day when my ability to produce will have ended. I am taking advantage of just such opportunities as outlined above and calling it my "Old-Age Insurance." The best of these opportunities, to my mind, for the person of limited means is in Jacksonville Heights tracts, 10 acres for $750.00, practically right in the suburbs of Jacksonville. I will not permit another occasion like Troost Avenue, Gulfport, Pine Beach and North Avenue to haunt me as I go down the long lane which we must all travel, viz: decrepit old age. I will invest in real estate in a growing section.

22,000 are Nokols

Nokol installed in a typical home heating plant.

22,000 are Nokols

Of 75,000 automatic oil burners installed in the United States, by 347 manufacturers, 22,000 are Nokols.

The leadership of Nokol, established 7 years ago, when the first automatic oil heater for homes—a Nokol—was installed, has never been challenged.

Nokol leadership has been maintained through its performance in the home, in the hands of its users. It has been maintained by constant refinements in the Nokol mechanism.

Today Nokol gives guarantees of economy and efficiency approached by no other home heating device. It uses a higher grade of fuel than most oil burners would dare use. If they did use it their fuel cost would be prohibitive.

The fuel cost of Nokol is less than that of hard coal. It is also to the best of our knowledge, less than that of any other oil burner, regardless of the grade of fuel used.

More Nokols are being sold this year than ever before. Make sure of having yours by fall by getting in touch with us today. Phone, call or send the coupon.

DECATUR TRADE BODY PLANS ACTIVE PROGRAM

Decatur, Ga., August 15.—(Special.)—When President J. Howell Green opens the regular monthly meeting of the Decatur Chamber of Commerce, next Tuesday, membership director, Charles D. McKinney, is expected to announce a nearly five-fold increase in membership, as the result of a drive made for members during the past several weeks. Mr. McKinney will announce a new campaign, with team workers from the first campaign enrolled for continuous work until the chamber numbers 800 members and has a budget of $12,000.

Tuesday night's meeting will perhaps be the most important in the chamber's history, as it will authorize important changes in the constitution and by-laws of the chamber to provide opportunity for county-wide activities in many lines not heretofore attempted. A change of name from Decatur Chamber of Commerce to Decatur-DeKalb Chamber of Commerce is planned. Addition of vice presidents from various sections of the county also is planned.

The chamber contemplates the creation of several committees to direct the objectives of advertising, agriculture, business improvement, civic and patriotic matters.

An early activity which the advertising committee contemplates is the preparation and publication of a beautiful booklet on Decatur and DeKalb county, for general distribution, and to back up an aggressive advertising campaign to properly present the advantages of Decatur and DeKalb county to having superior home towns and fertile farming sections.

In addition to a policy of consistent cooperation with County Agent E. P. McGee, and approval of the appointment of a home demonstration agent, to help him in contact with farm women and girls, the chamber's committee has as its greatest objective, the improvement of the morale among the farmers, through provisions of better marketing facilities. This committee hopes to settle a former upon every vacant farm in DeKalb county.

Other committees will be appointed for specific duties it is announced, especially in the important matter of roads, not only to Stone Mountain, but throughout the county in linking up DeKalb's roads with main highways through other counties.

Officers of the Decatur Chamber of Commerce are: J. Howell Green, president; B. Boyd Sutton, vice president; Robert C. Tug-of-War for Brunswick Stew Enlivens Barbecue

BY BILL MAHONEY.

Atlanta's approaching the Burns club, on Confederate avenue, about lunch time Saturday found occasion to moonlight in a plentifully-lit tub of lemons.

The Master Printers' club was enjoying a barbecue.

The first thing on the program was food and the last thing on the program was more food. There was plenty and to spare—barbecued lamb and barbecued pork, beer (of the less-than-one-half-of-one-percent variety), Brunswick stew and all the trimmings.

Tom J. Lyon, as the committee of one on entertainment, was held responsible for the success of the outing.

Considerable excitement was caused when a series of resounding clinks—often heard in the death rattle of galloping dominos—suggested dark doings in the vicinity of the barbecue shed.

The innocent cause of the disturbance was an inoffensive negro who was stirring lazily in a plentifully-lit tub of lemons.

Despite an abundant supply of the numerous dainties, a tug-of-war, with a large pan of Brunswick stew for a prize, might have ended disastrously but for the timely interference of W.

R. Beane. Participants in the dispute included Mr. Lyon, Mr. Johnson, W. O. Foote and R. A. Magill.

There were about 125 members and guests of the club present at the festivities—not to speak of three members of the staff of The Constitution.

Everybody had a good time and several announced their intention of liberating for the winter on the strength of huge quantities of food.

KIDNAPING REPORT PROBED BY POLICE

Atlanta police were asked late Saturday night to assist in the search for Georgia Carson, manager of the Rogers Grocery company branch on East Lake drive, who is said to have been abducted from his store by two bandits earlier in the night. Mr. Carson lives on Pulliam street, it was stated.

The entire story of the kidnapping hinged on the statement of a negro porter employed at the brick store, and no verification had been obtained at an early hour this morning. Decatur police stated that they had obtained the porter's version of the affair, but could find nothing further. DeKalb county officers knew nothing of the occurrence.

Mr. Carson was not recently given management of the East Lake branch. W. R. Storey, manager of the Rogers store at Whiteford avenue and McLenore street, a former employer of Carson, was the first to advise Atlanta police of the rumored abduction and to appeal for assistance in the search for the missing man.

Police have not been able to learn whether the store was robbed.

WHITEMAN RECORDS FEATURE VICTOR'S LATE RELEASES

The fox trot is now undergoing its annual midsummer transformation into a new dance, and Paul Whiteman and his orchestra are on hand with six numbers to help things along, and on these records they produce effects new even to the Whiteman organization, "Indian Dawn" is softly baroque, with some great trumpet work, and on the reverse is "Ogo Pogo," which is from a nonsense song and has a vocal refrain.

There is also some daring orchestration in "Footloose," a slow baroque dance in Afro-mexican blue, and in "Sing Lo," a rather delicate, fantastic dance in Chinese style with some interesting new effects by the brasses, flute strings and cymbals.

The remaining two Whiteman numbers are "Sonny," a Yiddish number with an opening "Mazeltov" and a vocal refrain, and "Got No Time," These artists—Billy Jones and Ernest Hare—who are also great radio favorites, present in permanent form on a new Victor record some of their nonsense songs, with contrabass, gags and jokes to the music of the piano, "I Miss My Swiss," from Balieff's Chauve Souris is naturally embellished with some yodel effects, and on the other side is "As a Porcupine Pines for Its Pork."

Enlargement of the store and its remodeling was brought about through expansion of business of the company and furnishes abundant proof of the steady growth in business in this section. Mason Brothers' business has kept pace with the great forward strides of business in the southeast and in preparing to handle more easily its present business has equipped itself to care for the increase which its officials, with their faith firmly rooted in Atlanta, believe is inevitable.

C. H. Mason, of the big furniture concern, is enthusiastic over conditions prevailing in business circles in the southeast and is as enthusiastic over prospects for Atlanta and vicinity proper. "It's stable, sound prosperity here," he said Saturday.

Not only has the remodeling added to the beauty and comforts of the old building, but the taking over of the big store building doubles the store frontage and changes the address from No. 6 West Mitchell street to Nos. 6 and 8 West Mitchell. The change has added much to the general business appearance of the street.

Did You Know These Things About Oil Heating?

There are only four oil burners out of the 1700 on the market that you can possibly be considering. These four all sell for about the same price. If there is any doubt in your mind which to choose, read the facts below.

The more capital a manufacturer has, the better able he is to build in volume and to give you the benefit of his savings in better quality or lower price. OIL-O-MATIC is made by a million-dollar oil burner institution—by many times the largest in the world.

Highly successful products are made by successful concerns.

The OIL-O-MATIC factory, the largest in the industry, is a monument to the uninterrupted success of OIL-O-MATIC for nearly 7 years.

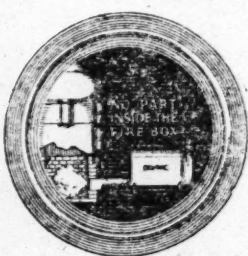

The fact that OIL-O-MATIC is operating successfully in more homes than any other oil burner is merely an indication of its merit.

But when OIL-O-MATIC dealers place orders for more burners in 65 minutes than any other concern sold all last year, there is little room for doubt about the kind of service OIL-O-MATIC gives.

"The house heating fuel of the future," say the Empire Refineries, "is going to be the heavier grades of fuel oil." It contains more heat units per gallon and costs on an average 1-3 less than kerosene or distillate.

The Underwriters' Laboratories, after exhaustive tests, proved that OIL-O-MATIC could use fuel oil as low as 28 degrees equally as well as any of the lighter grades. Thousands of OIL-O-MATIC owners are using fuel oil and saving as high as 25% over burners restricted to more expensive oils.

Right now is the time to decide. We are working at top speed to complete all installations in time for cold weather. Every day you delay makes it that much harder to get your burner installed in time. See a demonstration today. Take a year to pay, beginning October first, if you wish.

Special Bills Clog Assembly Calendar As End Approaches

INCOME TAX MOVE CENTER OF FIGHT

Opposition Looms in Senate to Classification Tax as Sales Tax Leaders Mobilize Strength.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

The final week of the 1925 legislature will open Monday with a jam of special bills awaiting house action and with the general appropriations bill, tax reform bills and other vital measures not yet out of the senate.

General tax act amendments which were debated Friday and then committed to the house ways and means committee again will come up Monday afternoon and on Monday night supporters of the income tax proposal will hold a meeting to decide whether or not they have sufficient strength to bring the income tax bill up for reconsideration. The measure was defeated earlier, largely because of a split in the ranks of its supporters over an amendment, placed on the bill by Representative Bussey, of Crisp, providing for abolition of the state ad valorem tax in event the income tax was ratified by the people.

The senate already has amended the appropriation bill from the form in which it passed the house, reducing the governor's contingent fund from $30,000 to $25,000 and other amendments have been recommended by the senate committee. This will, therefore, compel renewed consideration by the house before the two branches of the assembly convene.

Lindsay Bill Loses.

The house Saturday morning failed to vote a constitutional majority on a bill by Representative Lindsay, of DeKalb, providing that evidence secured by illegal search or seizure should not be admissible. The measure was intended to reassert the constitutional provision protecting the property and person of the citizen from search or seizure without a warrant and was intended to put to rest alleged outrages on the highways of the state perpetrated by officers seeking whisky carriers, who stop all automobiles and cause humiliation, danger and indignity to peaceable citizens.

The measure secured 94 favorable votes to 54 against it, falling 10 votes short of the requisite 104 votes for passage. Representative Lindsay gave notice that at the proper time he would move reconsideration.

Representative W. R. Jones, of Meriwether, chairman of the committee on constitutional amendments, has called a meeting for Monday night of supporters of the bill to discuss the measure.

This is one of the bills advocated for passage by Governor Clifford Walker, in his program of tax reform. When it came before the house early last week, it failed to secure the requisite two-thirds vote, or 138 votes, for passage of a constitutional amendment.

IMPORTANT BILLS FACING SENATORS DURING LAST WEEK

Wrangle Halted by Adjournment When Fight Develops on Governor's Contingent Fund.

BY BEN COOPER.

With a calendar that grows as adjournment draws near, the Georgia senate will enter the home stretch Monday morning determined to do or die during the six more days remaining for transaction of business before adjourning sine die.

Further consideration of the important appropriations bill will be resumed at 10 o'clock Monday morning and will continue until the measure is definitely disposed of and sent to the house for concurrence in amendments. After that, the battle on a number of important pending pieces of legislation will begin again, with house bills given preference Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The impending fight on the classification tax bill passed by the house is expected to break as soon as the money bill is out of the way. The constitutional amendments committee will hold a public hearing on the bill Monday afternoon or night and if the bill is not killed in committee it will be thrown upon the floor of the senate probably Wednesday.

Opposition Expected.

That there will be considerable opposition to the classification tax bill seems certain. Senator J. C. Collier and others who favor a sales tax are expected to oppose the classification tax bill, and it is understood there are a number of senators who are opposed to the classification tax bill on general principles.

Weeding out of the general appropriations measure began Saturday morning and had proceeded no further than the first three items when a fight developed over the governor's contingent fund. The senate adjourned at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon during consideration of the school of agriculture item and will take up the bill again Monday.

Another important matter pending for consideration early next week, as soon as the money bill is out of the way, is the conclusion of senate consideration of the children's code commission bills. Blocked by a filibuster by Senator G. Y. Harrell, 12th, on Friday afternoon, when he spoke for over an hour on a motion to indefinitely postpone the juvenile court bill; the measures were left on the calendar as unfinished business but did not come up Saturday as the money bill had the right of way under the rules committee.

The senate decided to take up the appropriations bill item by item, and on the fourth item became involved in a scrap. The items covering the salary

COOLIDGE SEES OPPORTUNITY IN DEBT PARLEY

Hopes To Achieve First Definite Success in Foreign Field Upon Which To Build Next 2 Years.

MELLON AND SMOOT GO TO PLYMOUTH

Members of Commission Optimistic Over Prospects for Mutual Settlement of All Points.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, August 15.—Behind all this stir over the Belgian debt to the United States, which is really less than one twenty-second of the war debt due Uncle Sam, is an earnest desire on the part of the administration to achieve its first definite success in the foreign field upon which to build in the next two years.

As yet, the Coolidge administration is devoid of any outstanding foreign accomplishment, though there are several in the planning, and this country has received credit for "unofficial" aid by some of its leading foreign representatives and private citizens, including the Daves plan. That, however, and the others, are not official acts, in the strict sense. The British debt settlement was during the Harding administration.

The Belgian debt, by its very nature, offers a splendid opportunity, and the first one. So Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, the financial mentor of the administration, and Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, the administration's financial spokesman in congress, are going to Plymouth, Vt., to talk over with the president, in the quiet of the hills, the whole situation. They go with full knowledge of just what Belgium wants, following the series of conferences here in the last few days.

Mellon announced after the meeting with the Belgian commission that he and Smoot would confer with Coolidge and that further negotiations would be postponed until Tuesday. Mellon denied that any final agreement had been reached, and said he did not expect negotiations to be finished Tuesday. Members of the commission, however, were optimistic over prospects of a settlement.

Mellon and Smoot, who will go to Plymouth Sunday, the treasury head from his summer home at Southampton, Long Island.

Mellon has the financial details at his finger tips. Smoot knows how far congress will go in the way of concessions. There is not a great deal of leeway in the senate. Mellon is going to Coolidge to determine just how far the government can go, so that the settlement made will be acceptable here and abroad to the credit of the United States abroad, as well as considering its effect on future settlements by other debtor nations.

In other words, much depends upon the attitude between the three at Plymouth.

Immediately, the effect of the Belgian settlement would be upon the world, the other nations who have indicated their intention to do something, principally France and Italy.

ROME COMPLETES PLANS FOR MEET OF STATE LEGION IN NEW YORK CITY

Constitution Bureau.

Rome, Ga., August 15.—(Special.) With arrangements practically made to house the 1,000 delegates expected to be present, plans for the convention of the Georgia division of the American Legion and the Legion auxiliary to be held here August 19-21, have been completed. Dr. H. W. Lewis, chairman of the local convention committee, reports that all is in readiness for the visitors, and officers of Shanklin-Attaway post, of Rome, sponsors for the state meet, also state that all plans have been completed for the best assembly the legion has held since the war.

Besides local hotel facilities, homes have been thrown open. Berry School and the School for Deaf and Cave Spring have offered several hundred acts which will be used, the arrangement for bedding for the cots having been made through the Atlanta Hotel association.

It is fitting that the soldiers who fought in the world war should gather in Rome. In Myrtle Hill cemetery rests Mrs. Ellen Axson Wilson, wife of President Wilson, who died after the war broke out; near the grave of Mrs. Wilson is that of the Known Soldier, typical of the last body of the soldiers who made the supreme sacrifice.

STINNES GIVES HALF OF STOCK TO EMPLOYEES

Upsets Bankers, Who Refused To Lend Him Money To Meet Payroll of Motor Works.

MANEUVER IS SEEN TO HIT FINANCIERS

Workmen's Council Will Call Meeting To Discuss What Disposition Shall Be Made of Stock.

Berlin, August 15.—(AP)—Pay day today at the Aga Motor works, one of the industrial units owned by the late financier, Hugo Stinnes, and ceded to the magnate's eldest son, Edmund Stinnes, in his settlement with the family, found the company's strong box still a half-million marks short of the amount needed to pay the thousands of workers.

Edmund, who succeeded from the family council because he preferred to conduct his own enterprises, still was locking horns with the group of powerful banks which is withholding credit, allegedly because of a controversy with Edmund over the ownership of the Aga works.

Edmund upset the bankers today by announcing a gift of two million marks' worth of Aga Motor Works shares to his employees as a mark of his earnest desire to keep the plant going and as evidence of his wish to relieve the present situation by dispensing with his majority holdings.

Represents half of Holdings.

The gift to the workers represents one-half of Edmund's previous holdings, and while popular comment as being prompted by humanitarian motives, there is a strong feeling that the maneuver is an advertising dodge, primarily aimed at the banks who are attempting to discipline young Stinnes by refusing him credit for which there is ample security in the Aga works.

The workmen's council at the Stinnes plant meanwhile merely have taken cognizance of the unexpected donation and will convene an assembly of the plant's employees to discuss what disposition will be made of the 2,000,000-mark stock which represents one-third of the company's entire capital.

Banking Group Determined.

The banking group which is winding up the affairs of the late Hugo Stinnes and which insists that the transfer of the Aga works to Edmund by his mother and his brother, Hugo Stinnes, Jr., was illegal, appears determined to force a surrender of such holdings as were assigned to Edmund, for the purpose of having them put on the auction block for conversion into ready cash. The Aga works are viewed as a desirable holding and their ultimate disposition may have to be decided by a court, further operation of the plant in defiance of the big banks. The Aga plant continues under full operation, as the workers propose to support Edmund Stinnes in his fight with the banks has been decided.

SIX ATLANTA BANK DEPOSITS LARGEST IN CITY'S HISTORY

Wealth of Atlantans and Savings Show Big Strides as Section Enters Greatest Prosperity.

BY S. C. METCALFE.

Deposits of six leading banks of Atlanta are greater right now than ever before in the history of these banks, according to statements Saturday to a representative of the chamber of commerce by officials of the institutions.

Atlanta is about to enter upon an unprecedented era of development and prosperity, officials agree.

With astonishing unanimity six bankers pointed out to the interviewer, in almost identical statements, that there is more money in the city than at any previous period in its history and that every indication points to a steady, rapid growth and development in Atlanta within the coming few years which will surpass anything the city has ever before known.

Every one is optimistic regarding the future of the city and several officials made the statement that Atlanta was at a turning point in her history and on the verge of greater things than had ever been accomplished here.

On Visit To Bankers.

The chamber of commerce sent an interviewer to the Atlanta and Lowry National, the Fourth National, the Citizens and Southern, the Atlanta Trust company, the Fulton National and the Georgia Savings banks. He sought out the ranking official present at the time of his call and asked this question:

"What has the immediate future in store for Atlanta?"

Answers of these officials are given herewith. A significant feature of these interviews is the fact that one savings bank which deals with very few wealthy people, its business being almost entirely confined to handling the savings of working people, makes the same report as banks handling large financial transactions. This, according to bankers, tends to indicate a generally healthy and prosperous condition in the community.

At the Atlanta and Lowry National, President Thomas K. Glenn answered the question in these words:

"I see a very bright future for Atlanta—and we are not going to have to wait for it either, it's right on us! Real estate values are holding up well and are probably due for an unusual activity in the near future. Industry is showing quite an interest in the city, a fact which holds big possibilities. Two-thirds of the state are reaping the best crops in years. An authentic population estimates, based on a close study of conditions, prophesy an astonishing growth in the city in the next comparatively few years. All these things indicate a coming prosperity such as has been seldom, if ever, known in Atlanta. A good indication of the present prosperity of the community is the fact that the Bill, Designed To Stop Perpetration of Outrages, Fails to Obtain Constitutional Majority.

LINDSAY TO RENEW FIGHT NEXT WEEK

Georgia Association of Commercial Secretaries Urges More Reasonable Treatment of Tourists.

Georgia's house of representatives, the Georgia Association of Commercial Secretaries and citizens of Cartersville Saturday threw their forces into the fight to curb "piracy on the highways of the state," when all joined in condemning practices of prohibition enforcement officers brought to light by The Constitution.

A storm of oratory swept the house Saturday during discussion of a bill by Representative Lindsay of DeKalb county designed to check the outrages, many members rising to explain in graphic language why they voted in favor of the measure.

The commercial secretaries, in session here, adopted resolutions appealing for more reasonable treatment of tourists in regard to enforcement of traffic laws and urged that where local authorities show no inclination to eliminate the evil the state highway department post signs on their borders warning tourists and motorists generally what they may expect if they go into the communities in question.

Emerson Hit in Resolution.

It also developed Saturday that a resolution prepared for introduction in both houses of the legislature will name the town of Emerson, in Bartow county, as being guilty of "stupid and piratical enforcement of speed laws." It will empower the governor to call a halt to such practice; with instruct the solicitor general of the Cherokee circuit to lay the matter before the grand jury to use its influence along a similar line, and will order the state highway department to reroute state highways out of this town and discontinue maintenance of roads about it until officers responsible for the reign of alleged extortion are punished.

Citizens of Cartersville took cognizance of the condition of affairs in the house Saturday when at a public mass meeting they went out, as being determined to stop "tourist-baiting."

Lindsay Bill Fails.

After lengthy debate, Representative Lindsay's bill finally failed to pass in the house Saturday when it was impossible to secure the requisite constitutional majority of 104 votes, the vote being 94 for the bill and 54 against it. Representative Lindsay gave notice that he would move reconsideration of the measure at the proper time. Its supporters expressed confidence in its passage when it was brought up next week before a larger attendance.

The bill was a simple restatement of the inherent constitutional right of the citizen against illegal search and seizure. It provided that evidence secured by illegal search and seizure could not be used in any criminal case. "I vote 'Aye' in self-defense," one

Moss Is Fined $200 on 'Stink Bomb' Charge

Panic Caused in Theater, Acting Recorder Murphy Holloway Is Told.

The highest fine ever imposed in Atlanta's police court was assessed Saturday when W. F. Moss, employee of a hat manufacturing company, was fined $200 on charges of complicity in having thrown a "stink bomb" into the Palace theater at 318 Euclid avenue. If he fails to pay he must serve a sentence of thirty days.

At the same time the court forfeited a $200 bond posted by Dr. J. S. Schurmer, of 29 East Lake terrace, and held in continuance the cause of R. O. Montgomery of Hapeville. Intensive search for Dr. Schurmer was ordered by Judge Holloway. The doctor was charged at the trial with being sole instigator of the plot where by the bomb was tossed into the theater while a crowd of approximately 400 women and children were watching a motion picture program. It is claimed he employed Moss to toss the "bomb." The doctor who emulated from the bomb, according to testimony of Alpha Fowler, caused a panic in the house so great that many persons narrowly escaped injury, and one child fainted.

Judge Holloway, after hearing the testimony, summoned Acting Chief of Police Jett and asked him to use the greatest efforts in apprehending Dr. Schurmer and to place his bond at not less than $1,000. Chief Jett informed the court that such orders already had been issued and stated he would accept no less than $5,000.

Character witnesses appearing for Moss told the court he had led an exemplary life. Only the financial straits of his family, they believed, had led him into such a plot. Their testimony led the judge to impose a fine rather than a straight stockade sentence. Labor troubles are believed to have been the cause of the "stink bomb" plot, it is said.

TEN CANDIDATES QUALIFY FOR RACE

Payment of Entrance Fees Develops Three-Cornered Contest for Council in Third Ward.

Ten additional candidates have qualified during the past week for the September primary, according to W. J. Laney, secretary of the city democratic executive committee.

Payment of entrance fees during the week brought out a three-cornered race for councilman from the third ward, and a clash for member of the board of education from the eleventh.

R. L. Welch, well known druggist, and Virgil E. Adams, prominent young lawyer, paid fees for the race for councilman for the third. B. T. Hewitt qualified for the election several weeks ago.

Councilman T. L. Slappey of the second paid his fee Saturday shortly after announcement of his decision to run for reelection. Mr. Slappey is seeking the last year of a two-year term in council. At present he is unopposed.

E. Walter Tripp paid his fee last week and will be a candidate for councilman from the first ward. He probably will be opposed by Councilman S. H. Wardlaw, who has announced that he is in the race for reelection, but who has not yet paid the entrance fee.

E. W. Lindsay of the fifth and A. J. Orme of the eighth, both candidates for councilman, qualified for councilman races during the week. No opponents have paid entrance fees from either ward.

Four candidates representing as many wards, qualified in the board of education race. W. W. Gaines of the third, D. M. Therrell of the seventh, and Mrs. Z. Y. Peterson of the eleventh, all will run for reelection, while W. D. Hoffman may be a candidate from the eighth ward.

President John T. Hancock has not yet announced whether he will stand for reelection.

Riot Is Staged In Sing Sing Over Politics

Knives, Razors and Crockery Are Weapons Used by Rival Cliques.

Ossining, N. Y., August 15.—Knives, razors and crockery cut the air in the Sing Sing prison mess hall Friday night as angry convicts ended a political discussion in a riot. News of the riot became known tonight. Guards restored order after two convicts had been wounded and eight sent to solitary confinement.

The "cheese party," led by James Vincent Gaffney, a murderer of particular lawless reputation, was responsible for the riot. Gaffney was the desperado selected by a clique of convicts as "supreme boss of Tammany in Sing Sing."

Arguments over the selection led to loud words, then to fistfights, and finally to a display of cutlery. Crockery sped through the air as the convicts resorted to violence.

The "cheese party," led by James Clear, a convict, disputed Gaffney's leadership in prison politics. Clearly led his supporters against the convicted murderer and lost a part of his nose in the battle.

"Tammany Boss" Gaffney escaped with his nose intact, but his eyes were reported to have been blacked during the melee. Gaffney was one of the eight convicts who were sent into solitary confinement.

Before the fight began, Gaffney's party had won the "election" within the prison. Gaffney admits being a tough man, with a record as desperately unsavory as that of any man in the prison, and these qualifications helped his cause.

After conviction for murder in 1918, Gaffney escaped from the Tombs prison and fled to the United States in a gun battle and was away toward freedom again. Finally, Gaffney was surrounded by 19 officers and was captured. Sixteen state troopers escorted the convicts' selection as "political leader" to prison when he finally was sent away.

Super - Power Test on Radio Is Announced

WGYY Will Broadcast Programs for Three Nights at Power of 50,000 Watts.

Washington, August 15.—(AP)—With the approval of the commerce department, station WGYY at Schenectady will broadcast during the evenings of August 22, 24 and 25 its program and signals at a power of 50,000 watts, the greatest energy ever used for this purpose.

The program is in the form of a test and Secretary Hoover today asked the nation's radio listeners to assist in determining what effects the super-power installation has on the transmission of waves.

Government observers and many broadcasting stations will engage in the same attempt, equipped with scientific devices to determine the intensity, range modulation, fading and blanketing phenomena which the signals from the tremendous power center will evince.

At the same time, the regular listeners-in, scattered everywhere as they are, can greatly assist the project by reporting their receiving experiences. The station, while bringing the full 50-kilowatt power into service most of the time, will also reduce at intervals to its regular 2-kilowatt standard in order that comparisons may be made.

The highest power station now broadcasting in the United States is five kilowatts, or 5,000 watts, so the Schenectady station will be using 10 times the energy hitherto developed for broadcasting.

CITY HALL OFFER TO BE CONSIDERED

Council Will Act on Number of Important Matters at Meeting Monday Afternoon.

City council will face a busy session Monday, when numerous measures of interest will come up for action.

An attack on sale of soft drinks and other commodities at more than the price regularly charged by other establishments; a request that council accept a tentative offer of the adjoining making available property adjoining the courthouse as a site for Atlanta's proposed new municipal building; a measure eliminating charges for building permits after this year; an ordinance to force restaurant employees to obtain health certificates, and first steps toward repaving of Courtland street are expected to be among the most important items.

Attack Alleged Profitsteering.

The first measure, it is stated, is aimed at the practice in the ball park and city auditorium of charging 10 cents for soft drinks which sell for five cents at practically all other stands.

A resolution will be introduced Monday, it was stated Saturday, questioning Dan Michalewicz, president of the grandstand, providing one fountain for each 500-person capacity.

At the same time it will be proposed that the legislature pass a charter amendment prohibiting any county would take care of his case, should it ever be called for trial.

Cartersville Citizens Hit 'Car Baiting'

Business Men Are Determined To Stop Practice of Harrying Tourists.

Cartersville, Ga., August 15.—(Special.)—Expressing their indignation in a manner perfectly plain to all other residents of Bartow county, citizens of Cartersville, county seat, Saturday placed themselves unequivocally on record as determined to break up the alleged practice of tourist baiting. Tacks in the road for apprehension of speeders, road obstructions for the ostensible purpose of halting liquor runners, and the general harrying of tourist traffic is to be stopped here, Cartersville business men have their way.

The first public expression of sentiment in this city came to light here today in the case of W. N. Klein, a tourist, who had been arrested at Emerson, a small town four miles from here.

Klein, arrested on a charge of violating the speed laws, was carried before Judge J. M. Wilson, serving pro tempore in the absence of the regular justice of the peace. He was found guilty, a fine assessed, and when he told the court he had not a sufficient amount of money to pay the fine, was remanded to jail and brought to Cartersville.

Business men of Cartersville, who heard of the plight of the stranger, resolved to bring about his release. Within a very short time after his case had been brought to their attention 72 business men had signed the stranger's bond and he was released. Klein was told that citizens of the county would take care of his case, should it ever be called for trial.

Citizens of Cartersville have signed

The program is to include a special musical and song feature entitled "Save Your Sorrows for Tomorrow." "Tina" will be offered with Miss Virginia Futrelle, soprano, Miss Hill and the Howard Girls.

"The World is Waiting for the Sunrise" will be sung by Byron Warner, accompanied by Warner's Howard orchestra.

And then the band will play "Row, Row, Rosie," and "Jimmie Blues."

There will be a wealth of new and novel scenic effects and brilliant costumes.

BLANCHE SWEET EAST TO MAKE NEW FEATURE

Blanche Sweet arrived in New York from Hollywood last week prepared to begin work immediately in the leading feminine role of "Invisible Wounds," which is to be the first of a series of Robert Kane productions for First National.

With the arrival of Miss Sweet the filming of "Invisible Wounds," taken from Frederick Palmer's novel, will start at once at the Cosmopolitan studios under the direction of Howard Higgin, as Mr. Higgin and Sada Cowan have completed work on the continuity.

The cast engaged to interpret the story is an imposing one. In addition to Miss Sweet, it includes Ben Lyon, Holbrook Blinn, Clare Eames, Effie Shannon, Dorothy Cummings, George Cooper, John Cordova, Lucius Henderson and Diana Kane.

WIFE WHO CAUGHT MATE AND WIDOW TO FILE DIVORCE

Chicago, August 15.—(AP)—A divorce suit will be filed by Mrs. Thomas P. Lawrence, her attorneys say, as an upshot of a raid made yesterday on a room in the fashionable Lake Shore Drive hotel, where she found her husband, a wealthy St. Louis businessman, and Mrs. Julia Gruner, St. Louis society widow.

The Lawrences were married in 1913. Twenty-five years ago, as Lynn Fernald, Mrs. Lawrence was a Chicago belle and was married and divorced from George M. Pullman, Jr., son of the Pullman Company founder, and brother-in-law of Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois.

Mrs. Lawrence appeared against her husband and Mrs. Gruner at the police station and subsequently in municipal court, where Lawrence was charged with a statutory offense and disorderly conduct.

18,000 Drug Addicts Are Found in Chicago As Result of Exposure

Chicago, August 15.—(AP)—Investigation in the narcotic exposure here has developed that there are 18,000 drug addicts here making no secret of their plight. Several thousand more, L. J. Ulmer, acting chief agent, estimates, also use drugs, but do not deal with narcotic peddlers.

The average uses 25 grains a day, says Ulmer. Some use 50 and one physician made affidavit that for years he had taken 75 grains daily. One grain would be fatal to the majority of non-users.

While officials collect data on the extent of narcotic use here, they continue search for loot which they charge Colonel Willard Beach, narcotic chief agent, with receiving in exchange for the release of the missing Jewels valued at $50,000 was found in safety deposit boxes belonging to Kitty Gilhooly, whose arrest led to seizure of drugs valued at $100,000 several days ago.

Counsel for Colonel Beach today filed a motion before United States Commissioner Biebel for the quashing of the search warrant under which his effects were seized and for a return of the property. The lawyers charged that the warrant was issued without legal justification to search for evidence of the commission of a crime and that it was in violation of Colonel Beach's constitutional rights.

Remus To Face St. Louis Court On Rum Charges

St. Louis, August 15.—(AP)—George Remus, wealthy "bootleg king" of Cincinnati, probably will be brought to St. Louis for trial on charges of complicity in the gigantic whisky theft from Jack Daniels' distillery warehouse in 1923, when Remus' completes on September 2 a two-year sentence he is serving at the federal penitentiary at Atlanta.

On United States District Attorney Curry's application, a capias was issued for the arrest of Remus, who was one of 17 persons indicted by the federal grand jury at St. Louis in May, 1924 in connection with the "milking" of 800 barrels of whisky and the substitution of water.

Other defendants include Remus' wife, Lem Motlow, former owner of the distillery, and William J. Kinney, former local deputy revenue collector. Curry added that Remus faced additional liquor law violation charges at Cincinnati, but that the St. Louis case might be prosecuted first.

Grocery Clerk Asks Million of Marquise In Suit for Slander

Chicago, August 15.—(AP)—A suit for $1,000,000 for slander was filed against the Marquise de Jannelli, widow of a one-time Italian ambassador to Tokyo, and resident of Chicago since last February. The complainant is H. J. Brennan, a $25-a-week grocery clerk.

Brennan said he was present at a party which included the marquise and that upon her return to her hotel she accused him of having stolen some of her jewelry, her hat, a lace collar, a handkerchief, her cigarette case and a cigarette holder, all valued at $2,500.

He said he had sustained damage to his reputation to the extent of $1,000,000. Brennan said he met the marquise in Mexico City in 1923 and that he had been entertained by her frequently since she arrived in Chicago.

The grocery clerk said he was compelled, in the presence of three policemen, to sign a document agreeing to repay the marquise for her loss at the rate of $10 a week out of his $25-a-week salary until $1,110 had been paid.

Two Persons Killed By Boulder Thrown By Force of Blast

South Pittsburg, Tenn., August 15.—Thrown more than 300 yards by the force of a 20-ton blast set off at the plant of the Dixie Portland Cement company, Richard City, a huge boulder crushed an automobile as an egg-shell, instantly killing Arthur Smith, 26, and his son, Arthur Lee, aged 8, and probably fatally wounding his wife, who was an occupant of the machine.

The huge rock struck Smith and his son at the same moment, tearing Smith's right arm off, crushing his skull and shattering a leg. The boy struck on the head, his skull crushed and body badly mutilated. Death seemed to have been almost instantaneous for father and son. Mrs. Smith was struck by a bar from the top of the machine, broken by the rock in its fall. The wooden piece struck her on the head and rendered her unconscious.

ADMITS TAKING $18,000 TO HAVE "GOOD TIME"

New Orleans, August 15.—(AP)—J. Narcisse Landry, for 18 years cashier of A. Baldwin and company, wholesale hardware dealer, was arrested today and charged with embezzlement of $18,000 of that firm's money.

Landry admitted, according to Assistant District Attorney Lumborg, taking the money, which he said had been spent in "high living" and bad investments. His bond was fixed at $30,000.

CHOLERA EPIDEMIC RAGING IN SHANGHAI

New Howard Publicity Head

MRS. JACQUES FUTRELLE

Mrs. Jacques Futrelle, newly appointed publicity director for the Howard theater, is one of the most successful literary workers in Atlanta.

Mrs. Futrelle is well known as a successful novelist and playwright and a number of her plays have enjoyed long runs on Broadway.

Last year she returned to Atlanta, her native city, after several years' residence in New York and London, and since has become a leader in the group of Atlanta writers who are accomplishing genuine successes.

Mrs. Futrelle is particularly well known for her new work because of her extensive world travels with her husband, Jacques Futrelle, internationally famous novelist. Mr. Futrelle, a native Georgian, had achieved world fame as a fiction writer before his death when the S. S. Titanic sank.

New Boys' Clothing Store Opened by Camp and Eason

Roy Camp and Tyler Eason, veteran clothing leaders of Atlanta, Saturday announced the opening on Monday of the greater boys' department of Eiseeman's clothing store, of which they are sole owners and managers.

A house warming, at which friends and customers of many years' standing will be welcomed, is planned and every boy who visits the store Monday will be presented with a souvenir.

Mr. Camp and Mr. Eason have leased the entire second floor of Eiseeman's and will operate the boys' department in conjunction with the establishment.

This will be a gala day in clothing circles here and mothers and fathers who for the past three decades have patronized Eiseeman's store will be glad to see their boys in the new department.

"Boys, as we use the term, start at one year of age and extend to 21," Mr. Camp said. "We are going to be able to furnish Atlanta's youths with everything they need in the most varied and complete lines of merchandise ever displayed in the city."

Mr. Camp was employed with George Muse clothing store, specializing in boys' wearing apparel for 20 years.

"I extend to my friends a most cordial invitation to visit us at our new location," said Mr. Eason, formerly of the store, stated Saturday. "Both Mr. Camp and Mr. Eason are men of wide experience and have selected the new stock with the utmost regard for style and serviceability."

Eiseeman's store has grown with Atlanta during the past two score years until it is now one of the largest houses of its kind in this part of the country. It was first established as Eiseeman & Weil, but in 1913 Jacob Eiseeman bought Sig Weil's interest in the firm and it became Eiseeman's.

After the disastrous fire in September, 1922, the store occupied temporary headquarters on Peachtree street until the present store was completed.

Morris D. Eiseeman is vice president and general manager of the store and Simon Tillebaum is secretary and treasurer.

SLEEPING CHILDREN HELD BEHIND DOORS RESCUED FROM FIRE

Battle Creek, Mich., August 15.—(AP)—Eight sleeping children, imprisoned by locked doors, were carried through flames and smoke in a daring and spectacular rescue from La Belle resort hotel at Gull Lake, 14 miles west of Battle Creek, which was totally destroyed by fire late today with an estimated loss of $85,000.

James Milne, 76, and blind, of Grand Rapids, was rescued by means of a hastily improvised wire cable. C. W. Dunkley, of Chicago, sporting editor of the Associated Press, central division, and A. L. Spalding, orchestra leader of the resort dance pavilion, fought their way through fire up a burning stairway, bound the cable around Milne's body and lowered him to the ground.

The children had been locked in rooms by their parents. After breaking down doors, firemen carried all of them to safety.

The fire was caused, it is believed, by a leakage of gas in a heating plant.

FASTS FOR 49 DAYS AND IS NOT HUNGRY

Cleveland, Ohio, August 15.—(AP)—Forty-nine days without food and not hungry. That's the claim of Alexander Varga, 36, who is fasting to cure himself of chronic illnesses which have troubled him since childhood.

Varga says that even the savory odor of a steak, sizzling in the frying oil on the floor. An angel, he says, awoke his desire for food. When it does come, Varga says, it will be a sign he is cured.

Varga drinks all the water he wants every half hour.

'PETER PAN' AT PALACE OFFERS BETTY BRONSON

The screen version of James M. Barrie's "Peter Pan," which has stood for 21 years as one of the most charming classics of the stage, is announced to open the third week of Greater Movie Season at the Palace theater, Inman Park. The story is a delightful, modern fairy tale.

"Peter Pan" is a bright, mischievous boy, head of the cult for having a good time. Betty Bronson, Ernest Torrence, Cyril Chadwick, Virginia Brown Faire and Anna May Wong are featured in the cast.

A western romance of unusual interest is "The Heart Buster" from the story by George Scarborough and starring Tom Mix, which will be shown Wednesday. Set in the heart of the cow country of Arizona, this picture is said to be one of the most thrilling this popular star has ever made.

Earlier Ralston has the leading feminine role.

Zane Grey's "The Thundering Herd" will be the feature attraction for Thursday and Friday. It is the story of the west in 1876 and is said to be packed from start to finish with thrilling incidents and dynamic action. Two of the mighty scenes in the production shows a terrific battle between 500 Indians and a handful of white men and a mad stampede of 2,000 fear-crazed buffalo. A talented cast has been assembled, which is headed by four featured players—Jack Holt, Lois Wilson, Noah Beery and Raymond Hatton.

"Brawn of the North," featuring the wonder dog, closes the week's program Saturday. Good comedies will be shown on each program during the week.

PARADE OF GHOSTS ON FAIRBANKS LOT

A parade of ghosts was staged at the Pickford-Fairbanks lot the other day.

There was great confusion in Nottingham palace. Royalty was panicked, ladies in waiting fled in terror, brave knights strode bravely to protect their ladies fair and Robin Hood was here and there, leading words of cheer in the midst of disaster.

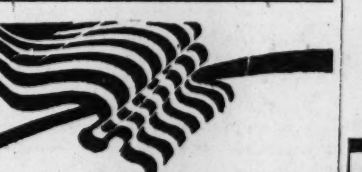

It all happened when the king's palace, built and set by Douglas Fairbanks' Robin Hood, crashed to the ground. It was wrecked to make room for a huge set in "The Black Pirate," Doug's next picture.

The pride of the studio lot for the past two years, which has been viewed by thousands of people passing on Santa Monica boulevard, lay a twisted and crumpled wreck.

It will take workmen days to clear away the debris, for over 20,000 feet of lumber had been used in its construction, to set in place of tons of plaster and other materials.

Robin Hood's famous palace is no more.

"Sedentary work," said the college lecturer, "tends to lessen the endurance." "In other words," butted in the smart student, "the more one sits, the less one can stand." "Exactly," retorted the lecturer; "and if one lies a great deal, one's standing is lost completely."—Christian Guardian.

HEADLESS BODY FOUND IN RIVER

Albany, Ga., August 15.—The headless body of a white man was found floating in the Flint river about three miles below Albany early today. It was found by J. J. Phillips, who was in the branches of a tree just below Rock Island, opposite the site of the Flint river bridge.

According to Phillips, the body is headless, with a joint of the backbone protruding. A rough shirt, he says, and a pair of rough work trousers are all the clothing he could see. He says the body is black, evidently discolored from the action of the water, but the arms are white.

Identity of the body and how it reached the point where it was found are mysteries.

It is in the plan of the coroner to impale a jury at the place where the body was recovered and hold an inquest. It is stated that the body is badly decomposed and there is little hope that any identification will be possible.

IMPORT BILLS FACING SENATORS LAST WEEK of the governor $7,500, salaries for secretaries and clerks for the governor $5,000, and salary for a messenger to the governor, $500, passed without objection, but the item providing a contingent fund for the governor of $20,000, when passed, raised objection from Senator H. B. Wilkinson, 49th, who said $20,000 would be an increase of $2,000 over last year.

Considerable discussion occurred over an appropriation of $8,200 as a special award in the lease of the state property at Indian Springs. Senator S. Foster Moore, 46th, wanted to know under what authority this award was made and Senator S. Peedles, Jr., 18th, replied by reading an act of the 1924 legislature creating a board of arbitration which subsequently made the award against the state.

Senator J. C. Collier, 22nd, injected a motion to have 100 copies of the bill printed before further consideration but this was voted down and consideration of the measure proceeded. The secretary was later instructed to prepare 100 copies for distribution Monday morning. The Indian Springs award was lost on a vote and a battle then began over the governor's contingent fund. Senator Wilkinson seeking to have it reduced to $25,000.

On roll call, the vote was 18 to 16 against the proposed reduction.

Several motions to adjourn were lost at this time and Senator Wilkinson moved for a reconsideration of the action in declining to reduce the contingent fund but the motion was lost.

Senator Collier offered an amendment increasing the fund to $33,000 for 1926 and setting it at $25,000 for 1927, with provision that the 1926 appropriation in excess of $25,000 be used to pay the award in the Indian Springs lease arbitration. This amendment was adopted.

The next snag the senate struck was on an appropriation of $39,000 for the state board of vocational education.

President E. H. Howard Egan, of the floor to ask that the item be passed until Monday. This was granted.

An amendment to the Georgia State College appropriation, increasing it from $110,000 to $130,000 was offered and explained by Senator A. K. Maddox, 26th.

President Egan took the floor again to urge adoption of the increase. Senator Collier declared he believed the senate needed more time to study provisions of this item and moved adjournment until 10 o'clock Monday morning. Senator H. P. DeLaPerriere, chairman of the appropriations committee, amended the motion to adjourn until 3 o'clock Monday morning, but the Monday morning motion carried.

Money Bills Pressing.

Reconsideration of a number of important bills is on the calendar for next week. Among these are the bill to allow corporations to merge with other corporations, which passed Friday; to prohibit women from working at night, which passed also; to consider Senator Foster's highway bill, which was defeated; and to reconsider the bill consolidating the offices of tax receiver and tax collector, which was defeated, and to reconsider the Hughes county bill, which was lost through lack of a constitutional majority.

Senator J. A. Dixon's bill for a bond issue of $15,000,000 for education is on next week's calendar, it being reported favorably by substitute. A bill to limit state tax levy on money notes, stock and bonds to 10 mills and to prohibit a county and city levy on the calendar, together with a bill prohibiting use of text books in Georgia schools that deal unfairly with the history of Georgia and the south, a bill to levy a tax on gasoline bootleggers who seek to evade payment of the 3 1/2-cent gasoline tax, Senator Carlisle's constitutional convention in January bill, and Senator Collier's sales tax measure.

member of the house shouted as he explained his vote on the Lindsay bill, stating that he had been the victim of unwarranted insults when stopped by officers on the highway at night. The statement brought forth a burst of applause. In vain the speaker pounded his gavel, calling for observance of the rule that prohibits audible demonstrations in the house.

More than one-half the members of the house present spoke, either before the bill was put on its passage, or in explanation of their vote and nearly every speech was the signal for applause from one side or the other.

"Piracy on the highways," "outrageous insult to our women and children," "reckless disregard of the commonest rights of the citizens," were some of the phrases used by members speaking for the bill, as they described the condition on the roads today. They declared that officers of the law place dangerous restrictions on the roads, stop all autoists and subject them to ruthless search, frighten women drivers and humiliate almost beyond endurance the highway travelers merely exercising a peaceful prerogative.

"Has Right to Shoot."

One member, speaking for the bill, declared that any citizen had the right to shoot on sight any person, law officer or not, who stopped his car at night and subjected his wife or children to fear and humiliation. "As long as red-blooded citizens continue to inhabit this country of ours, I will never condemn any man for shooting under such provocation," the speaker declared.

Those who spoke against the measure included Representative Miller, of Dodge, Peaslee, of Worth, McCluney, of Baldwin, all basing their opposition on the argument that passage of the bill would weaken enforcement of the prohibition laws.

Speakers for the measure, including the author, Representative Lindsay, Representative Wood, of Fulton, New, of Laurens, Kelly, of Gwinnett, Madison, of Gwinnett, Ross, of Richmond, and Stark, of Whitfield. They told of numerous instances where roads were blocked, innocent people held up and subjected to indignities, and in some cases people killed by officers intent on making arrests for violations of the prohibition laws. It also was charged that many of the officers were not primarily interested in enforcement of the law, but merely were hoping to find an automobile with a few drops of liquor in it, to provide an excuse for confiscation of the car and the whisky, and its sale for the benefit of the officers.

Wood Speaks.

Representative Wood, of Fulton, declared that full recognition of the constitutional rights of citizens is paramount and that enforcement of the law became in itself license when oppressive methods were used indiscriminately against the entire public.

Representative Lindsay, the author, declared that he offered the measure not as an anti-prohibitionist, but as an American citizen to preserve one of the most sacred rights of American citizens.

An amendment seeking to nullify the bill insofar as the prohibition laws are concerned, offered by Representative Grice, of Tattall, was overwhelmingly defeated, but another by Representative Jones, of Meriwether, providing that its provisions should not apply in cases of stolen property found in possession of the party arrested, was adopted.

"Outrages" Condemned.

Representative Kelly, of Gwinnett, declared that the time had come to protect the people of Georgia from officers who were willing to hold up innocent people indiscriminately. "In the hope of finding a few drops of whisky so they may confiscate and sell the car and the liquor themselves. He mentioned instances of the blocking of roads and told of a man who protested against being held up by an officer and who was slapped on the face for his protest. The bill, he said, would put a stop to these "degradations by highwaymen."

Representative Maddox, of Gwinnett, told of an experience of his own in being held up by officers and said if other members of the house had been similarly treated they would vote for the bill also. He said he voted "aye, in self-defense."

Representative New, of Laurens, referred to an instance told by another member where officers searched the person in a woman in an automobile and said if any such incident happened in his county the officers would be shot. He voted "aye."

Governor Asked To Act.

Branding the acts of law enforcement officers on the highways of the state as "after the manner of Barbary pirates and highwaymen of the old west," a resolution has been prepared for introduction in both houses of the general assembly, calling upon the governor to instruct the attorney general to proceed immediately "to take the necessary steps for abatement of the nuisance."

The measure is directly aimed at the methods employed in the municipality of Emerson, Bartow county, for enforcement of certain anti-speed laws, and provides that the highway department shall immediately relocate the national highway so as to avoid this town, and shall discontinue maintenance of this highway until the officers guilty of "oppressive arrests and extortion of wayfarers" on said highway shall have been discharged and punished.

The resolution refers to numerous complaints which have recently been made, both by citizens of this state and from autoists passing through this point, in reference to the "stupid and piratical" enforcement of the anti-speed laws in Emerson and concludes with a paragraph instructing the solicitor general of the Cherokee circuit, which includes Bartow county, to lay the complaints before the grand jury of that county at its next session, with the purpose of bringing to a stop this "piracy on the highways of Georgia."

Secretaries Act.

The Georgia Association of Commercial Secretaries at its convention here Friday passed resolutions introduced by B. S. Barker, secretary of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, urging more reasonable enforcement of courtiers in the matter of enforcing speed laws in small towns.

The resolution, which was made public Saturday, suggests that such towns give orders to their police officers and in the event that this method proves unsatisfactory the highway commission will be requested to place large signs both north and south of these towns stating the exact laws and warning tourists that they must be observed.

The secretaries also voiced their approval of a plan to authorize any county to levy a tax, not to exceed one-tenth of 1 per cent, on all the taxable property within the county, for the purpose of developing and utilizing its resources and the legislature was requested to pass a bill to this effect.

Henderson Hallman asked the cooperation of the members in helping to make the Southeastern fair a success.

The association went on record as regretting that H. E. L. Neil had left the state and severed his connection with the secretaries' organization.

OPPORTUNITY SEEN IN DEBT PARLEY

The Belgian negotiations are being watched carefully in those two countries. The form of the settlement as regards the liberality of the terms will determine largely the attitude to be taken by these two nations, though their debts are in a little different class.

Provision for payment of Belgium's debt to the United States from German reparations was made in the Versailles treaty and the Dawes plan. Neither France nor Italy were taken care of in this manner. Under the Dawes plan 14 per cent of the 5 per cent Belgium gets from German reparations is to be applied to the United States debt, which amounts to about four and a half million dollars annually, when the full payments begin.

Beyond the effect on the debt situation, a settlement that would bring prestige to the United States would react on other foreign ventures which this government is planning. The proposed second disarmament conference, the contemplated conferences to bring order into China.

BELIEVE BELGIUM MUST MODIFY PROPOSALS.

Washington, August 15.—(AP)—While the American and Belgian debt commissions have reached an impasse, officials of this government have by no means abandoned hope that the present negotiations can be carried to a successful conclusion.

Although the next move in the exchange of views with the president there are indications that Belgium will have to modify its proposals materially if such an agreement can be reasonably expected to have the approval of the American congress is to be had. Just what those proposals are remained today as close a secret as ever, but despite this the day brought the usual crop of rumors concerning the negotiations, the principal one of which was that Belgium had demanded as a condition to any agreement the complete cancellation of the $171,780,000 in loans advanced to it by this country during the actual war period.

Members of the American commission to whom this report was presented declared flatly that no such proposal had been advanced at any time during the negotiations. Their conclusion was that this rumor probably was predicated upon an old expression of the Belgian view that the two classes of the debt—war and post-war—should be treated separately.

There is a provision in the treaty of Versailles that Germany shall pay the foreign debt contracted by Belgium during the period of hostilities and President Wilson assented to this arrangement. The United States, however, did not become a party to the treaty and officials pointed out that the president was without authority to bind this country to any such arrangement.

fied their willingness to go to the bond of any tourist who is mistreated within the boundaries of Bartow county, where tourists have accused officers of hampering their ways in various manners.

Sheriff Gaddis and Mayor Nelson of Cartersville have issued a joint offer of $100 reward for the arrest and conviction of any person found placing traps along the public highways. Such conduct, they declared, will not be tolerated. These officers are anxious, they said, to do everything possible to assure the safety and comfort of all travelers passing through this section.

SAME FINE STUDEBAKERS Prices Reduced—Quality Maintained

THESE low prices are not for new cars built to sell at new prices.

They are for Studebaker cars identical with those which have been in tremendous demand at higher prices during the past eleven months.

They are for Studebaker cars so well built of such high quality materials that net profits during the past six months have averaged only $140.64 per car. The rest of the money the public paid us went into making a car with scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation.

These earnings are a triumph for the one-profit basis of manufacture. No manufacturer on a less efficient basis could have made a dollar selling cars of Studebaker quality at Studebaker prices.

Studebaker is the only one-profit car in the fine car field. Only Ford and Studebaker make for all their cars all bodies, all engines, all gear sets, clutches, springs, differentials, axles, steering gears, gray iron castings and drag forgings.

Thus we save and pass on to purchasers profits which many other manufacturers must pay to outside parts and body makers.

No "yearly models" makes sales jump

Thus we were able last January to reduce prices already low.

Then we announced that Studebaker would have no more "yearly models" to artificially depreciate cars in the hands of owners.

Sales instantly started to soar and have forced the vast Studebaker plants to maintain peak production throughout the summer, in the face of declining production for the industry in general.

To one-profit savings we thus add savings due to long continued peak production. These savings we share with customers in the price reduction announced August 1st.

We still use genuine leather, mohair upholstery, fine northern white ash and hard maple, tough extra gauge steel for which we pay premiums, plate glass, walnut inlaid with holly and other refinements. In short, these are the same fine cars in every particular—only the price has been reduced.

You can't appreciate what a bargain Studebaker cars are at these new prices until you compare them point by point with others.

Remember that Studebaker cars have been kept constantly up to date. Improvements have been made as soon as developed—not saved up for spectacular announcements under the guise of "new yearly models" designed to depreciate cars already in the hands of owners.

Superiorities—both hidden and obvious

Many of the most important superiorities of Studebakers are hidden until revealed by thousands of miles of usage, but here are some you can check to prove our statement that every Studebaker is more up to date than the newest "yearly model."

THIS IS A STUDEBAKER YEAR

A Gorgeous Showing of Fall and Winter Goods Beginning on Monday, August 17—Extending to August 22

Atlanta's Wholesalers and Jobbers Are Inviting All Southern Merchants To Be Here for Merchants' Week—August 17th to 22nd.

The stage is set!

Monday morning the 1925 Merchants' week will be in full swing. Already hotels report hundreds of arrivals and reservations, indicating that more retailers will be in Atlanta this week than for any similar event ever sponsored by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' association.

The committee in charge of entertainment promises that visitors will not have a dull minute while they are in the city. Reference to the program arranged shows that. But after all, Merchants' week is the time when Atlanta's manufacturers and wholesalers put their "best foot" forward and demonstrate to all within the city's trading area that no other market in the south can equal Atlanta for completeness of stocks, reasonableness of prices, or genuine service.

And so it is that Monday will see artistic displays in establishments of practically every member of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' association—comprising leading business houses.

Here and there a last touch will be given; mannequins drilled once more for the fashion show—and so on. Atlanta is ready to receive its visitors—merchants of the southeast.

Many States Represented. Headquarters of the association states that there will be retailers here from more states than ever before at any merchants' gathering, not only from those states commonly grouped as the southeast, but from other southern states as well. It is impossible to forecast how many will be in attendance during the week, but it seems safe to say that there will be several hundred here by Monday afternoon and many more throughout the week.

J. D. Robinson and Meyer Regen-

stein, who have charge of entertainment features, have announced that the gala "midnight frolic" and informal banquet will be held at the Piedmont Driving club at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday evening. J. K. Orr, president of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' association, will preside at the dinner as toastmaster and will then turn the affair over to the committee which promises an evening of "fun, fellowship and frivolity."

Tuesday evening there is to be a theater party at Keith's Forsyth theater in honor of visiting merchants. Manager Simon guarantees that the bill featuring "Town Topics," a musical comedy revue, will be one of the best of the season. Thursday evening merchants will be guests at the Howard theater to witness Percy Marmont's latest picture, "Streets of Forgotten Men."

Big Millinery Displays. Atlanta's wholesale millinery houses are taking part in the celebration of this annual Merchants' week by staging a big fall millinery display. Trimmed pattern hats, millinery merchandise and novelties will be featured.

"Atlanta is counting on Merchants' week for big things," said an official of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' association. "We believe it will mark the beginning of a fall and winter business that will set new records. Most assuredly our displays are more complete and more attractive this year than ever, and conditions throughout the southeast are brighter than they have been for a long, long time."

Visiting merchants are urged to register upon their arrival at the association's office in the Chamber of Commerce building. By doing this they will be able to participate in fare refunds and make certain of being included in all the plans for entertainment and other features during the week.

MERCHANTS INVITED TO INSPECT TOYLAND

Several hundred merchants who visit Atlanta during the week of August 17-22, the annual Merchants' and Manufacturers' week, will miss a big feature of preparations for them if they fail to visit the wonders of toyland at Dobbs & Wey company, 57 North Pryor street.

A veritable paradise of holiday goods in dolls, china, colored glass, novelties and a million and one other features in toys has been prepared for inspection of visitors and a visit to this big store will prove refreshing and entertaining. Dobbs & Wey company buyers have combed every nook and corner of the country in obtaining a stock of toys which merchants will find up-to-date and modern in every respect. Every conceivable article in the line of holiday and Christmas goods will be found in the stock—the kind of toys the present day kiddie gets most pleasure from; the quality of goods which will stand up under the average hard use of the healthy, playful child. Then, there is an immense stock of colored glass of highly decorative and useful nature, china ware which will be found of exceptional service in both useful and ornamental service, and novelties of all kinds for every occasion.

Dobbs & Wey company is one of the oldest houses of its kind in the south and for many years has served the demands of southeastern states merchants with a service and quality of merchandise that is reflected in the yearly increase in business and expansion of trade territory. Officials of the company have given long years to the study of all phases of their business and are real artists who go out into the world's largest markets each year bent on securing the best money will buy, at the lowest possible prices. It's a tedious job, this business of purchasing toys and novelties—because toyland changes each year and countless new innovations are brought into the market which tax the minds of those wharfed with supplying toy and novelty demands for a big area of the United States.

During Merchants' and manufacturers' week visiting merchants will find Dobbs & Wey officials at their service. An invitation already has been broadcast to merchants of the south, and preparations have been made to entertain them in a manner which they will remember in years to come.

Dougherty-Little-Redwine Welcomes Visiting Buyers

Standing out in the forefront of leading Atlanta merchants whose preparations for the annual merchants' and manufacturers' week will be seen Monday morning with the ushering in of the gala week here, is the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company. The firm, a pioneer in the wholesale dry goods field in the south and for many years regarded as one of the biggest and most representative houses in the country, has spared nothing to its part of the program this week.

Several weeks ago a corps of buyers spent some time in eastern and northern markets in carefully going over and purchasing stocks of merchandise which embody all the latest designs in styles, quality and workmanship. Anticipating the needs and demands of southern merchants is no small matter, but Dougherty-Little-Redwine buyers know the south and southern merchants and have spent years in their work. The net result is that the company probably has one of the most elaborate stocks ever displayed in Atlanta and the several thousand merchants who annually visit Atlanta during merchants' and manufacturers' week will not lack for stocks from which to select their fall and winter purchases.

While buyers have been away a corps of efficient men and women have been busy keeping the "home fires burning." The Dougherty-Little-Redwine store has been virtually re-vamped, with shelves unloaded for new goods which have been arriving almost daily for two months, display counters, models and other features which the modern merchant looks on as a necessity in this period, all have been cared for. Visitors will find not only a cordial welcome but a pleasing surprise on their visit to this company's store. Everything possible has been arranged to show the stocks with—come. This big toy firm is taking a prominent role in the program and visits will be made a real treat for merchants.

the least trouble to visitors, with models and styles and samples displayed to best advantage throughout the big building. "We have been ready for several days," an official of the firm stated Saturday. "Most of our goods were purchased at much lower prices than prevail at present and we are prepared to deliver immediately practically any article in dry goods line at lower prices than many large merchants. Our efforts have been directed toward obtaining quality merchandise, with styles in keeping with the demand which our experience has taught us will be much in evidence this fall and winter. We welcome all visiting merchants and their friends. Our service is at their command. We hope and believe the week will be the biggest event of its kind ever attempted here. We have prepared for it on that basis."

OFFICER IMPROVES AT MILLEDGEVILLE

Milledgeville, Ga., August 15.—(Special.)—Frank Broome, Milledgeville policeman, who was shot Saturday night by an alleged negro bootlegger, is slightly improved.

While his condition is still serious, there is some chance for his recovery. It was at first believed that he would lose the sight of his left eye if he recovered, but it now appears that it may be saved.

The negro, Julien Dixon, charged with shooting the officer, is in Baldwin county jail.

DAMAGE SUIT FILED AGAINST CENTRAL ROAD

Macon, Ga., August 15.—Verner L. Kemp, of Columbus, Ga., formerly an employee of the Central of Georgia railway, filed suit in superior court here today against that railroad for $50,000 for alleged permanent injuries sustained when he fell from a pole on April 5.

H. Mendel and Company Prepared for 30th Fall

Keeping in step with Atlanta's forward march over a period of the past thirty years is an old established Atlanta dry goods and ready-to-wear firm which stands at the top of southern wholesalers today. From an humble beginning not two score years ago, H. Mendel and company has forged to the forefront of enterprising ready-to-wear and dry goods houses and occupies an enviable position in the circle of wholesalers.

The success which has followed the foresight of H. Mendel, founder of the company which bears his name, is attributed to the belief, way back in 1895, that Atlanta was the logical center of the southeast, that it was destined to become a factor in the development of the southland. How true his foresight was is evidenced on all hands today.

At its beginning, H. Mendel and company not only faced a score field but faced the predictions on every hand of persons who didn't think "Atlanta was big enough to accommodate a ready-to-wear wholesale house." These barriers firm officials broke down one by one, each year after 1895 showing handsome increase and saw the firm expanding into newer and richer fields.

Today, H. Mendel and company occupies a mammoth building, with four stories and a basement, and every inch of floor space is jammed with a line of notions, dry goods, ready-to-wear and similar articles which experienced buyers have brought to this city for Merchants' and Manufacturers' week from the world's biggest markets. "Real Good" hosiery, "Topkiss" underwear, men and women's furnishings, shirts and unlimited stocks of this nature are included in the display which H. Mendel and company will throw open to several hundred visiting merchants the week of August 17-22.

Every department, from men's and women's furnishings to knitted goods, is in charge of capable and experienced men who have spent years in building up the firm's wide and favorable reputation throughout the south. Merchant visitors will find courteous employees at every hand and are urged to make inquiries and to thoroughly inspect the almost limitless stocks of new and high quality merchandise which this company has purchased to fill the annual fall and winter demands of its customers over the southeast.

Prominent among those who will greet visitors this week will be H. Mendel, founder of the company, and one of the nation's foremost and most progressive wholesale merchants; Simon Mendel, of the notions department, and an aggressive and wide awake business man who is personally known to thousands of southern merchants, and Sol Romm, who is at the head of the dry goods and furnishings department. Mr. Romm is too well known to the trade of this section to require any further introduction. These three, while bearing the chief responsibilities during the coming big week here, will be assisted by scores of competent and experienced men and women whose chief purpose will be to serve the need and requirement of visiting merchants.

A. M. Robinson Company To Stage Fashion Show

issue of The Constitution in an advertisement of the A. M. Robinson company, big wholesale dry goods firm. The novel display of wearing apparel will take the form of a fashion show in which stunning young women will show woman's ready-to-wear—a bevy of beautiful young women as living models.

This enterprising program will be a daily event at the A. M. Robinson company throughout the week and visiting merchants and their friends will find it not only an attractive and interesting method of showing ready-to-wear in its most striking manner, but an enjoyable and wholesale feature which anyone will admire.

Buyers of the A. M. Robinson company have combed the marts of the world in purchasing goods for this fall and winter, with the result that enormous stocks of the most fashionable merchandise will be ready for inspection of merchants all during the big week. The world's oldest and largest factories have played a big part in Atlanta's Merchants and Manufacturers week, in that they have supplied much of the merchandise to be shown here by the A. M. Robinson firm.

What will sell best? What is there the best profit in, combined with a quality of merchandise which will please merchant and buyer alike are pertinent questions on the eve of cooler months. These questions are those which will be answered by local merchants to visitors during the coming week. Fall and winter selections of styles, quality goods and satisfactory merchandise now faces the average merchant. A visit to the A. M. Robinson company plant will solve many of the vexing problems merchants and buyers will bring to this city this week.

At no time in the past several years has there been greater prospects for business generally in the south as this year, according to A. M. Robinson officials. All crops have been good, prices have been the very best and more money is in circulation than in several years past. Going on this theory A. M. Robinson company and other merchants have bought heavily in the big markets of merchandise which will be demanded this fall and winter. These purchases enable local wholesalers to sell at prices considerably less than those which the same goods now would bring. This forward stroke will mean much toward savings for merchants and is characteristic of close attention to conditions which big merchants must give in order to anticipate and meet the demand of buyers in all sections of the south. Merchants who visit Atlanta during the city's big week between August 17-22, will find exceptional values in mammoth and varied stocks at the A. M. Robinson company. They

ATHENS TO HOLD MARKETING MEET

Athens, Ga., August 15.—(Special.) Farmers and business men from every part of the state will gather at the Georgia State College of Agriculture August 24-28 to discuss problems in marketing, according to an announcement from the institution this week. The conference will be held in conjunction with the annual meetings of the State Agricultural society and the State Horticultural society.

The strongest possible program has been arranged, state college authorities believe, and the foremost authorities on cooperative marketing in the United States will appear to discuss the problems of orderly marketing before the conference.

Representatives of Georgia farm crops including cotton, peaches, peanuts and watermelons will lend their efforts towards evolving plans whereby the farmer may secure a fair price for his products.

Some of the prominent men to appear on the program include Dr. Andrew M. Soule and Professor J. Phil Campbell, of the State College of Agriculture; Arthur R. Rule, general manager of the Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers of New York; L. F. McKay, of the American Cotton Growers; C. S. Barnett, president of the National Farmers' union, and others.

The inefficient marketing system in Georgia is the cause of the present low prices of eggs in this state, according to J. H. Wood, professor of poultry husbandry at the State College of Agriculture, who has just made a study of markets and systems of marketing in other sections of the country.

Last week farmers in Connecticut were receiving 60 cents per dozen for eggs, while at the same time in Georgia only 30 cents was being paid. If the Georgia farmer had graded and packed his eggs in a regulation container and shipped them to Florida he would have received 40 to 45 cents wholesale, f. o. b. shipping point, says Professor Wood. Commercial poultrymen are receiving these prices, it is pointed out, and farmers could also if they would use the same system of marketing.

will find at this big house all the courtesy and service which has been a part of the company's policy for many, many years.

Nothing has been spared to entertain visitors and everyone is invited to visit and inspect the immense displays at Robinson's.

PERRYMAN-GREENE CO. PREPARES FOR VISITORS

That Atlanta merchants are leaving nothing undone not only to profit by the annual Merchants and Manufacturers' week in this city, but to serve the merchants of the southeastern states, is evidenced in a statement Saturday by R. A. Perryman, president of the Perryman-Greene company, large Atlanta wholesale dealers in hats, caps, gloves, umbrellas and kindred merchandise.

"We are expecting big business during this week," Mr. Perryman said. "Having placed our orders for goods many months ago we are in position to undersell any factory. Many merchants have delayed buying fall merchandise until they could see if our crops would justify it. The south has come into her own again, it seems, and everything points to marked business increases."

"The Perryman-Greene company, as in the past, is prepared to serve its customers and merchants throughout the southern states, that high quality in merchandising in our line that has characterized our business dealings with the public for many years. We have immense stocks to select from; prices are based upon cheap purchase prices prevalent many months ago, and we have ample force to handle immediately all requirements of southern merchants visiting our city during the big Merchants and Manufacturers' week," Mr. Perryman concluded.

Advance news reaching Atlanta points to tremendous crowds of visiting merchants. In all sections the news of Atlanta's big week is being taken seriously and with inducements in the way of refund of transportation charges, etc., entertainment features, mammoth stocks from which to select goods and other features, it appears certain that the week will be one of the biggest ever attempted in the south.

The Perryman-Greene company is one of the biggest of Atlanta wholesale houses taking a part in the program for Merchants' and Manufacturers' week. The firm officials have combed the markets of the world for their stocks in caps, gloves, hats and allied lines and have secured wonderful stocks to display to prospective buyers.

An open house will be maintained at Perryman-Greene's during the entire week where everything possible for comfort and interest of visitors will be provided by firm officials.

"COURTESY CARDS" FOR VISITING CARS PROVING POPULAR

Issuing of "courtesy cards," which was started last week by the chamber of commerce through the cooperation of Mayor Sims and Acting Chief of Police E. L. Jett, is proving popular with tourists passing through the city. These cards allow special parking on downtown streets and police have been instructed to cooperate in carrying out this plan.

In addition the new road information bureau of the chamber, which is accommodating about 75 tourists a day, has arranged for parking space for five automobiles in front of the Chamber of Commerce building and attractive signboards have been put up to indicate these places. A policeman is stationed there during the day to give information to tourists.

ERLICH'S STORE OPENS MONDAY

Erllich's, the new woman's ready-to-wear store at 4 Peachtree street, will hold its formal opening Monday, August 17.

The handsome new fixtures are all now installed and most of the fall merchandise has arrived. The new store is finished inside entirely in walnut and is most beautiful. The latest innovations in display cases enable Erllich's to display their models to best advantage. The appointment and decorations are sure to please Atlanta women, Mr. Erllich states.

The new store is the second of the Erllich stores, the other being in Oklahoma. Mr. Erllich, who intends making Atlanta his future home, says "Atlanta's progressiveness appeals to me. Its reputation as a wonderful place in which to live and do business reached me in Oklahoma and a personal investigation has proven this to be true."

A Big Fall Just Ahead!

Agricultural prosperity—the prodigal son that deserted the South in 1920—seems due for a glorious homecoming this Fall.

The Southeast is assured of a good cotton crop at a good price, and unless present weather conditions fail, will produce a BIG cotton crop at a HIGH price!

The past five years have seen the gradual liquidation of old debts, so that a large percentage of the crop money this Fall will be a cash balance which the farmer can use for the purchase of necessities and luxuries he has denied himself for some time past.

The intervening years of adversity have made the farmer a cautious purchaser—more than ever careful to get a full dollar's worth for each dollar he spends. Wise dealers are awake to this situation and are laying in their stocks of merchandise (with which they wish to cash in on the agricultural prosperity this Fall) accordingly.

For thirty years SHIELD BRAND SHOES have "Fit Best—Worn Longest." During the recent era of depression Shield Brand Shoe dealers have done more than their share of the shoe business in their community. The fact that our sales of SHIELD BRAND SHOES have increased steadily each year since 1920 speaks volumes for their value.

Plan now to do a big shoe business this Fall. Write for a copy of our new catalog, or let us have a salesman call with a complete line of samples. Our enormous warehouse (the largest in the Southeast) enables us to assure you prompt service, and a wide variety of the latest styles from which to make selection.

We offer retail merchants every advantage of a nearby market, with prompt shipments and quick deliveries, which are absolutely necessary during these days of keen competition and rapid changes in style, for the successful and profitable selling of shoes at retail.

SULLIVAN SET TO BATTLE MARLOWE

Atlanta fight fans by the score are planning a trip to Marietta Tuesday night to see the first boxing card that has been staged near Atlanta in months. In the bout at the Marietta Athletic club Tuesday night, Hollis Sullivan, Riverside student, and a junior lightweight of much ability and more promise, will meet Johnny Marlowe, Savannah veteran, for a scheduled 10-round session.

W. H. Evans, who organized the Marietta Athletic club, is promoting the card, which is the first Marietta has had. It will be one of a series of bouts planned for the fall by Evans.

Sullivan has been fighting in Atlanta and this section for two years and has always made a favorable impression with fight fans. He is clever with his hands and is a good puncher.

Marlowe has shown here several times, his last bout having been with Pete Cole, of Rome. Cole, outwitting Marlowe, stopped the Savannah veteran half-way through the scheduled distance. Both Marlowe and Sullivan will weigh in at about 125 pounds.

The semi-windup will bring Alton Anderson, of Marietta, and Battling Wilker, of Atlanta, together for six rounds of activity in the welterweight class. Four preliminaries and a title bout will start the show.

Peter Manning Sets New World's Trotting Record

Cleveland, August 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—Facing a brisk wind in the back stretch and with but only one workout over the distance, Peter Manning, world's champion trotter, established a new world's trotting record for two miles in an exhibition at North Randall today. His time of 4:10 1-5 clips five full seconds off the American record set by The Harvester at Lexington, Ky., in October, 1910.

Peter Manning's performance was the feature of Peter Manning-Single G day, but Single G's best effort was second to Margaret Dillon in the free-for-all pace. The 15-year-old pacer stepped a mile in two minutes flat, the fastest time of the year on the local track, to win the second heat, but went into a break in the third and finished a bad last.

Peter Manning was driven by McDonald, of Indianapolis. He trotted the first mile unpaced in 2:05 2-5, and the second, in which he was prompted by Bumblebee in 2:04 4-5, making the last half in 1:01 4-5 and the last quarter in 30 1-5 seconds. His record for a mile, 1:56 3-4, was made in 1922.

In addition to furnishing the closest finish of the year here, when the first four horses finished heads apart in the first mile, the free-for-all pace developed the three fastest heats. Margaret Dillon's time was 2:01 2-5 in the first heat and 2:02 2-5 in the third. The last half of the first heat was stepped in 59 4-5 seconds.

Clara Dillon Loses.

Clara Dillon, Thomas W. Murphy's Dillon Axworthy mare, lost her first race in five starts, finishing outside the money in the Cuyahoga, value $2,000 for 2:07 trotters. The event was won by Todd Hart, which trotted the last quarter of the first heat in 25 2-5 seconds and the final half of the second mile in one minute flat, coming from behind in each. He did not quite reach in the third, losing to Voltage by a head.

Clara Dillon was the victim of bad racing luck. In the first heat she got away to a bad start, but caught up with the leaders, only to go into a break as they headed into the stretch. In the next, part of her harness broke.

Fast time also was registered in the 2:12 pace, won by Norman Gratton. Queen Volo, Murphy entry, won her eighth consecutive start by annexing the 2:14 trot.

THE SUMMARY.

2:12 pace, purse $1,200, 3-4, 7-8, 1-1 1-8 mile heats.

Dell Yields Just Four Safe Hits; Seven Bases Are Stolen by Crackers

BY GEORGE CONGDON.

Taking a tip from McLaughlin and Warmoth after several ordinary starts, "Wheeler" Dell flashed a bit of fascinating form at Spiller park Saturday as he pitched a four-hit game against the Barons. The final score of 9 to 0 in favor of the Crackers gave the Atlanta club its seventh straight win and a clean sweep of the five-game series with Birmingham.

The Crackers are today pulling into New Orleans, there to open the most crucial of crucial series. It's a series like the Pittsburgh-New York stand recently. "Pug" Cavey, former Pelican, or Jim Bagby, "the great Sarge," will fire at the Pels this afternoon, according to Bert Niehoff, Cracker manager.

The Crackers go to New Orleans, the league leaders' home town, for a three-day stand. These three games can put the Crackers into the leadership of the Southern league, or it can lose them almost hopelessly in the lower ranks of the first division. Playing as they have against the Barons this week, the Crackers should come home with an edge on the three-game series.

Stone was a poor starter for the Barons yesterday. He lasted two-thirds of an inning. In that time he gave up two hits and issued two bases on balls that let in three runs. Bradshaw, his successor, fared much better, giving up only five hits until the eighth, when he went under beneath a deluge of base smacks.

Seven Stolen Bases.

The Crackers didn't depend entirely on hits for their seventh straight win. There were errors, and then there were seven stolen bases back of Cracker names. Cullop had three, two of which he got in double steals that scored runs.

Only two Barons got as far as second base Saturday. One was Stuffy Stewart, who, of course, stole second, after singling, and the other was Connor, who after hitting went to second on Crowder's single. Then a double play, one of two the Crackers worked, cut down both runners.

The other two hits the Barons got were snapped out by Yam Yaryan, catcher, but in each case he was stranded at first.

There was plenty of good fielding on both sides. Zoeller, Cullop, Niehoff and Gazella, to say nothing of Murphy, were at their peak yesterday. And the only way the Barons got the Crackers out in the eighth was a sensational running catch Griffin made of Smith's long fly to leftfield.

The Crackers had trouble getting their heavy artillery working, but when they did, it netted two doubles and a single for Frankie Zoeller, three singles for Cullop and a pair of base hits for Dell.

Zoeller Bats .1000.

Zoeller was at bat only three times officially. He went up five times, but drew two walks. His first was in the first inning. He went to third on Niehoff's single, while Niehoff made it on to second on the throw to catch Zoeller. Cullop's single to right scored both and then Nick went around by stealing second, going to third on Yaryan's bad throw to second and Yaryan's passed ball.

The Crackers scored another in the fourth when Dell singled, went to third on Zoeller's double and counted after the catch of Niehoff's sacrifice fly. The other one-run advance came in the seventh when Cullop singled, went to third on Smith's hit and came in on the scoring end of a double steal with Smith.

The parade on the paths came in the eighth after one was down. Brock doubled to left and scored on Dell's single. Dell went to third on Zoeller's second double and scored, Zoeller taking third, when Good beat out a hit to first. Cullop's single scored Zoeller.

Southern Champions Lose Services of McClintock; Backfield Material Good

BY BOB MATHERNE.

University, Ala., August 5.—(Special.)—There exists little chance of Captain P. G. "Pinkie" McClintock returning to the University of Alabama this coming September for participation in the nine-game schedule of the Tidesman will play. And the loss of Captain McClintock, a star end of the championship team last year, is one certain to be seriously felt.

McClintock received his "ship" last May, but planned to take post-graduate work and play football again this season. When he left Alabama, he drifted out to the Pacific coast and entered the lumber business with a brother, and there he plans to remain. A conscientious end and an inspiring leader is lost to the Crimson, and this loss, added to others, make the Crimson face a serious problem to continue in championship form.

The only other loss that affects Alabama's grid prospects—and it does not affect football as much as it does basketball and baseball—is that of Andy Cohen. Cohen has pastured this summer with the Waco team in the Texas league. He is planning to return to Alabama to obtain his diploma, but his collegiate athletic career is in his wake. Cohen was a fleet reserve back, and for some time on the cage court and a neat infielder.

Lineup Needed
With less than one month remaining before grid performers will start battling for berths on the Wade eleven, it appears offhand that Alabama's big problem this year will be developing a line able to battle equally with the powerful backfield the Crimson will have. It must be remembered that the Crimson lost six first-string lineups of last year's championship eleven. "Shorty" Probst, who for three years stood out above all other snappers-backs, Jack Langhorne, "Country" Oliver, Ben Compton and Hulet Whitaker were lost by graduation, and now McClintock is gone also.

"It will be very hard for us to replace these vacancies in our line," said Coach Wade the other day, "not only will we need some good lineups but it seems now that we will be short of reserve lineups."

And as any football fan knows, the reserve strength of any eleven is the thing that counts these days. Alabama will start the season with Buckner, Hudson, Jones, Camp, Perry and Wesley—all experienced front rank fighters. Pickard is regarded as the best bet for a berth. The first five men played in most of the games this past season and the season before and Wesley is the giant from Guin whose toe booted the three points over touchdown that enabled Alabama to beat Pennsylvania three seasons ago, 9-7.

One End Sidelined
Hudson is slated for one end. The boy has earned a letter the past two seasons, but seemed lacking something until the last game of the season last year. Against Georgia, he was a wonder, and it is believed that his play in that game gave him the proper poise and confidence which should make him a star this year. Picking someone for the other end is too hazardous this early, but Winslett and Wall are likely contenders for the berth.

Filling "Shorty" Probst's berth at center is hard to do, but the Capstone folks are counting on Sherlock Holmes a "rat" two seasons ago, this year. It is somewhat. Jones has played center little, and may tackle the job. Wesley may be tried out.

The way it looks now, it is going to be hard affair for Alabama to place on the gridiron as good an eleven as she had last year with so much work to be done in developing line. There is no worry about the backfield, with Hubert, Rosenfield, Mack Brown, Grant, Gillis, "Red" Barnes, here Caldwell and many others coming back, but the line is a worry that must be settled by hard work and careful picking on Denny field and not on a typewriter.

AUSTRALIANS SWEEP NET SERIES

Montreal, August 15.—(P)—Victories for Gerald L. Patterson and James O. Anderson in the two final singles contests of their second year Davis cup series with Canada today gave the Australian tennis team a clean sweep, five matches to none.

Wright triumphed over Jack Dwyer, while Patterson was given a keen battle by Willard Crocker, 6-4, 11-9, 6-4.

The former match was limited to a base line driving duel with developed frequent rallies without spectacular play. The Patterson-Willard struggle, however, was enlivened by Patterson's dashing net attack. The Australian was called upon to bring off sensational volleys and crashing overheads to clinch the match, being extended to 20 games to take the second set.

Prior to today's matches, Australia had taken two singles and one doubles match. The victory qualified the Antipodean team for a match with Japan.

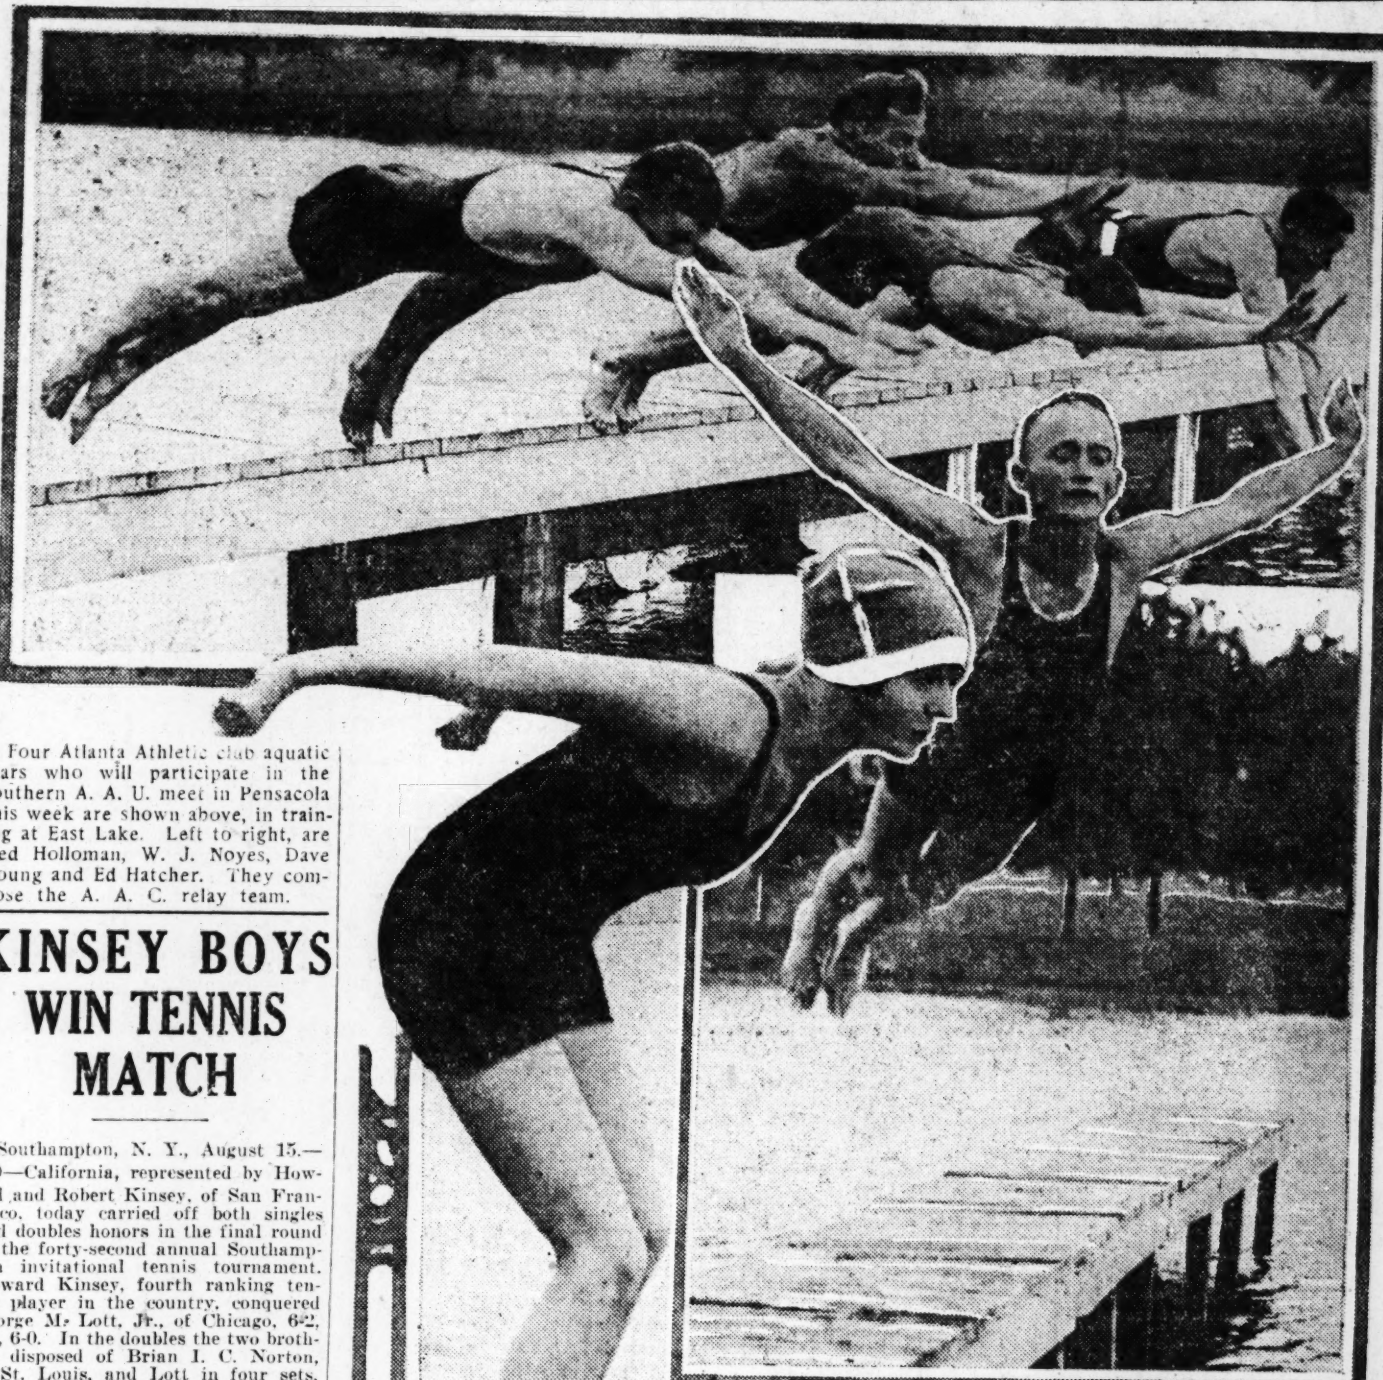

DOUBLE HEADER AT FORT TODAY

Two games are scheduled today at Fort McPherson when the 22nd infantry team and the Honor Feds tie up in the opening afternoon at 1:45 o'clock. The second game will bring together the Atlanta Black Crackers and the 24th infantry team from Fort Benning.

The 22nd infantry team, which recently returned from Camp McClellan, has consolidated with the 24th team of Fort McPherson. Last Sunday this new team defeated the Black and White Club company team.

The Black Crackers have just returned from a road trip which they won 18 out of 21 games. Their record for this season is 48 games won out of 55 played. The second game will be played between evenly-matched teams, the 24th infantry having an almost equal record. A section of the grandstand has been reserved for colored people.

Represent A. A. C. in Southern A. A. U. Swimming Meet

Sportively Speaking

H.C. HAMILTON
The Crackers' Crusade.
The Dope Gives Us Edge.
Plenty of Road Games.

THE most important period in the career of the 1925 Crackers meets today when they disembark at New Orleans. Whether they win or lose the Southern association pennant for this year rests entirely with them and the failings of the representatives of Louisiana.

The advantage, if such a thing can be said to exist, rests entirely with the Atlantics, for they have completed 123 of their scheduled 154 baseball games while the Pelicans have played only 118 games. This means that five games which have either been won or lost by the Crackers still are to be played by the Pelicans.

ONE might say that a condition which gives the Pelicans five more games to play also would give them an advantage, since they are out in front, but that depends altogether upon the angle from which you view it. If you are a partisan of New Orleans you may believe that the Pelicans will win a majority of these contests and thus draw out, but if you belong to the Atlanta cheering section you may believe, or hope, that the Pelicans will be pressed so hard they will drop them.

As for the opinion of your humble correspondent, if it amounts to anything, I believe in figuring double-headers. At least two of these double-jointed affairs must be played by the league leaders to catch up with the Crackers in the matter of games played, and there may be three of them. It takes a baseball club's pitching staff to play twice in an afternoon. It is hard to win two games in a single day. And the Crackers have not a single postponed game on their schedule.

THE only thing worrisome to the Crackers is their wild dash about the circuit carded now. They start off with a series of three games with New Orleans, beginning today, but with the winning percentage they have compiled at home the Crackers should put up a valiant fight for every run manufactured in that series. They should win a majority of the games, which would put them in a point or so of the league leadership.

Following the New Orleans test the Crackers will journey to Chattanooga for four games, then to Nashville for two, Little Rock for two, Memphis for two, Birmingham for three, and Mobile for three. They are back home after that to finish the season, with the exception of a single game to be played in Mobile on a Sunday after the return home.

Only nine games remain to be played at home, and of these, four will be with New Orleans. Therefore out of 31 contests the home crew faces are seven with New Orleans. If they cannot bump off the Pelicans in a majority of these no flag will fly from the Spiller's field staff this year. The pennant race depends clearly upon the outcome of the present trip.

NO Cracker fan should feel the slightest trepidation over the forthcoming crusade. Seven straight games are laid behind the local entry in a wide swath. They not only have played smart baseball since their return to the home ballpark, but they also have averaged almost five runs per ball game, a thing which will win in a great many cases. Add to this the fact that every game won has seen good pitching, with the possible exception of one contest, and you have the answer to what makes a good ball club.

Any club which combines run-getting with fairly good fielding and fairly good pitching is a club which cannot be passed by in the game of pennant guessing. We choose to believe the Atlanta club is on its way. We choose to believe that the Michalove crack is about due in New Orleans. The Michalove crack consists of a break in the Pelican ball club, a break he insists is due at least once in every club, no matter in what league it plays.

Caldwell and Robertson Successful in Attempt To Retain Doubles Crown

Asheville, N. C., August 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—On the brow of a cool, calm and certain rangy youth from Louisville, Ky., Ed Pfeiffer, the crown of singles champion of southern tennis will rest for the coming year. But in his achievement today of this goal, the highest in the southland, he defeated a player whose ability and force is not questioned, that player being F. C. "Hop" Owens, Atlanta, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3.

Although Owens failed to take any of the glory back to his Georgia city, his running mate and former singles champion, Jack Caldwell, and his partner, Julian Robertson, of Greenville, S. C., successfully defended their doubles title, but only after one of the most thrilling and interesting matches of the tournament, winning from Owens and Douglas Watters, of Mulberry, Fla., 6-8, 7-9, 6-3, 6-4, 9-7. The decisive set of the match was full of thrills from start to finish and only through Robertson's smashing service and Caldwell's scintillating court play was the victory made possible.

In the finals of the mixed doubles Miss Coxe and Berry Grant defeated Miss Williamson and Pott, 7-5, 2-6, 6-0, after they had won the right of the finals by eliminating Jack Caldwell and Huggins, in the morning, 6-3, 6-4, 6-1, 6-0. Miss Williamson, of Atlanta, defeated Myers, of Mobile, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3, 4-6, 6-0 in five sets of grueling tennis for the singles consolation.

"Hop" Owens was generally conceded to have the edge in the finals of the singles against Pfeiffer, as he had disposed of a brilliant star, Douglas Watters, in the semifinals yesterday afternoon, and many believed that Pfeiffer was playing over his head when he eliminated Jack Caldwell, the defending champion, yesterday afternoon. This prediction failed to hold true for the Kentuckian had the better of the match from start to finish.

The Atlanta Athletic club swimming team, composed of well known amateur swimming stars in Atlanta, has been hard at work for the past few weeks getting ready for the Southern A. A. U. swimming meet to be held at Pensacola, Fla., on Friday and Saturday of this week. Junior events will be held on the first day and the senior events will be held on the second day.

Several strong teams have been entered in the meet with an annual event in the south. The Birmingham Athletic club has entered a good team, and the team from Memphis Athletic club will be watching during the meet.

The events on the program are 50-yard dash, free style; the 100-yard dash, free style; the 220-yard swim, free style; the 400-yard swim, free style; the 800-yard swim, free style; the 100-yard breast stroke, and the 440-yard relay.

The Athletic club relay team is composed of Ed Hatcher, Bill Noyes, Dave Young, and Red Holloman. This team has been in several meets this year and has not yet been beaten. Miss Virginia Ashe, southern women champion, and one of the outstanding stars of the Athletic club has produced, and will accompany the team to compete in the women's events.

In Dave Young, Boys' High tank star, the Athletic club has a swimmer who in future years should develop into a sectional star of ability. Young holds the southern record on the 220-yard free style swim, and also swims on the relay team. He was high point man in the prep swimming meet this spring, and will probably score a larger number of points for the Athletic club at Pensacola this week.

JACKETS BEAT CANTON NINE

Marietta, Ga., August 15.—(Special.)—Marietta defeated Canton here today in the last of the series, 5 to 3. Marietta led the Canton team, 3 to 2, until the last of the eighth inning.

Several champions and former champions are in the list. Besides Jones there will be Fred Lamprecht, of Cleveland, of Abbeville, S. C., Thompson, of Toronto, Laurel Upson, of Sacramento, Cal., Elliott Whitebread, of St. Louis, and Walter J. Feagans, of Abbeville, S. C.

The game was rather listless up until the eighth inning. Edwards hurried a good game for the Marietta, giving up only seven safeties, but his teammates gave him loose support, committing five miscues. Laird, in the fifth, for the Canton team, was touched rather freely, the Jacket slugs getting to him for 13 hits.

The Jackets will go to Tate Tuesday to play the second game of the series. One of the contenders for the state championship among the semi-pro teams is Georgia.

For the first time in history a representative of the Pacific coast fought his way through the final at Marietta, Pa., last year, Jones conquering George Von Elm, of the Rancho club, Los Angeles, by 10 and 8.

Rumanian Envoy Urges Funding Of Debt to U. S.

Bucharest, Rumania, August 15.—(P)—Prince Antoine Bibesco, Rumanian minister to the United States, who has arrived here from Washington, is understood to have strongly urged upon the government the necessity of funding Rumania's war debt to the United States. He also has recommended an early settlement of the claims of Rumania Locomotive company against Rumania.

Prince Bibesco has had long conferences with Foreign Minister Dica and with Prime Minister Bratianu, whom he saw in Paris, and he is said to have informed both officials that Rumania cannot hope to float a loan in the United States until a debt settlement is made.

Rumania's total indebtedness to the United States on May 16 was $46,508,661.17, with $2,057,494.22 having been paid on account. Early in July Prince Bibesco was instructed by his government to return to Bucharest to discuss the debt situation.

The claims of the Baldwin Locomotive company against the Rumanian government for locomotives delivered in 1919-20, and in March the concern started suit in the Rumanian courts to recover the outstanding balance of approximately $2,000,000, which was due. In February it was reported from Bucharest that a definitive agreement to liquidate this debt was expected.

JAZZ GIRL FACES SCHOOL OF REFORM IF FREED BY JURY

San Francisco, August 15.—(P)—Dorothy Ellington, 17-year-old matron, will not go free even though the jury of seven women and five men before whom she is on trial returns a verdict of not guilty.

Her father, Joseph Ellington, sent a letter to J. C. Astredo, chief probation officer, directing, in event of acquittal, that Dorothy be taken into custody as a ward of the juvenile court and that she be sent to a reformatory until she is 21.

The case was adjourned last night until Monday when additional defense witnesses will be called in support of the theory of temporary insanity.

Guardian Life Head Believed To Have Set New Insurance Record

E. A. Gillespie, president of the Guardian Life Leaders' club and Guardian Life agent at Shreveport, La., established what is believed to be a world's record when he presented 101 applications for insurance written in one day by himself to the annual convention of the club in Chicago, early in the week.

Frank B. Lowe is the Atlanta manager for the Guardian Life and made announcement Saturday of Mr. Gillespie's feat. As over two-thirds of the applicants were new policyholders, everyone at the convention was of the opinion that Gillespie's feat is a world record. It started the life insurance world and threw the convention into an uproar.

KINSEY BOYS WIN TENNIS MATCH

Southampton, N. Y., August 15.—(P)—California, represented by Howard and Robert Kinsey, of San Francisco, today carried off both singles and doubles honors in the final round of the forty-second annual Southampton, N. Y., tennis tournament.

Howard Kinsey, fourth ranking tennis player in the country, conquered George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago, 6-2, 6-4, 6-0. In the doubles the two brothers disposed of Brian L. C. Norton, of St. Louis, and Lott in four sets, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-1.

California emerged victorious in still another match when Irvin Weinman, of San Francisco captured the singles consolation final by defeating J. J. Lezard, captain of the Oxford-Cambridge team, 7-5, 6-4.

Kinsey was in top form against Lott. He started out by varying the pace with a flawless ground strokes that had Lott chasing from side to side.

The ground was soft from an early morning rain and the Californians' service shots to the base line barely came off the ground. Lott made the mistake of trying to return them with fast forehand drives, but Kinsey had the better of the exchange and Lott experienced great difficulty.

The sixth game of the 2nd set developed the crucial moment of the match, after Lott had obtained a 1-4 lead. It was at this stage that the Californians showed his mettle. The court craftsman came on with a terrific onslaught of loop drives, volleys and chop strokes to even the count at 4 all.

Here Lott made his last stand. He stormed the net in a final endeavor to take the lead, but Kinsey pressed him with back hand placements which fairly whistled down the line.

Norton and Lott played their best tennis in the first set. Lott was slightly overhauled, while Norton turned seemingly impossible recoveries into winning points. They broke through the Californians and won the first set, 6-3.

Trailing at 1-3 in the second set, the Kinseys began their march to victory. Lott began to show signs of wear, and Kinsey became more brilliant with every game.

Norton was broken through and the Kinseys won the second set, 6-2. The Californians went after their opponents with renewed vigor and their team play was perfect. They took the set and the aggressive. Bob Kinsey electrified the gallery with his spectacular volleying, and the third and fourth sets were quickly decided in favor of the Californians.

HOLMAN WINS JUNIOR TITLE

Chicago, August 15.—(P)—Craus-ton Holman, of San Francisco, won the first national junior tennis title ever to go to the Pacific coast today when he defeated Harris Coggeshall, of Des Moines, in straight sets, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2.

It took Holman, who squeezed into the junior this year by a scant six days, just 30 minutes to run out three sets for the championship.

Walter Thomas, of Elmore, N. J., and Frank Shields, of New York City, were the national boys' doubles champions at the South Side Tennis club here today by defeating Bertram Walker, of Harrisburg, Pa., and LeRoy Voorhees, of Cincinnati, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4.

ANCHOR FEDS WIN, 10 TO 6

The Anchor Feds defeated Union City 10-6 today in a six-inning game by a 10-to-6 score. The game was called on account of darkness. Stonecipher hurled a good game for the winners, giving up only six hits, while his team-mates touched Gentry, the opposing hurler, for 15 hits.

Shropshire, Fed second baseman, led the hitting attack for his team, getting three hits out of three trips to the plate. Deck, playing third base, also hit well, getting three out of four, one of them a triple.

PELICANS LOSE FLOYD WHEELER

Mobile, Ala., August 15.—Floyd Wheeler, right-hand pitcher, obtained by the New Orleans, Southern association club, from the Wichita Falls club, of the Texas league, left Mobile today for his home in Kentucky.

Wheeler notified Manager Larry Gilbert, of the Pelicans, that he was through as a pitcher for this season on account of a bad arm and could not be of any use to the ball club.

Gilbert announced today that negotiations were under way for a high class pitcher to help him in the pennant fight.

LINDALE BEATS LAFAYETTE, 10-0

Lindale, August 15.—(Special.)—Lindale administered the white-wash to Lafayette here today in a fast and snappy game, which ended, 10 to 0. White, pitching for Lindale, gave the Walker county aggregation only four hits. Lindale batters secured 13 hits off Carter and Loughbridge, and made only two errors, while Lafayette made five. Today's game made a total of 55 during the season that Lindale has played, having won 30 and lost 10.

WHEELER BEATS LAFAYETTE, 10-0

Mobile, Ala., August 15.—Floyd Wheeler, right-hand pitcher, obtained by the New Orleans, Southern association club, from the Wichita Falls club, of the Texas league, left Mobile today for his home in Kentucky.

Wheeler notified Manager Larry Gilbert, of the Pelicans, that he was through as a pitcher for this season on account of a bad arm and could not be of any use to the ball club.

New Orleans First Foe On Pennant Excursion; Team Shows New Life

Travels Seventeen Seasons at Top Speed

BY S. J. GLASSMAN.

NEW OLDSMOBILES DISPLAYED BY BRIGHT

Enhanced beauty, more power and substantial mechanical betterments in face of a drastic reduction in prices of the Oldsmobile six were announced recently by the Olds Motor Works, Lansing, Mich. The latest Oldsmobile has low, racy lines and is finished in two-color Duco. Distinct individuality is expressed in its appearance, due to well proportioned lines and harmonious color combinations. Price reductions on some models are as great as $290 a car.

A wide panel formed by moldings separates the two colors and runs around the body back of the cowl. The lower molding is continued forward to the radiator shell. This paneling not only increases the beauty of the body but also emphasizes the long, low lines of the car. The fenders have been deepened, this also adding to the beauty of the assembly. The touring and sport touring are finished in two-tone Duco. Below the molding, which runs around the car to both sides of the radiator shell, the color is an attractive shade of Russian brown. Above the molding the shading is moleskin gray, which forms a panel strip along the sides of the car and a saddle over the top of the hood. Red striping just under the molding, on the louvers and on the spokes of the wheels forms a pleasing contrast. Both the touring and sport touring cars are upholstered in genuine gray Spanish leather.

The coach and de luxe coach are finished in Russian gray Duco. There is a double molding, the lower heading extending out to the radiator shell. Fin green striping sets off the panel formed by this molding, as well as the hood louvers and wheel spokes. The finish above the upper molding is black Duco. The upholstery is a neutral shade of heavy cord plush.

The sedan and de luxe sedan have an attractive aquamarine blue finish with white striping to set off the panel, hood louvers and wheel spokes. These, also, have a double molding, and are finished in black Duco above the panel thus formed. Heavy cord plush is used for the upholstery. These models have an instrument board gasoline gauge.

The de luxe or sport models are fully equipped with disc wheels, trunk rack, black enameled trunk, luggage rails, bumpers, kick plates, motor, rear vision mirror, snubbers all around, and spot light. The sport touring has windshield wings, and natural wood wheels are optional.

Adoption of 21-inch balloon tire wheels—wood for standard and disc steel for de luxe and sport models—and changes in the springs and spring shackles have resulted in bringing the bodies closer to the ground, adding to beauty and riding comfort. The overall length of the coach body has been increased. This makes the coach even more roomy than formerly. Doors of both coaches are wider and have been widened. Clutch pedal pressure has been reduced, which together with lengthened gear shift lever, makes gear shifting easy and reduces engine power application.

Several refinements in the power plant have served to increase the power of the Oldsmobile six cylinder engine, at the same time increasing its economy of operation. A new type of light cast iron piston is now used, with two compression rings and one oil regulating ring. This installation incorporates the newest features of automobile engine lubrication. The inlet valves have been enlarged, the valve lift increased and the cams given an improved contour, all resulting in smoother operation and greater power.

One of the major refinements in the power plant is the use of silent chain drive instead of gears for the operation of the cam shaft and generator. This change results in very quiet engine operation. The Carter carburetor is now used, giving greatly increased power throughout the entire driving range, especially in quick acceleration from low speeds.

Additional strength has been given the frame by the use of a tubular front cross member instead of one of pressed steel. Several other mechanical changes have been made to increase the strength and stamina of the chassis.

The many advancements found in the latest Oldsmobile which give additional beauty, comfort and mechanical performance, combined with a sharp price reduction, are illustrative of the constant and exhaustive research work being done by progressive automobile companies to improve their product. They also show why the automobile today is lower priced, in comparison with the purchasing power of the 1925 dollar, than any other kind of merchandise.

It was only through the installation of the latest time and labor-saving manufacturing methods, many of which were devised by Oldsmobile engineers, together with increased output, that this latest Oldsmobile was made possible at the new low prices. The prices are: touring, $875; coach, $950; sport touring, $980; sedan, $1,025; de luxe coach, $1,040; de luxe sedan, $1,115.

BODY CRAFTSMANSHIP FEATURE OF NEW BUICKS

Buick again demonstrates the marvelous resources and abilities of the automotive industry when it introduced the present better Buick. Embodied in this latest Buick offering are additional power and strength, the newest engineering achievements designed to give even longer motor car life, the maximum in comfort and safety, besides new beauty and refinement of design and finish representing the latest skill in body craftsmanship. And in face of these material and costly improvements lower prices are announced throughout the entire line of standard and master sizes.

The announcement and the showing of the better Buicks silenced the rumors that Buick would abandon the valve-in-head for another type engine which would permit of cheaper construction. The same principles that were inaugurated by Buick 21 years ago and which have made it the leader in the industry have been adhered to throughout.

The mechanical improvements introduced would have been considered impossibilities only a year ago. They represent the work of Buick research and engineering staffs constantly striving for betterments.

The new prices likewise represent achievements of the engineering, production and business departments of the Buick organization, and are in no small measure due to the phenomenal approval of Buicks by the public. This latter factor has resulted in continuously increasing sales with the attendant possibilities of economies in purchasing and production.

The complete line includes 16 models, six in the standard six and ten in the master six class. In all cases the distinctive Buick lines have been continued with refinements such as the rounding radiator lines and the addition of streamline moldings. All are finished in new and beautiful tones of durable Duco. Some of the models have Duo-tone finish in distinctive combinations. All closed bodies are by Fisher and are upholstered in quality plush.

Buick has always been noted for its sealed chassis, which prevents dirt or water entering any of the moving parts. Now it has added an air cleaner, oil filter and gasoline strainer. Buick's masterpiece, the standard Buick, combined with the standard Buick, represents the latest in automobile engineering. The possibility of any foreign substance entering the engine or moving parts of the chassis, and consequently, minimizing requirements and add to the life of the car.

Because these three new units have no moving parts, there is nothing to wear out. The air filter, oil filter and power—in fact are thoroughly automatic, and require only occasional cleaning to remove the dirt and grime gathered from the air, fuel and oil.

Another feature of the better Buicks which adds to the ease of driving, and, therefore, to safety, is the exceptionally long gear shift lever. This lever comes to rest within a few inches of the steering wheel so that a driver's hand naturally drops on it.

Martyred Saint's Ashes Brought From Rome Rest In Convent at Cleveland

Cleveland, Ohio, August 15.—Bishop Joseph Shrembs, head of the Catholic diocese of Cleveland, has arrived here with the remains of Saint Christina, the virgin, which were given him by the pope.

The saint was a martyr to the Christian faith during the rule of the Roman Emperor Diocletian. Her remains will be enshrined at a new cathedral to be constructed here. They are to rest temporarily, however, in the convent of the Franciscan Sisters of Perpetual Adoration. They were brought to this country in a golden urn.

The shrine, to be the only one of its kind in the United States, will be visited by Roman Catholic pilgrims from all parts of the continent. The bishop was received with little ceremony when he arrived here after his extended pilgrimage to Rome and was escorted directly to the convent.

WHY MANUFACTURERS SECURED OIL FILTERER

BY B. H. ANIBEL,
Chief Engineer, Oakland Motor Car Company.

Friction is defined as the "resistance to motion due to the contact of surfaces." It is one of the many important problems automotive engineers have to combat, and it takes a heavy toll in power that otherwise would be productive, and in wear and tear.

Lubrication is our chief weapon against friction, and proper lubrication reduces frictional loss and wear to a minimum. When lubrication functions 100 per cent, moving metal surfaces do not touch. They are separated by a film of pure oil and the only friction is the rubbing of one layer of film against another layer.

Absolute perfection, however, is difficult to attain, and even when we approximate it in the lubrication systems of the better automobiles, there is another factor remaining. This is the contamination of the lubricant by the entrance of foreign particles.

An automobile engine resembles a human in that it tries "to eat a peck of dirt" during its lifetime. Minute particles of dirt and grit are constantly finding their way into the vitals of the engine through the air the carburetor breathes or via the gasoline line. Practically all of this dirt finds its way into the lubricant, either directly or after it is formed into carbon in the cylinders, and then breaks off and mixes with the oil. Naturally these particles of grit break the protective oil film and set up friction that wears cylinder walls, pistons, piston pins, connecting rods and crankshaft bearings.

To overcome this condition the new Oakland Six is equipped with an oil filter. This device has no moving parts and is entirely automatic. It consists of metal mesh and fabric through which the entire supply of engine lubricant passes several times and hour. The filtering material removes all dirt and foreign substances from the oil, returning it to the crankcase purified. Test cars driven thousands of miles showed better performance and less wear when the filter was in use. The amount of dirt collected from the oil surprised even engineers who knew a considerable quantity would be found.

In addition to this newest method of bettering lubrication, the Oakland has an enlarged oil pan with an oil screen built its full length. There is space under the screen for the accumulation of water, which gets into the oil through condensation of moisture in the air, so that in the event of this water freezing in cold weather the ice found is below the level of the oil pump. The oil pressure regulator is located in the center of the crankcase, where it insures full uniform pressure and is accessible for adjustment.

The oil duct in the crankshaft is a continuous passage the length of the crankshaft, constructed without any oil tubes. Oil is fed through each of the three main bearings into this passage, equalizing the pressure and flow of oil to all bearings, both main and connecting rod. Leads from the oil distributing system also go direct to all the camshaft bearings and the timing chain and sprocket. The use of pressure feed to the connecting rod bearings through holes drilled in the crankshaft provides positive lubrication.

This careful attention to correct lubrication is helping solve the problems brought up by that greatest enemy of automobile engines—friction.

Hudson-Essex Build 30,000 Cars In Month of July

With more than 30,000 cars manufactured and sold in July, the Hudson Motor Car company shattered all previous records for volume of business in the six-cylinder field, according to word received here by C. H. Becker, general manager for the J. W. Goldsmith, Jr.-Grant company, Hudson-Essex distributors.

This phenomenal output, it was declared, made July the seventh consecutive month in which Hudson-Essex has set new high marks for six-cylinder business. The volume of Hudson-Essex business is now said to be greater even than in July.

In line with this national Hudson-Essex six-cylinder leadership, the J. W. Goldsmith, Jr.-Grant company made July the banner month of the concern's history. Sales would have been even larger, it is declared, if deliveries could have been made to all those who wished cars. Summer ordinarily is a dull season, but the business Hudson-Essex cars have had in the past few weeks has proved this year the exception. Business is improving too, rather than falling off.

"The gratifying fact about this leadership is," said Mr. Becker, "that this great volume of business is no sudden spurt following a showing of new models, but is simply a growing continuance of business done for all of this year."

"It is simply a proof that the public regards Hudson-Essex cars, in their present design and at their present prices, as outstanding values in the motor car field. That feeling has been growing every day and every month. That belief grows not because of any particular features or talking points, but from the simplicity, reliability, all-round usefulness and value of the cars. The prices, of course, are exceptionally favorable—in my opinion, below all comparison."

"Leadership such as has been shown and consistently held by Hudson-Essex over a long period of time, is of particular importance because this city knows motor cars and motor car values better perhaps than any other in the country."

"The year 1925 has been a marvelously successful one. I fully expect the second half to be much better than the first."

MOON JULY SALES BIGGEST IN HISTORY

Sales of Moon cars during July were 50 per cent higher than in July, 1924, according to Frederick H. Hengst, general sales manager of the Moon Motor Car company, who said in an interview at the Moon plant today, "July has proven another record-breaking month for Moon car sales. Our sales for July, the month just ended, are 50 per cent greater than the sales of July of last year. This is in total cars. Shipping reports for July show that Moon cars have been shipped to the majority of the states in the United States, these shipments being well distributed over the seven body styles of the Moon cars. On nearly every day of the month of July there were at the factory a large number of dealers clamoring for cars and in many cases these dealers brought from two to five assistants with them in order to drive away the cars they had on order rather than have them shipped. As a result of this activity in the last 28 days the factory has had an unprecedented number of drive-aways to get ready for dealers as well as for a number of individuals who have come to the factory to drive away the cars they have purchased.

"Taking into consideration that the majority of the automobiles which we build are closed models and of the de luxe type, our dollars and cents business is far greater and I venture to say is almost 65 per cent greater than it was in July last year. This unusual sales record may be attributed largely to the automobile buying public's insistence upon a fine light-weight car of moderate price yet equal in style and performance and superior in economy and convenience to the heavy costly cars and to the Moon Motor Car company's new day policy of discontinuing yearly models. As is known this company has for several years advocated and had in effect such a policy in view of the oft demonstrated fact that the automobile buyer and owner are both looking more and more upon the automobile as an investment for a period of years. The Moon policy of adding only the essential improvements to its cars from time to time thus permitting the Moon car to retain its distinctive basic line has met with the unanimous approval of the Moon distributor and dealer organization. Such a policy has even more had the healthy effect of instilling confidence and of stimulating the entire Moon distributor and dealer organization with a tremendous sales effect with the resulting record-breaking sales of the past six months. The increase in Moon sales month by month is evidence of the fact that the public wants to put its money into a motor car whose model will not fade out a few months after the car has been purchased. It is true, however, that the public is ever alive to new inventions for motor cars, particularly when these new inventions are in the form of safety devices and when they add to the comfort of driving and riding in a motor car so that the automobile manufacturer must necessarily take into consideration the installation of such devices on the cars he manufactures. The Moon Motor Car company was one of the first automobile manufacturers to recognize this demand of the public and over 12 months ago equipped its cars with four-wheel hydraulic brakes, a new patented steering gear of the cam and lever type and balloon tires, all of this equipment being made standard and is still standard on its cars.

WILLYS-OVERLAND CUTS PRICES $50 TO $200

A general price reduction from $50 to $200 on the Willys-Knight sixes, $100 to $125 on the Willys-Knight four-cylinder line and a substantial price drop on the closed cars of the Overland line is announced by John N. Willys, president of Willys-Overland, Inc., who arrived in New York on the Adriatic on Sunday, following a two months' trip abroad in interest-of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

With new lines of exceptional beauty and all modern improvements, the Oakland six sedan is destined to become one of this company's most popular models. This with other new models are being displayed in the showrooms of the Oakland's local branch, 264 Peachtree street.

"These price reductions are made possible," said Mr. Willys, "by the greatest six months' volume of business ever done by Willys-Overland, and it is this great sales record that has enabled us to pass on to the public a still greater savings in the shape of reduced prices." The new prices on Willys-Overland products include: on the above, President Willys announced a substantial price reduction on all closed models of the Overland four-cylinder line. The new prices of these cars include $605 for the all-steel sedan de luxe, $645 for the standard sedan, and $625 for the all-steel coupe. All new prices as announced by Mr. Willys are f. o. b. AIR CLEANER FEATURED ON MANY NEW MODELS

The adoption of air cleaners on many of the 1926 models brought out by some of the leading manufacturers is attracting widespread attention.

Exhaustive tests have shown the necessity for such a device, a typical one having been the running of cars for a distance of 25,000 miles, under ordinary road driving conditions, with and without air cleaners.

It was found that the cars not equipped with an air cleaner accumulated a heavy carbon deposit and the average wear of the cylinder walls, piston rings, etc., was seventeen one-thousandths of an inch, while the cars equipped with air cleaners had a very slight deposit of carbon and only a wear of one one-thousandth of an inch on the same motor parts.

This seventeen times greater motor wear on the cars without an air cleaner brings out forcibly the great need for this device.

The improved performance and reduction of wear is due to the elimination by the air cleaner of the highly abrasive road dust from the air which is taken into the carburetor. This results in greater economy, not only through reduction of wear, but also through making unnecessary the frequent removal of carbon.

Announcement has just been made by Buick, Nash and Oakland that their 1926 models will be equipped with the AC air cleaner, a centrifugal type having no moving parts and one which is claimed to have a permanent cleaning efficiency.

MARMON INTRODUCES NEW VICTORIA COUPE

An addition to the Marmon line of closed cars selling at practically open-car cost—the Victoria coupe for four passengers—has just been announced by the Nordike & Marmon company, manufacturers of Marmon motor cars, according to W. C. Denny, sales manager, for the Marmon Atlanta company.

Brought out in response to a public demand for a car of this type, the Victoria coupe is distinguished by its heavy and unusually attractive lines. The Victoria coupe is roomy but at the same time comfortably compact. Ample leg room has been provided without sacrificing a suitable seating arrangement or in any way giving an appearance of bulkiness to the car.

As in other models of the series 74 line, the sun visor on the Victoria coupe is a graceful continuation of the top line. The windshield is in one piece, giving an ample view in all directions and insuring safety. The rear quarter is in black rough-grained leather with landau irons on each side. Distinctive rear quarter windows have been provided with provision made for lowering the right rear quarter glass. The glass in the two doors lowers flush with the side.

The driver's seat can be reached without bothersome "climbing over" from either side of the car. To the right and a few inches to the rear of the driver's seat is a comfortably upholstered seat for two passengers. Directly in the rear of the driver's seat is a storage compartment for small parcels. An auxiliary seat, richly upholstered, is located to the right of the driver's seat and is slightly under the roof when not in use.

Ample storage space has been provided. In addition to the parcel compartment in the interior of the car there is a large rear deck compartment suitable for carrying luggage, sports equipment, etc. An unusually attractive feature for golfers is a golf bag compartment of generous proportions in the left corner of the rear deck when extended beneath the seat and is so constructed that the golf bag and sticks can be carried safely without interfering with the use of the rear deck for other storage purposes.

The Victoria coupe is upholstered in broadcloth of a pin stripe, brown pattern. Three color combinations of Duco are offered.

The Victoria coupe is mounted on the standard Marmon chassis of 126-inch wheelbase, with dependable Marmon six-cylinder motor.

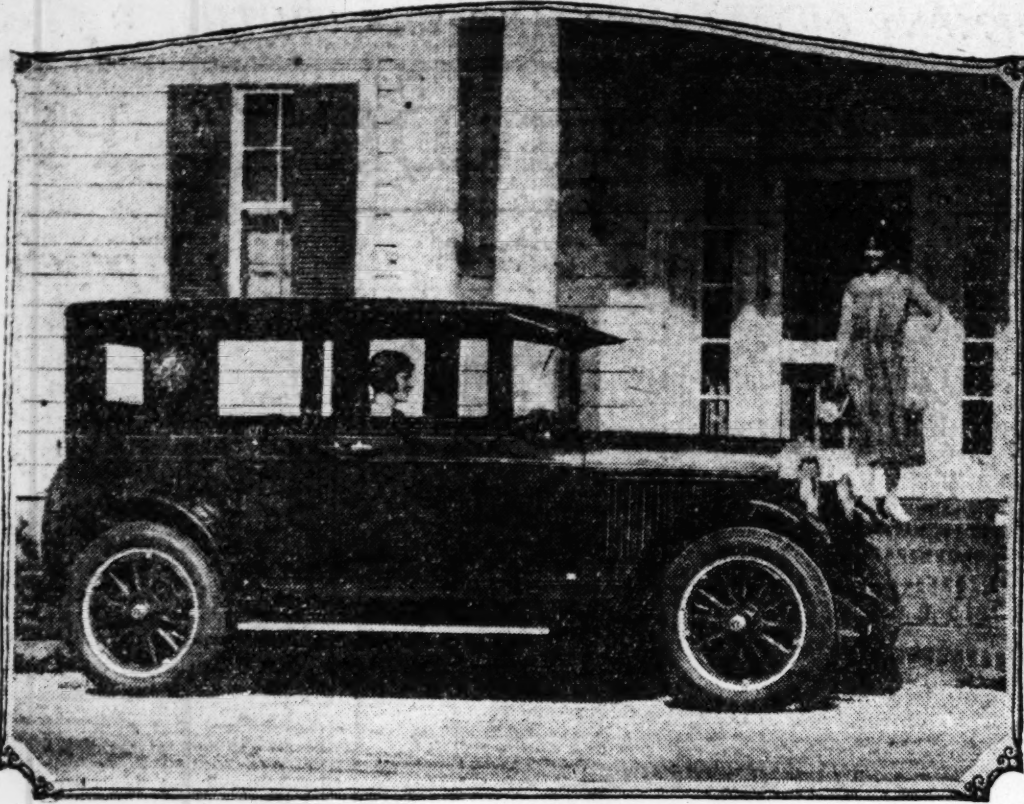

HOLMES INSTITUTE OPENING DAY SET

Plans are complete for the fall opening of the Holmes institute September 8. Advance registration is the largest in the history of the institution, its leaders point out. According to the number of students who have registered the management of the institute will not be in the position to accommodate the applicants unless other arrangements are made for the enlargement of the boarding department, it is said.

Special arrangement will be made for patrons who have more than one student. The boarding department will open September 1.

All students will be given a trade aside from the regular course. All girls will be given a course in domestic science and sewing.

MOTOR CAR BUYING HABITS CHANGING

Back from a 9,000-mile trip through the United States to observe business conditions in the automobile industry, L. E. Corcoran, general sales manager of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company, declares that the motor car buying habits of the public have undergone a pronounced change.

"In contrast with former years, automobile sales this year have continued at high levels during the summer months," said Mr. Corcoran.

"This is one of the several evidences that the unhealthy condition of peak buying activity in spring and fall and sales stagnation in midwinter and midsummer is rapidly being wiped out."

"Buyers in increasing numbers are coming to the conclusion that it is just as sensible to buy in one month as it is in another, regardless of the season."

"The habit of buying in the spring is a heritage from the old days when there were few closed cars and automobiles were suitable only for fair weather driving. The ability of manufacturers to produce all-season closed cars at prices close to those of open models has changed all this."

"The habit of buying in early fall was the result of the unbecoming practice of some makers of announcing radical changes and new models in mid-summer. The more stable manufacturers for several years have been pursuing the sound policy of continuously making gradual improvements and refinements without announcing yearly models. Buyers of cars built under such a policy know that they will not be subjected to artificial depreciation losses and therefore do not hesitate to buy in any month of the year."

Mr. Corcoran, who spent several weeks on the Pacific coast, reported that the Pierce-Arrow sales throughout the country continue to mount, especially with the stimulation which resulted from the introduction of the new Pierce-Arrow coach.

"Our enlarged distributing organization is selling cars so rapidly that the shipments during July were more than 400 per cent ahead of shipments one year ago," said Mr. Corcoran.

SECOND WARDERS PLAN TO ORGANIZE NEW CIVIC CLUB

There will be a meeting held at the Pryor street school at 8 o'clock Tuesday night for the purpose of organizing a civic improvement club for the second ward.

"Now that the vicinities are assured and the prospective new city hall practically assured, Atlanta is on the eve of substantial advancement and the citizens of the second ward desire to lend their aid to all movements looking forward to the betterment of Atlanta," the announcement reads.

All men and women interested in Atlanta and the second ward are urged to attend.

ATLANTA MERCHANTS ORGANIZING STATE

With the object of organizing what will be known as the Georgia State Retail Merchants' association, the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association for three months has been cooperating with The Southern Merchant, a trade magazine, according to an announcement Saturday by officials of the local organization.

The Atlanta Retail Merchants' association is composed of approximately 500 leading representative merchants of the city. Officials of the local organization announce a great deal of successful work has been completed along the lines of organization and quite a number of local city organizations in other parts of Georgia similar to the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association have indicated their intention of joining the Georgia State Retail Merchants' association. A number of leading individual retail merchants in sections where no local associations exist also have signified their intention of becoming members, it is said.

The proposed Georgia State Retail Merchants' association is not to be confused with any other supposed or proposed state association of retail merchants, officials state. It has no connection with any other effort to organize the retail merchants of Georgia into an association.

NEW CADILLACS GET SPLENDID RECEPTION

Hundreds of congratulatory telegrams received by Lynn McNaughton, vice president and general sales manager of the Cadillac Motor Car company, from distributors, dealers and owners in all parts of the country, reveal that the reception given the new Cadillac, recently announced, surpassed that ever given a Cadillac car.

The company reported yesterday that according to the telegram, production demands will surpass any ever before made and that output is rapidly moving forward to the highest point ever achieved by the Cadillac organization.

Among outstanding comments from the public is one as to how the company succeeded in building what a demonstration convinces to be the finest Cadillac ever produced at a price lower than that of its predecessors. The telegrams also reveal an almost universal comment on the car's greater performance, easier riding, greater simplicity in construction and more aristocratic appearance.

"Cadillac's decision relative to its standard and custom-built models is also meeting a splendid response from the public," Mr. McNaughton said. "The smart, new lines of its custom models are making an individual appeal, while the standard line of cars has been immediately recognized as enlarging the Cadillac clientele."

McNaughton declares that crowded showrooms, an enthusiastic public and heavy sales followed immediately the new car's first announcement in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Atlanta, Orleans, Kansas City and other cities near cross the country, report a record attendance at the first showing.

At the Don Lee organization reports an attendance of many thousands of persons in three days and more than 250 retail orders. From Jacksonville, Fla., Claude Nolan, the distributor, wired 193 orders. The Towell-Cadillac company, of Cleveland, took 41 orders. Ahrens & Ahrens, in Spokane, Wash., report their organization first shipment sold within 3-1/2 hours following its unloading. The Northwestern Cadillac company, of Minneapolis, Minn., reported that the new Cadillac history. Salesrooms have been continuously crowded. Inquiries are being received by mail, telephone and telegraph from all over the northwest. The car has literally taken this section by storm."

Legislative Courtesy Has Irresistible Appeal to Solons

Legislative courtesy possesses an irresistible power in passing local legislation. But when two members, on opposite sides of the same bill, both appeal to that aforesaid legislative courtesy, what are poor committee members to do?

That is the situation in which the highways committee of the house found itself Wednesday night when it took under consideration a bill, introduced as a local measure by Representative Ramsey, of Habersham.

Opposition was voiced by Representative Logan, of Banks, who said it affected his county also and asked that it be adverse—as a matter of legislative courtesy.

Habersham and Banks are adjoining counties. It seemed that Banks wanted a road improved which crosses the county line. The town of Baldwin, in Habersham county, wanted Clarence Burke has returned from the road closed. And the bill by Representative Ramsey would have allowed this. He said Banks county could build the road if it liked—up to the county line, but no further.

And Representative Logan said, "What is the use of a road if it is no good that doesn't go anywhere?"

Representative Ramsey argued that there was a good state highway taking the place of the road in question, only 814 feet longer. Representative Logan said the state road included a dangerous corner and a bad grade. Representative Ramsey said the road Banks county wanted improved was under water in rainy season.

And so on, pro and con.

When it came time to vote various members of the committee asked to be excused from voting on the ground that two cases of "legislative courtesy" clashed. The chairman asked that whatever the result members avoid a tie vote, which would have left the decision to him.

Finally, with many expressions that they were not voting on the virtues of the bill, but merely "passing the buck" to the house to decide, the committee voted, 11 to 4, to report the bill out with a recommendation it do pass.

But only, they assured Representative Logan, in order that the fight might be settled on the floor of the house. And, it is expected, when the bill does reach the floor there will be no speeches except those of Ramsey and Logan themselves.

MAFFETT EXPLAINS VALUE OF GOOD WILL

The advertisement "world wide good will," which recently appeared on poster boards and in magazines and newspapers everywhere, has called forth much discussion of the true value to a business of that highly prized yet intangible asset known as "good will."

"The 'good will' of every owner," says F. E. Maffett, local Dodge Brothers dealer, "is an ideal which has dominated the policy of manufacturer and dealer alike ever since the first car carrying the name of Dodge Brothers was designed. Public confidence in the policies back of the car was as eagerly sought as confidence in the car itself."

"Important among these original policies back of Dodge Brothers' good will—sound policies which will be followed as long as Dodge Brothers motor car is built—is the principle of concentrating on the perfection of a single chassis."

"Production of an endless series of annual models was regarded as an unsound policy, a policy at wide variance with the avowed purpose of winning world-wide good will."

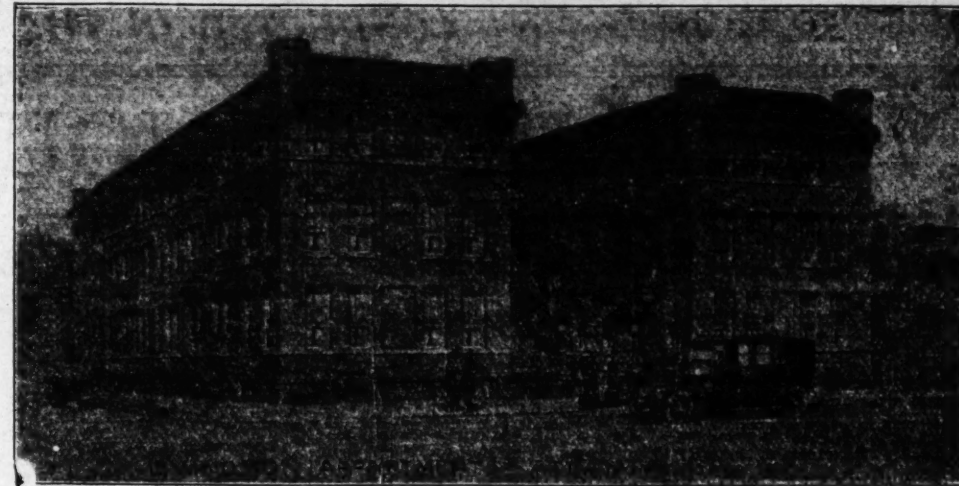

"The slogan 'Constantly improved'—but no yearly model!—announced the policy clearly and showed the public exactly what they were buying when they chose cars bearing Dodge Brothers' name."

"Not once in well over ten years has the car failed to uphold and enhance its reputation for faithful performance. Not once have Dodge Brothers departed from their announced intention of supplying a product of consistent goodness and continued betterment without recourse to the policy of an endless series of annual models to stimulate sales."

EGYPTIAN AUTO FINISH PROVES REAL WORTH

Verily, all that shines is not gold. Many automobiles which a person believes has only been driven from the show room may have run several thousand miles. The good looks comes from a fresh coating with the famous Egyptian lacquer finish, handled in Atlanta by A. L. Quinn company, at 661 Whitehall street, West End, and many factories have adopted their finish as standard.

This finish, which its users claim not only will not crack but will grow in beauty and glowing colors with each rubbing, has made tremendous inroads into the auto painting and finishing business in Atlanta.

Durable, fresh in its appearance and glistening, Egyptian lacquer finish adds that touch which comes only with the use of a preparation which years of study and experimentation has brought to a finished product.

Drenching rains, chilling blasts or a blazing sun not only does not affect this finish but actually seems to add to its looks and service when the car is rubbed off or polished lightly. It is made in all colors and only the average time is required to apply it and before the car is ready for use again.

The A. L. Quinn company's reputation for auto painting and finishing, top upholstery and seat cover work, biddered over many years of service to the public, is behind the Egyptian finish. This well established firm vouches for the durability and service and lasting quality of the "softer and better finish." This guarantee from an old Atlanta firm is indicative of the faith of those who sell it and use it.

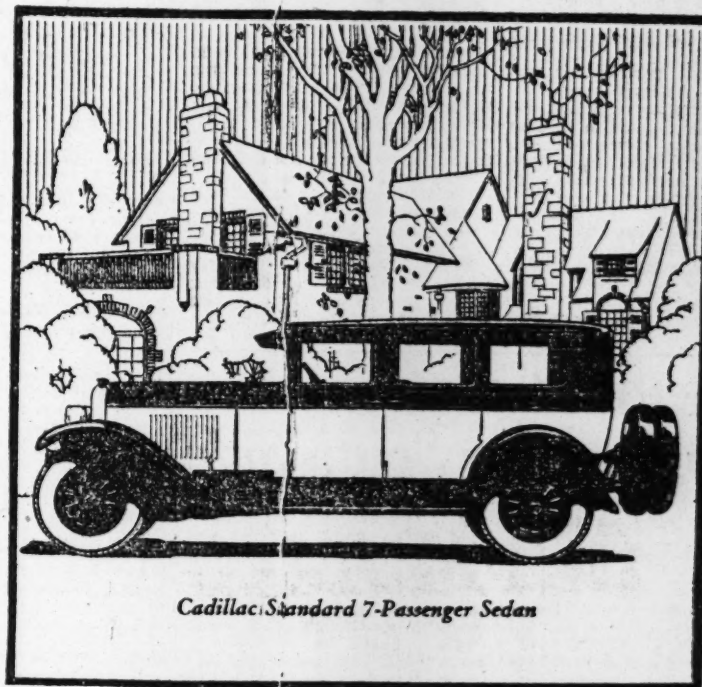

Experienced employees of the Quinn company are at the service of customers at all times. Those who know Egyptian lacquer need no sale talk. Those who are interested in the new finish which is taking such firm hold in this section will find courteous salesmen who will be pleased to go over the merits of the new finishing process. This service is maintained for use of the public and whether interested in Egyptian lacquer, or upholstery work or seat covers, one will find the Quinn plant always at their service.

Mr. Quinn is an Atlanta man and believes in Atlanta, has had factory experience in New York and for several years was connected with Atlanta Auto Top Trimming company as superintendent and is in business now for himself. His friends wish him much success.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

AVONDALE ANNOUNCES $500,000 BUILDING PROGRAM

Demand Continues Action For Sylvan Hills Homes

Announcing the sale of a large number of home sites and a big program of construction for Sylvan Hills, the J. R. Smith & M. S. Rankin company declares there is an increasing activity in this beautiful south side subdivision.

"We are paving Melrose drive and planning for the opening of this street between Sylvan road and Burns avenue," said O. A. Taylor, director of sales for Sylvan Hills. "We have sold a number of select home sites within the past week and we are making preparations for the growing activity that will surely result from the demand for homes in this part of the city."

Sylvan Hills is located in a beautiful section of the south side metropolitan district and is accessible via Stewart avenue and Sylvan road. The high, commanding position of the subdivision is high, commanding a splendid view of the city to the north. The lots are large and have been located with a view to convenient construction.

Many homes have been built in Sylvan Hills since its opening about a year and a half ago, and a large number of lots have been sold within the past season upon which owners will erect homes.

Sylvan Hills has many natural beauties, its gently rolling topography giving the landscaper the ground work for development. The subdivision has the usual civic improvements, including water, lights, gas, sewers and well-paved streets and walks. This tract is only a short distance from the business center and is reached by the Stewart avenue car line.

"It is a significant fact," said Mr. Taylor, "that practically every purchaser of home sites in Sylvan Hills bought the property for the purpose of erecting a home. The tract lies within a convenient distance of a number of industrial establishments, making it advantageous for home-owners among the industrial classes."

Sylvan Hills is beautifully wooded and with its high altitude is said to be one of the most pleasant spots in the city during the summer months. There are homes of various types in the subdivision, all of which are modern and attractive.

$140,000 in Country Estates Sold in Morningside

The sale of more than $140,000 worth of large sites for suburban estates in Morningside during the past week was announced Saturday by the J. R. Smith & M. S. Rankin company, through W. R. Sheppard, general manager of the company.

This remarkable series of sales indicates not only the popularity of the large home sites that have been opened by Smith & Rankin, but also shows the splendid demand for residential property in Atlanta.

The newly developed portion of Morningside, in which the large home sites, suitable for the making of country homes were prepared, is said to be one of the handsomest residential tracts in the north side district. Each of these "estates" has been prepared with a view to the erection of a single home to each "estate," and the tracts will permit only one dwelling to each "estate." This will insure harmony of the subdivision and a further restriction demand that homes must cost not less than $10,000 for actual construction.

The splendid demand for the "estates" in Morningside, according to Mr. Sheppard, has fully justified the company in reserving this portion of the development for suburban homes. A large number of the home sites have been taken by persons who contemplate erection of handsome dwellings at a cost of $10,000 to $15,000. The entire "estates" will be taken within a short time.

The usual improvements have been made in the "estates," including gas, electric lights, power, water, sewers and splendidly paved streets and walks. Landscapers have developed every natural beauty and advantage, and have rendered the tract charming in every way.

"The 'estates' are being taken in a most gratifying way," said Mr. Sheppard, "and we anticipate the building of many handsome homes within a short time. When these country homes are erected and the dwellings are peopled, this part of Morningside will become the most splendid residential development in the south."

Thrower Predicts Great Progress for South Side

Declaring that practically all the property owned by him on the south side is rented and that there is a good demand for large spaces suitable for warehouses or big business concerns in that section of the city, Marvin L. Thrower, head of the M. L. Thrower Realty company, gave out a statement concerning real estate and business conditions in Atlanta.

"The demand for south side space," said Mr. Thrower, "is such that I have been induced to erect a six-story building on a large lot on the south side. This new floor is rented for a term of years to the Southern Bell Telephone company and the other portion of the lot is leased to various other tenants with a waiting list for space in the building."

"The big building erected for the central clock market," continued Mr. Thrower, "I have leased to the government as a garage. This lease runs for ten years and the total amount of the lease is $28,000. The demand for space is great that I am erecting another building on Forsyth street to be used as a warehouse."

No Patience With Croakers.

"I have no patience with those who decry Atlanta and point to other cities as examples of prosperity and progress. We have the best town in the world right here and people should invest their money in Atlanta property."

There is a splendid future in store for the south side of Atlanta, which has been developing steadily all the time. There have been many large structures erected out on Whitehall street and a number of them are contemplated, I am told. The Armour company is completing a big modern pack cold storage plant near the new Wright plant and I am informed that other packing houses will remove to this section of the city.

"The erection of the municipal building on the south side, the building of the twin viaducts, the completion of Madison avenue extension and the opening of Broad street through Whitehall, all will have a stimulating effect upon the south side. The north side is progressing in a most remarkable way, but Atlanta is too large a city to confine its business district to any one location. We are going to continue to grow and expand our business district and the south side seems bound to come in for its share of the progress."

Broad Street Development.

Mr. Thrower has several select properties on the south side and he has taken a leading part in the proposed development of that part of the city. He worked for many months upon the proposed Broad street extension and it was because of his efforts largely that this improvement was projected and approved by the city.

Madison avenue, one of the biggest improvements that has been made in the city, will be completed within a short time, it is stated, and this will open up new business space near the railroad tracks. Advance in the south side on the south side is the surest indication of the potential value of that part of the city. Property that could be purchased on the south side for $100,000 could not be bought today for $500, according to a well-known real estate man.

Seen From the Auction Block

BY THE AUCTIONEER

Charles Ewing, sales manager of J. H. Ewing & Sons company and one of the youngest real estate sales managers in the south, has just returned from a visit to the south Georgia cities and South Atlantic isles resorts. "I want to tell you," said Mr. Ewing, "that while there are many places that have attractiveness and pulling power in a temporary way, there is no city in the south that can ever hope to cope with Atlanta as a permanent proposition. Atlanta is all that a southern city can be and is spreading propaganda against the 'Gate City of the South' are wasting both their breath and their printers ink. Atlanta will attain her goal of 200,000 population on schedule time, and 'knockers' cannot halt her progress."

ANDREW CALHOUN VISITS ATLANTIC CITY.

Andrew Calhoun, chairman of the board of the Columbia Trust & Realty company and well known real estate operator, is on a two weeks' vacation trip to Atlantic City. He will return to Atlanta Monday morning.

SOUTH SIDE LOOKING UP.

Property on the south side is taking on a new activity and an increased value, according to Marvin L. Thrower, owner of large holdings in that section of the city. Mr. Thrower stated that he owned a number of properties on Mitchell, Forsyth, Broad and other streets on the south side of the railroad tracks, and that every one has been rented. He declared that there is a "waiting list" ready and anxious to take these properties as soon as vacancies occur.

The Spring street viaduct has stimulated the south side to a large extent, and the Madison avenue widening and extension has done its part. Still greater things will be looked for in this portion of the city with the completion of the proposed Pryor and Central avenue viaducts.

PETERS STREET "CLOSED FOR IMPROVEMENTS."

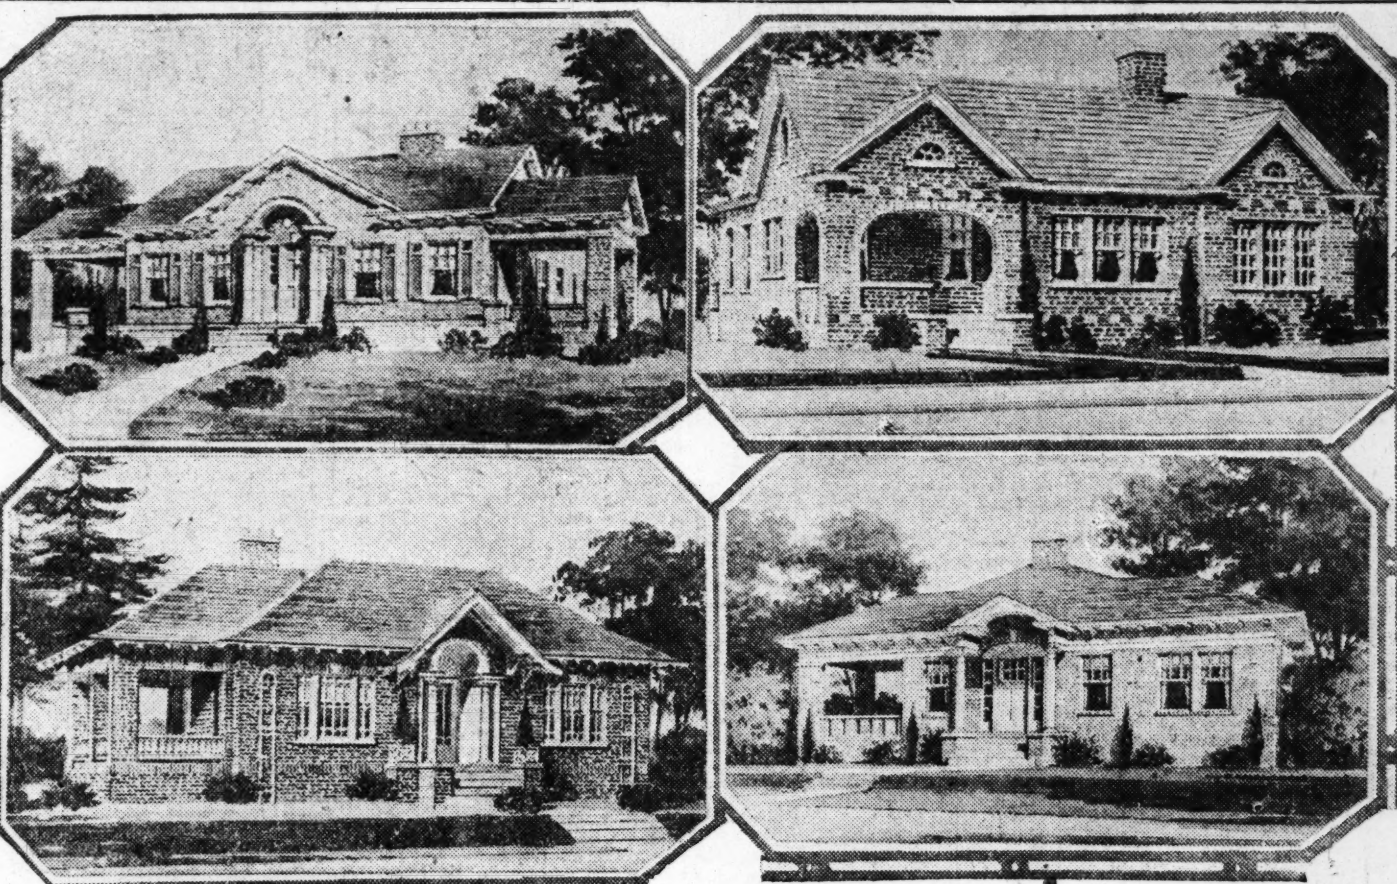

Barriers are stretched across Peters street, at its junction with Walker, and at its north end, at Nelson street, because of the repairs that are being made upon its pavement. The street also is to be widened and made into a 70-foot boulevard, which will serve to take much of the present overflow of traffic off Whitehall street. Peters street is one of the oldest thoroughfares in Atlanta, having been the fashionable street here for many years following the civil war.

Work is going forward rapidly on the new pavement and the widening will be completed with all due dispatch. Peters street, when reopened for traffic will afford a new route to West End from the center of the city, and will be welcomed by those who go in that direction, as well as those who are crowded on Whitehall street by the overflow of traffic caused by the temporary closing.

GRAMLING PROVES EXCELLENT COOK.

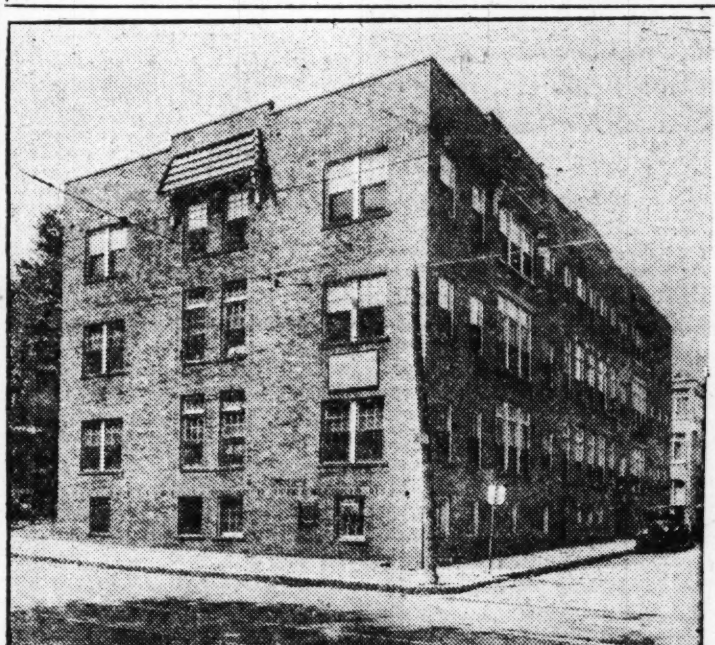

Charles B. Gramling, former head of the Georgia Federation of Trades and a well-known member of the city waterworks force, was in charge of the kitchen at a recent barbecue given by Jones H. Ewing, well-known real estate man of Atlanta, on his 700-acre farm in Cobb county. Mr. Gramling received congratulations from C. Howard and Judge John H. Candler, Morris Brandon and many others

Part of Great Fall Program at Avondale Estates

Here is a group showing the type of homes to be built at Avondale in the big half-million-dollar fall building program which has just been announced. The four homes pictured above already are under construction, and are typical of the fifty residences to be erected by April 1, 25 of which will be completed and ready for occupancy by October 15. This is one of the largest home-building programs ever launched in this section of the country, and has been found necessary to take care of the increasing demand for homes in this new five-million-dollar development.

Chatham Court Apartment

This beautiful apartment, located at Third and Piedmont avenue, containing 48 units, is owned and managed by the personal supervision of Robert H. Jones, Sr. All apartments are outside and have extended sun porches. The units consist of 2 to 5 rooms. A beautiful shaded park is maintained for the benefit of the tenants.

Madison avenue will couple up Whitehall street with the Spring street viaduct and Spring street, making a long, tree-lined boulevard from the north side to the south side of the city, and its completion will doubtless be greatly welcomed by those who use vehicles of any kind.

MANY STEAM SHOVELS ON NEW MACEY SITE.

With many steam shovels and many trucks working to scoop the dirt from the Macey site in order that the foundation for this five-million-dollar building may be laid without delay, there is an activity about this section of the city that carries spectators back to post-war days, when feverish activity was everywhere in evidence. This big structure, which will contain a number of floors, will be one of the biggest and most expensive commercial buildings in the south and thousands of workmen of various crafts will be called upon to do their part in the construction.

WORK PROCEEDING ON ATHLETIC CLUB.

Concrete is being poured rapidly for the new Atlanta Athletic club building that will stand upon the former site of the old Lyric theater, and it will not be a great while until this splendid structure will have its head among the other skyscrapers that have made Atlanta famous as a city of "tall buildings." Atlanta's athletic club will be among the finest and most modernly equipped and appointed buildings of its kind in the country, according to club officials.

OLD TERMINAL SHEDS DISAPPEAR.

The unsightly shed that has served to shadow the tracks running into the Terminal station for many years is being torn away to make way for umbrella sheds that henceforth will offer protection for passengers alighting from trains in that station. It has not been stated when the new sheds will be in place, but the work of tearing away the old structure goes forward each day. The framework of the old shed presents a queer appearance with its roof gone and nothing about the alighting passengers to protect them from the elements. It looks much like a hangar for a giant dirigible.

COLLINS GOES TO NEW YORK.

Berry H. Collins, president of the Berry Collins Co., left Saturday afternoon for New York.

Mr. Collins is on a business trip to New York, where he will visit his brother, Mr. W. H. Collins, who is in the city on a business trip.

Fifty Homes To Be Erected; Business Block Will Be Added

Extensive developments at Avondale Estates, Atlanta's popular and fast-growing suburb, which will entail an expenditure of $500,000, were revealed Saturday in announcement of the fall building campaign.

The continued growth of Avondale and the plans for its immediate future are declared by business experts to be most convincing evidence of the general prosperity of the city, and ample proof of the ever-increasing value of its real estate.

Announcement of the half-million-dollar improvement program, which already is under way, is another big forward step in the plans of O. P. Willis, owner of Avondale, to make this property into a city of 15,000 people enjoying all the advantages of city life, with the recreational facilities available only in private clubs or big country estates. The development program is declared to be the largest suburban development for a single period the city has ever known.

$500,000 Program.

The fall building proposal is three fold in nature:

First, there will be erected fifty homes. Twenty of these already are under way, or will be within the next ten days.

Second, additions to the business section are planned by construction of a complete new block. With the firms to be housed here there will not be a single vacant lot that could be named that Avondale itself will not be able to supply.

Third, a handsome apartment house, of 12 stories, is to be erected. There will be no delay in starting the program or rushing it to completion. All the homes which have been started, or on which work is to begin within the next ten days will be ready before October 15, it is announced. The remainder of the project is to be continued through fall and winter and will be completed by April 1.

There have been two features of sales at Avondale which have been most gratifying to management. First, the desire of many Atlantans to buy homes already completed for immediate occupancy. Second, the expressed intention of those purchasing lots to build a house, or at least just as soon as possible.

There has been little disposition to buy lots, just to hold as investments, though real values already have increased, and are continuing to do so with every new improvement. Purchasers realize this fact, but the great majority are buying to build. They state that they have found here advantages unobtainable in other developments, and that they are buying for home purposes.

Purchasers Building.

As a result many of the homes to be erected in the fall campaign are being built by or for purchasers of lots. So great has been the inclination to build at the very earliest moment possible, that the formal fall building program undoubtedly will be anticipated by the completion of other property owners to start work, according to the Avondale management.

Ten of the twenty homes are being built by the owner and company, a leading home-building concern. Others are being erected by property owners, according to their individual tastes, and the general landscape effect. Rose gardens, lawns and poplars will enhance the residential character of the development, under efficient supervision.

Of the homes, it is stated, will be of the very highest class of the same standard as that already observed in erection of the many completed homes at Avondale, which have drawn most favorable comments from thousands in the last few months.

These residences will be distinguished by a combination of utility and of beauty. The plan of the homes is a variety, all the way from six-room bungalows, to two story houses, most of them of double brick construction. As is the case with the other homes, the majority will be of colonial or English architecture. Skillful architects will see to it, also, that they conform with the general landscape effect. Rose gardens, lawns and poplars will enhance their beauty. In adorning their homes

OTT MAKES TRIP TO WEST PALM BEACH.

W. H. Ott, who is with the Berry Collins company, left Saturday afternoon for the west coast of Florida, where he will look after the interests of the Berry Collins company. Berry Collins company is a heavy investor in Florida acreage, and the Atlanta concern is reported to own some very fine properties in the "Flower" states.

LAMAR WELDING CO. TO OPEN NEW SHOP.

Having outgrown its present quarters as a result of rapidly increasing business, the Lamar Welding company, successors to Bird-Wilcox company, announces that a large and modernly equipped shop will soon be opened by the firm. The company also announces the opening of a proposed chain of shops over the south.

"We have a staff of experts in the welding line," said a member of the firm, "and our business has grown with such strides that we are contemplating the erection of perhaps the best equipped shop of its kind in the south."

City Executes Large Paving Program for First Half 1925

"During the first six months of this year, the city of Atlanta completed 425,000 square yards of pavement, 16 miles of sidewalks, 15 miles of curbing, laid 11 miles of lateral sewers, two miles of storm sewers, and 11 miles of water mains. This does not include the work the county has done, nor does it include the work done by developers, such as in Morningside, Avondale, Sylvan Hills, and many other large subdivisions that are being developed in and around the city."

This statement was made by Chairman John A. White, of the council streets committee.

"I don't believe that there is another city in the entire United States, even if it has a larger population than Atlanta, that has made such progress, and such improvements in health conditions as Atlanta has so far this year. By the end of the year we will have doubled the above amounts, as there are so many conwith shade trees, shrubs and flowers. Atlanta will have the advantage of being able to make their selection from the great nurseries at Avondale, in which 250,000 items are found.

Business Colony Increase.

Already Avondale has a business colony which is ample for the majority of wants of the vicinity. However, the management desires that it be absolutely complete and with this in view a building of 150-foot frontage will form an extension of the present section. It will be of the old English type of architecture which rules at Avondale, and which is the feature of the two present business blocks.

Extension of the business block will serve as an extension of the city, but also a large surrounding territory. It is estimated that the stores already established now serve a territory of 4,500 people, and this patronage is constantly increasing. Within an area of ten or twelve miles there is a population of some thirty thousand people to be served, and these stores now in operation report a continued increase in their trade and state that from the very first their business has been eminently satisfactory.

Included in the tenants of the new block of business places will be an automobile agency and garage, with a complete line of tires and accessories; a modern city market, with all equipment needed to rival the very best in Atlanta or any other city its size; a hardware store, a military shop, a six-chair barber shop, with beauty parlors and baths; new and larger quarters for the already prospering Avondale shoe repair shop, and an electrically equipped shoe repair shop. Upstairs offices will be leased to professional men, including doctors, dentists and others, a number of whom already have made applications for quarters.

Apartment House.

The third link in the improvement chain is to be the erection of an up-to-date apartment house, offering the most modern equipment. There will be 12 units available for those who prefer apartments to homes, but who need the care and security of the necessity of being cooped up in the center of a city, where the congestion of buildings is so great that the general landscape effect is lost. Wide spaces and every kind of sports and recreational advantages are impossible. Avondale will offer the widest contrast to these conditions. Wide spaces and every kind of sports and recreational advantages are impossible. Avondale will offer the widest contrast to these conditions. Wide spaces and every kind of sports and recreational advantages are impossible. Avondale will offer the widest contrast to these conditions.

Outdoor advantages offered by Avondale are many and diverse. They include a seven-acre tract of land for the children, where every possible equipment is provided to assure a good time for the youngsters under careful supervision of nine best golf courses, offering sport enough to suit the best as well as the poorest golfer, adjoins the development and is open to all residents of the new community. An attractive swimming pool has just been opened, provided with bathroom and all the conveniences that could be desired. The pool is a real treat for the children and the young people.

Another feature of interest in connection with the plans for Avondale developments is the announcement that sales of $80,000 have been made during the past two weeks, showing the continued hold Avondale has gained on prospective home owners in this city.

Where once was a dairy farm and a dilapidated village, now five miles of concrete streets and ten miles of sidewalks have been laid or will be laid before the new community is up and working. And this is only the first unit of the Avondale plan.

LOCAL REAL ESTATE ACTIVITY IS SHOWN IN REPORT OF SALES

Proof of the continued and constantly increasing activity in Atlanta real estate is contained in an announcement of the sale of $130,000 worth of suburban "estates" in Morningside. The announcement was made by W. H. Sheppard, general manager of the J. R. Smith & M. S. Rankin company.

"Since last Monday morning," said Mr. Sheppard, "our sales staff has closed contracts for more than $130,000 worth of suburban estates in this splendid development. These figures are sufficient to show not only that Atlanta is on the upgrade but also that there is a demand for high class residential property that is steadily increasing."

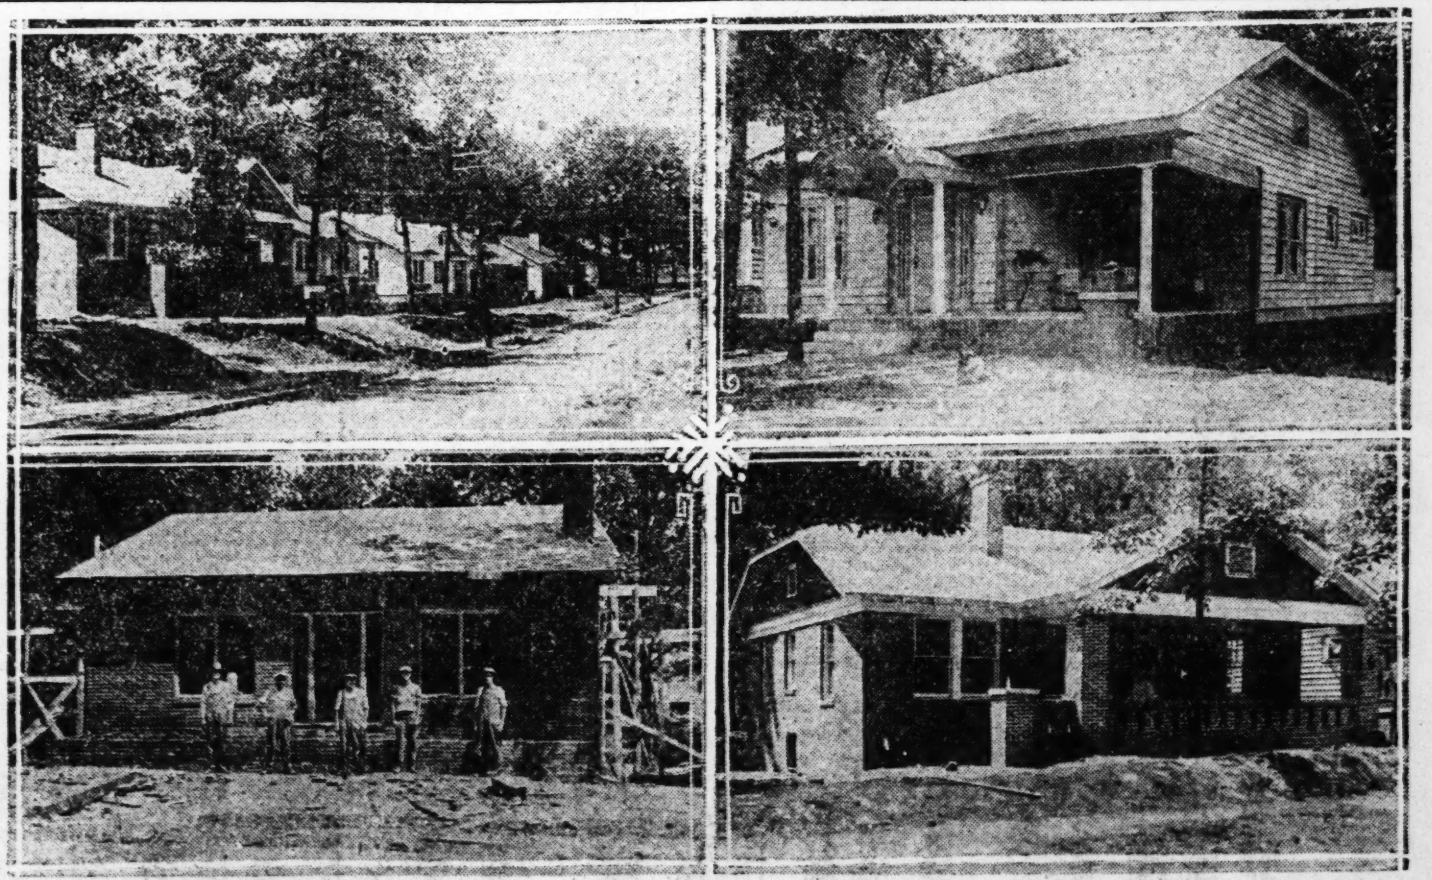

Mr. Sheppard announced that a number of the new estates are now in course of construction in Morningside and that many modern suburban homes are projected to be built upon the many "estates" recently sold in Morningside.

templating the erection of perhaps the best equipped shop of its kind in the south."

With the paving of the streets and laying of curbing and sidewalks, traffic conditions will be improved, real estate values will be increased, and the public in general will have better access to all sections of the city. By the laying of the eleven miles of lateral sewers, health conditions will be greatly improved. The new water mains will supply water to sections of the city that are now (not all, but many), using wells. This will improve health conditions, and also increase the city's revenue.

"With the paving of all streets, the laying of sewerage and water mains on them, it means that Atlanta will rank with the foremost cities of the entire country, in such improvements, and health conditions."

475 Acres North of Atlanta

TO the man who can visualize the growth of Atlanta in a northward direction we present a proposition that has untold possibilities. 475 acres lying southeast of Camp Gordon, about six miles from Decatur, about six miles from Ponce de Leon and Briarcliff and 12 miles from Five Points, out Peachtree Road. This property must be sold at a sacrifice price. It should be worth $150.00 per acre today, but in order to raise cash it has been decided to offer same straight sale, no exchanges, for $50.00 per acre. We feel there are 100 people in Atlanta who would buy this property if we could get it before then. Atlanta's growth toward the north assures its future. We will be glad to furnish further information.

Some Sales and Some New Fall Things at Keely's!

The First Step Toward Fashion Smart Fall Shoes

Yes, it's the first step toward fashion and the last-step, too—the selection of trim, smart footwear. For one can't be well dressed, no matter how fine one's apparel, if one's footwear is out of harmony.

So, if one is to always be smart, a good plan to follow is to come to Keely's for shoes. For Keely's shoes are carefully selected from the smartest models of the country's master shoemakers. And Keely's takes the greatest of care in fitting your feet.

Of black patent leather, $11.00; of black velvet with satin trimming, $12.50; of black French kid with field-mouse kid trimming, $12.50.

Other new models are here to select from, too. Clever interpretations of the pump, stepin and strap styles. In patent leather, satin, black and brown suede. $10 to $14.

To Add Beauty to Fall Footwear "As You Like It," and Humming Bird Hosiery

And if you want your feet to appear just as attractive as they possibly can, you'll be as careful in the selection of your silk hosiery as you are in your footwear. There are many brands of silk hosiery which you might choose if you're looking for beauty alone, but you aren't. You want durability woven right in with the lovely silken threads—and you'll get it, too, if you're just wise enough to come to Keely's for As You Like It or Humming Bird silk hosiery.

"As You Like It" silk stockings of all-over silk in a dainty chiffon weight. In white, nude, gunmetal, gray, silver, gold, cheek, pine, atmosphere, mellow, champagne, beige and black. Pair, $2.00.

"As You Like It" silk stockings in medium or chiffon weight. Black, white, nude, gray, silver, gold, gunmetal, pine, mellow, champagne, cheek, beige. Pair, $1.85.

There are slender figures and slender figures—but the slender figure with the poise and grace that one admires is the figure of the knowing young woman who knows the value of just enough corset for her gown foundation. And one's clothes fit just exactly as they should.

The girdle is of fancy pink silk brocade with wide elastic inserts over the hips. Wrap-around style, lightly boned. Four hose supporters attached. Sizes 25 to 36.

Fashion, in a Bright Mood, Decides Upon

Black Silks for Autumn

Black because it enhances youth. Black because it is such a clever foil for all the flaming autumnal colors with which a fall frock may be trimmed. And black because it's so graceful, so altogether adaptable to the lines of the frocks that Parisian designers have sponsored for the coming season. Of course, Atlanta women look to Keely's for the smartest black silks of the season—and rightly, too! Here are some of the favored ones:

—40-inch gleaming black satin crepe, yard... $2.95 to $7.00
—40-inch black flat crepe, yard... $2.95 to $3.95
—40-inch black crepe de chine, yard... $2.50 to $3.95

Crepe Satins in Plumage Shades, $2.95 to $7.50

Crepe satin with its reversible properties, its sleek, supple grace, is the favorite silk for fall. And the colors that predominate are the colors that have been borrowed from the bright plumage of birds—raven, navy, manakin, cuckoo, wren, green, piranga, tanager—and various light shades—white, turquoise, orchid, pink, gray and others.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

When Rupert Hughes, author, was in New York some time ago he was the literary star around which the theater folks swarmed in the hope that they could induce him to make a Hollywood contract for "The Golden Leader," published some time ago and which is still a popular seller.

A literary club sends the following letter: "Tell us all you know about Rupert Hughes. He is on our list of celebrities for our study club."

It would take almost a page to publish the facts about this popular author given by "Who's Who in America." But the following will be of special interest:

Mr. Hughes was born in Missouri in 1872. He is a graduate of Yale. He was the assistant editor of Today's Magazine, Current Literature and The Critic. He spent a year in London between 1901 and 1902. Upon his return he remained in New York for the next three years connected with the Encyclopedia Britannica. He was a member of the Phi Beta Kappa in 1902. He was a very popular club member in the Lambs, Players, Dramatists, Bedford Golf, Authors, Cosmos, Wilshire Country. Mr. Hughes was captain in the infantry in 1918 in the Mexican border service, was promoted to major and received his honorable discharge in 1919.

As to his books, they have been many and among the most entertaining of any author in the popular period; among the most popular are "Love Affairs Among Great Musicians," "What Will People Say?" "The Thirtieth Commandment," "We Can't Have Everything," "Cup of Fury" and many others of later date with which all readers are familiar. Mr. Hughes resides at 1902 N. Hollywood, Cal. Address: The Goldwyn Company, Culver City, Cal.

Mr. Hughes' latest novel, "Destiny," was published in May. In this book he has given his own philosophy of life, "a gospel of pity for the helplessness of the soul in control of the body." (Published by Harper's.)

NEW FICTION.

Sacred Hands. By William Henry Warner, author of "The Bridge of Time," "Mother of Men," etc. This is one of those stories that has all the thrills of a drama. It is also the old, old story in which a young heroine finds it impossible to love the man who, for ambitious reasons, her parents have selected for her husband.

Resides the romance it develops a few thrills and a mystery story and to this is added another thrill in the hunt for the hidden treasure. (Greenberg, Publisher, Inc., New York.)

The Autobiography of a Crook. By R. L. Dardene from material supplied by Nellye Lucas. The story is founded on seven years of crime, and while it is a life story, the reader will find it filled with more excitement, villainy, sentiment than anything ever written as fiction. It is a truly human story of what life can do for one of its creatures. The foreword is by Eustace Jarvis and should be read before beginning the story. (The Dial Press, New York.)

"Luce the Foundling." An Anglo-American tale, of which the author says: "A romantic fiction, in a sense it is historically true; in that it portrays conditions and states of mind." The principal denouement is on the Alabama river, of course, Alabama; hence the story will have an appealing interest to all readers who love the south, who understand her peculiar racial difficulties and who love a romance. By F. E. Cullen, author of "Where Magnolias Bloom." (Published by the Lewis Printing Company, Richmond, Va.)

The Cheerful Fraud. By K. R. G. Browne, an author who evidently is quite clever, truly human and entertaining, for this is just the style of a love story that a man or woman would like to add to their list of entertainments when preparing to hunt a cool spot in the mountains while away the long hot days of July and August.

There is a whimsical and delightful spontaneous and amusing book, says a reader who appreciates its clever style, and the numerous ups and downs of its humorous hero.

The Chase. By Mollie Pantier-Downes.

The Copy Shop. By Edward Hunter.

Dominie's Hope. By Amy McLaren, are all new Putnam's books which have become popular fiction. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

The Return of Anthony Trent. By Wyndham Martin, who tells the story of how he returned to a life of "Raffles" and achieves fame as an amateur detective.

It seems quite strange to read of the doings of Raffles, not as a criminal, but as a sleuth in the interest of justice.

It was while interested in the welfare of a friend that he meets a beautiful French woman who is trying to regain her foothold, but is constantly pursued by her old associates. It falls to him to help her, and then comes the beginning of a very pleasant romance which ends most happily. This is a well written mystery story. (Barnes & Hopkins, New Jersey.)

The Foreman of the Forty-Bar. By Frank C. Robertson, cowboy and rancher, who is one of the popular realist-romantic writers ushered into prominence by Jack London.

Mr. Robertson, it can be said, spent his childhood and boyhood in a covered wagon—he went to the schools in the small towns in which his parents made stopovers until he had reached the eighth grade. For several years he worked on a big cattle ranch, then he worked on a sheep ranch, the days being full of work and loneliness. He was an unaccountable way he found himself writing a short story for a magazine which was accepted, and from that time on he utilized his experiences for the making of life adventure stories of the great western cattle country. During the time his parents were moving from place to place they found a small Mormon community where the people were decidedly orthodox and he became a regular attendant at the meetings of the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association—the result of which is his western stories are being widely read. (Barnes & Hopkins, Newark, New Jersey.)

GRASS.

The definition of this book is given as follows: "It is an epic of a people's migration, told by one who made the journey with them."

Merian C. Cooper, the author, writes this paragraph to correspond with the picture on the opposite page in the book. It is entitled "Down to Grass." "Down the mountainside steeply and yet more steeply swept a natural winding road of deep glacial snow. And upon the stern rock walls that loomed above it thousands of delicate purple flowers had been scattered by some old pagan god. Down this sheer snow lane, with its flower-decked walls, as far as the eye could see moved a continuous line of black dots."

Among the numberless tributes which this most interesting and unusual book has received is the following from Kermit Roosevelt: "A splendid picture, with amazing interesting pictures, portraying a unique experience on a trip that could only be undertaken by real adventurers possessed of courage and initiative."

It is the real story of the migration of the Baktyal tribe over terrible mountains and rivers which it seemed impossible to cross.

It is not the usual "write up" of some tourist who tells in a mechanical way of what he sees, hears and smells, but the realistic story in which the author portrays the life and living of the tribesmen who have been there for centuries.

It was a wonderful trip which became so much interested in making a motion picture of "Grass" that they were willing to endure any hardships to succeed. And they made it! The picture bears the title of the book and the book tells the story of the making of the picture after fourteen months of real hardships. Mr. Cooper conceived the picture, Miss Marguerite Harrison played the lead in it and the actual making of the picture is to the credit of Ernest Beaumont Schoedack, with 64 illustrations and a map. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

CAN A MAN BE A CHRISTIAN TODAY?

Dr. William Louis Dotz, president of Wake Forest college, North Carolina, has written a very forceful little book on a subject which is attracting a great deal of attention at this time. In the conclusion the writer says: "If you ask me what is a man of intelligence to do in this scientific period to preserve peace in the family of his ideas, I answer in one word: Consider Jesus. Press through a thousand interpretations to Him, see Him at His gracious ministries, hear His original, unadorned words."

The introduction to this little volume covers several pages which the reader will find to be of special interest. The first chapter of the book is entitled "Today," chapter II, "Baggage," the title being thoroughly explained in the chapter; "Peace" is the title of Chapter III, of which the writer says: "The peace of which we think now is not the peace or surcease from the temporary agreement to cease firing. It is rather the peace of understanding, the peace which follows the discovery that friends have been fighting one another in the dark. The friends are not merged by peace. They retain their distinctness and individuality. Religion in religion and science in science—each being a part of the first paragraph on the subject of peace as is needed today. (The University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, N. C.)

TROTSKY—THE YOUTH. Leon Trotsky, the portrait of a Youth. By Max Eastman, the most intimate English-speaking friend of modern Russia's master soldier, who makes the following comments in introducing the real story of his friend: "When he was young he was too young. He was too bumptious—too unruly. But always from the first he was a leader of men because among other things he was himself a man."

The preface, which is by the writer, explains the why and wherefore of his selecting Trotsky for the interest of his book. He says that the chief thing to be gained by visiting soviet Russia is a feeling of the character of the Bolsheviks. He says that Trotsky (his real name was Bronstein) is to him the most universally gifted man in the whole world. He is a man who is wholly interested in all the things that interest mankind. He adds, "If we can understand how Trotsky became a Bolshevik we shall have some human understanding of what Bolshevism is."

Mr. Eastman has not written of his achievements, but of his youth and that in 1905, when he was 20 years old and standing at the head of the Petrograd soviet of workers' deputies, he spoke with an authority in Russia not inferior to that of the Emperor.

The writer says that it was with difficulty that he succeeded in getting Trotsky to cooperate with him in writing this biography. He has been told by Trotsky that he is writing a story with "An Imperious Secretary" and ends with "The Birth of Bolshevism." (Greenberg, Inc., publisher, New York.)

HOSPITAL NEWS.

Hospital Hypo. By Willie Live, is a genuine little paper which is published by the U. R. Wells company, and while it cannot be vouchered for that the suggestion was inspired by either Edwin Cobb or Dr. M. J. Quinn, the public will immediately think of that humorous contribution, "Speaking of Operations" and the "Cold Sores." It has been widely enjoyed by the humorous readers.

It is a well-known fact, however, that it is the echo of a hospital doctor, some time, somewhere.

There are about thirty little poems in it founded on courage and wit, and are essential in a hospital whether you are being treated for hyp or flu. One of the poems is entitled "May, Dear, Have on Missus May." Evidently May did not write him the sweet little notes or send him the little bunch of violets that means as much to an aching heart as a pitcher of ice water to an aching head. "The Contrary Grasshopper" is filled with original humor, as he pleads with it to "quit hoppin' around." And then there is "The Song of the Surgical Ward," which is accompanied on the opposite page by "The Trained Nurse," who inspired him to the following lines:

"She just a girl, happy and human Seems to smile as she goes in Just a dear little womanly woman
With the light of a soul in her eyes."

There are a number of beautiful lines in these poems written by a poet who signs himself Will (e) Live! (A very common school hospital, hospital), and especially is the poem "There is No Night," which received its inspiration from Swinburne's "Night, the Shadow of Light." The little booklet can be ordered from 800 Lexington avenue, New York City.

CAMP BOOKS.

A very interesting story appears in the August Year-Book Book Selling News entitled "Club Women Choose Books for Families," notice of which was given in these columns, also that the first prize was given to Winifred King Rugg, of Arlington, Mass.

In an article published in August Indicator on the editorial page is the following interesting lines: "America has become a nation of readers." Books in the U. S. A. are read ten times over in this generation. The number and quality of the magazines have also increased. The printed word has become the passion of the people. For this reason it is important to make a careful selection of the books and magazines you read.

"Books are more than books, they are the life. The very heart and core of ages past. The reason why men lived, and worked, and died. The essence and quintessence of their lives."

CAMP LIFE.

Camp life is enjoying its last month, boxes and boxes have been sent to the boys and girls from the home folks—no doubt they were filled with eatables, but if they did not contain a book half the pleasure is lost in camp life by the boy and girl Scouts and the Camp Fire groups.

For instance, this is to the home folks who have contributed either a boy scout or a girl scout, or may be several to the delightful camps in the mountains, did you put in your week-end box a book? The camp book shelf may be empty; if not, think of being in a camp on a Sunday, or a rainy day, without books and games to keep camp life from becoming a dull place to remember on such days. Send me a book to help them while away the last days of camp life.

CURRENT MAGAZINES.

The World Traveler is a most popular magazine of travel and is in itself a splendid guide for those who wish to travel or study abroad. The attractive cover design is by H. Hoyer, the frontispiece, "At the Milk Fund Fair," represents three young and charming women taken at Greenlee, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney on Long Island.

Next on the list are entertaining stories on foreign ports, beginning with "The First Tour Around the World" by Edgar Allen Forbes, "Canada—Fisherman's Paradise," "Darjeeling—Place of the Clouds," and other summer trails that will be interesting to the travelers as well as the stay-at-homes. "About, About and Abroad" with its pictures of well-known faces is unusually attractive.

The Century for August is also an attractive summer number with contributions by James Branch Cabell, Arthur Livingston, Dallas Lore Sharp, Langdon Mitchell, Elizabeth Cleveland and other well-known writers. A very interesting contribution by Walter Tittle and Americans "Glimpses of Interesting Americans," the sketches being by the author.

No magazine in the field of literature is more popular than the one called after old "St. Nick." Its table of contents has everything to please the grown-ups as well as the little folks, and the staff of writers know just what should be selected for the approach of the September days.

We are just in receipt of "The Double Dealer," which is edited by Paul Green at Chapel Hill, N. C. It presents an attractive list of titles equally divided between prose and poetry.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY WM. BRADY, M. D.

THE NEW SCHOOL.

Old school stuff we have heard much about. Now for a little constructive, positive discussion, which won't make the pedagogues get hot under the collar. Let's talk about the new school. It isn't here yet, but it's coming soon.

An Ohio superintendent writes that too much of the material in the school texts on hygiene is antiquated and poorly taught. He thinks the school child's health takes precedence over everything else—but I should warn him to be careful how he expresses such radical sentiments, for it may cost him his job. Neither the untrained pedagogues nor the predatory interests that control popular education approve of such ideas. The superintendent, giving the school pupils' health precedence over everything else wishes to supplement the work in his schools with "reliable information from other sources"—which seems a dirty crack at the present source of the hokum taught in the fair name of hygiene. He goes on:

"I have in mind a book by a Columbia professor."

That is, in my judgment, the best textbook in its category, for high school students. It is "Personal Hygiene Applied," by Dr. Jesse Feiring Williams, professor of physical education, Teachers college, Columbia university. Although I have alluded to the chapter about "colds" as boloney, I deem Dr. Williams' book the finest in print.

In your opinion what proportion of the school day should be devoted to physical education and health or hygiene instruction, and what should be the form of physical activity? asks the superintendent. "Games, formal exercises, dancing, or what?"

As to the proportion of time which should be devoted to this aspect of education, I agree with the superintendent of schools in a great eastern city, who has an unannounced plan to require one hour a day of physical training for every pupil. And I think this should include not only ordinary games suited to the age and condition of the pupils but supervised games, formal calisthenic or gymnastic exercises for children needing special development, dancing, gymnasium work, swimming for every pupil, boxing for every boy and properly classified contest of speed and skill.

Rarely should a boy under 15 be permitted to indulge in a running race of more than 100 yards. Rarely should a boy of high school age be permitted to indulge in such a strain as the 440-yard run. Never, in my judgement, should a boy of high school age be permitted to play football. The short speed contests, and the contests of skill, are best for boys of this age. Many good physicians and physical directors are in accord with these views. (Or rather vice versa.)

The Ohio superintendent writes a menial letter, when it comes to setting forth sensible facts:

"I have always maintained, but my contentions have received little support, that athletics unless wisely managed do more harm than good; that overexertion is worse than none; that football is too strenuous for growing boys, say in the adolescent period; that these major sports meet the needs of too small a proportion of the pupils enrolled, that non-participants are more in need of physical training than those selected; that health is the last consideration of too many coaches and others responsible for these major athletic activities, and that in too many schools athletics are dominated by influences without the school and whose object is the commercialization of sports. I believe that every year thousands of young people are graduated from high schools and colleges with more or less knowledge of everything except how to live."

Isn't it the truth.

But, as I have delicately hinted, that's the way the predatory interests like 'em.

Now wait a minute. You haven't heard half of it yet.

The Ohio superintendent puts another question which I think fair to pass on to the mere layman, for, after all, this is his kittle of fish. So if I may:

"A venereal disease a menace to any considerable number of people? If so, why is public opinion so opposed to any instruction in school on these matters? I believe that every boy and girl of high school age should know the facts at least regarding these diseases, not as a matter of moral, but as a matter of physical protection.

Can anyone cook up a presentable answer to that? I can't. To me it seems there is no answer, except cowardice, pure and simple.

But never mind that question. It just reminds me that we have provided for only the physical education. That is the clinical side, the practice of the subject. We must provide also for the didactic instruction, the scientific knowledge of the subject, the science of living. The student must learn the science of living before he can practice the art of living. This science side embraces a lot of book work, and besides the formal classes in physiology, hygiene, pathology, sanitation, first aid, home nursing, infant care, and the like, it seems to me that much of the didactic part of health education could be incorporated in the reading courses in English, in the study of literature, spelling, writing, and even arithmetic. It seems to me that even Latin might carry some of this didactic health education. Instead of both over the Caesarian fictions; for instance, the second-year Latin source might go in for anatomy, physiology, bacteriology, pathology and everything. There is plenty of good Latin literature to provide all this, or if not we'll fix some up.

So this is my idea of the new school.

An hour a day for physical education.

At least another hour a day for health education.

How'll You Have Your Beet Juice. Recently you referred to beet juice as being a satisfactory tonic. Where may this be purchased? (R. S.)

Answer—I do not know. When I mentioned it I said I did not know whether it can be had canned, but that I had been unable to detect its use by the woman who recommended it. I assume she just cooked a beet and applied the juice as rouge.

Canker.

I am troubled with canker sores in my mouth as soon as one is gone another comes. What is the cause of this, and is there any danger of cancer? (S. S. W.)

Answer—No danger of cancer. Cause of the canker sores unknown, but my theory is that they are directly produced by slight injuries, as by toothbrush. I used to have plenty of the pesky things, but not since I overcame the habit of brushing my teeth. Rest treatment I know is to touch each canker sore once daily with tincture of iodine reduced with equal amount of glycerin or alcohol or water. Then use a lukewarm boracic acid solution freely and gently as a mouth wash many times a day.

Pencil Eater.

I have a daughter aged 14 who has the habit of eating the lead out of pencils. She formed the habit shortly after she started going to school. She says she craves it. Endeavors to break her of the habit have been futile. Is it harmful? She complains at intervals of pain in the appendix region. I understand lead is a mineral and indigestible. (R. J. M.)

Answer—The "lead" in pencils is graphite. It is harmless, except as a foreign body. It is no more likely to cause trouble than the same amount of paper, sawdust, or other foreign matter would be. Perhaps your daughter's cravings would be satisfied with some raw carrot, potato or any other vegetable, or some raw whole wheat, or rice, or oatmeal daily. These are rather healthful for everyone to eat.

Conan Doyle's "Lost World" Is Now Movie

Famous Author's Master Novel of Prehistoric Monster at Metropolitan.

Probably the most unusual love drama ever put on the screen is "The Lost World," which comes to the Metropolitan theater next week.

This picture is an adaptation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel of the same title. Doyle admits now that when he wrote the story he hadn't the slightest conception of its film possibilities. He painted a vivid word picture of a lost world in the vast, unexplored regions of the upper Amazon river which time had forgot.

There Doyle's band of adventurers found prehistoric monsters that roamed the earth 10,000,000 years ago and battled each other to the death as in the days of old.

Into the heart of this monster-infested district went this party of explorers—three men and a girl. Their mission was to rescue her father, if he still lived, and prove to the world the existence of the prehistoric beasts—the brontosaurus, bigger than ten elephants; the tyrannosaurus, most fearsome creature that ever stalked this earth; the stegosaurus, triceratops, the pterodactyl, or great flying dragon, and other gigantic species.

As the modern humans watched, awe-inspired, these monsters gave deadly battle to one another—such battles as never before have been witnessed on a motion picture screen.

Numerous motion picture producers have tried in vain to film Doyle's story, but the recreation of the monsters was deemed impossible.

Finally, however, an embryo sculptor named Willis H. O'Brien "discovered" the monsters. He submitted his strange idea to Walter W. Rorthacker, owner of film laboratories in Chicago and Los Angeles. Rorthacker saw its possibilities, and, joining hands with First National Pictures, launched work on the project.

That was seven years ago. Since then work has proceeded steadily, and now the picture is complete. It establishes probably the record for time production in the film industry as well as a record for uniqueness.

Bessie Love, Lewis Stone, Wallace Beery and Lloyd Hughes head the human cast, sharing honors with the prehistoric monsters. Supporting them are more than 2,000 other players who participate in the huge scenes showing the return of the explorers to London. They bring with them a brontosaurus which escapes. Running amuck in the heart of London's shopping district, the monster proceeds to wreck the metropolis and finally crashes into the Thames, when the famous London bridge collapses under its weight.

The Metropolitan ensemble, composed of Mary Leila Patterson, soprano; Elizabeth Norman, violinist;
Dorothy James, pianist; and Minor
Whenton, baritone, will present as a

Lower, left, scene with Johnny Hines in "The Crackerjack," at Loew's Grand; lower, center, scene from "The Lost World," with the gigantic monsters that have been reproduced for Conan Doyle's greatest novel, showing at the Metropolitan; next, Anita Stewart, in "Baree, Son of Karzan." "IN THE NAME OF LOVE" RIALTO FILM FEATURE

Ricardo Cortez and Screen's
New Beauty, Greta Nissen, Starred.

"In the Name of Love," Para-mount's widely-heralded photo-romance, comes to the Rialto theater on this week's Greater Movie Story program with its refreshing love story, vivid characterizations, flawless direction and artistic excellence.

An extraordinary prologue combines two great added attractions.
Carl LaFell leads his famous Chicago jazz orchestra and Miss Nellie Sullivan presents a singing and dancing revue with Paula DeVoll, Lucile Amaker, Pansy Watson, Annie Connally and Shirley Small.

Another feature of the program will be the fifth episode of the Witwer humor series of short films, "The Pacemakers." Other numbers will add to the program.

"In the Name of Love," a colorful adaptation of that great love-classic,
"The Lady of Lyons," by Bulwer-Lytton, is the finest kind of entertainment in the truest sense of the word.
There is virtually every desirable film element—a warm, pulsating romance, bright, sparkling comedy, gripping, exciting action, a dazzling display of ultra-modern Paris gowns, luxurious settings, beautiful photography and some out-of-the-ordinary French backgrounds.

In the matter of cast the most captivating couple would have to admit that Howard Higgin, the director, has chosen wisely. Ricardo Cortez is an ideal choice as the dynamic, impetu-ous lover; Greta Nissen, the sensational new screen discovery, fully lives up to the glowing predictions that have been made about her; Wallace Beery, in a comedy role, proves that even a villain may have a sense of humor; and Raymond Hatton gives a highly polished performance as an impoverished nobleman.

Briefly, the plot has to do with the efforts of Cortez, Beery and Hatton to marry the wealthy but snobbish
Miss Nissen.

The girl, however, is socially ambitious and determined to marry a royal title. In sheer desperation, finally, Cortez hits upon the idea of masquerading as a prince. The ruse, at first successful, develops unlooked-for complications which almost lead to tragic consequences.

"In the Name of Love" marks the directorial debut of Howard Higgin. and he has every reason to feel proud of his initial effort. The story moves along with smoothness and precision.
Not for a moment does the interest lag, and suspense is admirably maintained right up to the thrilling close.

SIAMESE TWINS HERE, LOEW'S HEADLINE ACT

Atlanta people this week will have their first opportunity of seeing the world-famous Siamese twins, Violet and Daisy Hilton, when they come to Loew's Grand theater as the headline attraction. Because of the unusual amount of interest shown in their appearance here, arrangements have been made to present four performances every day during the week's engagement here. The performances will begin at 2, 4, 6:45 and 9 p. m.

The Hilton sisters are the only living Siamese twins in the world and for 16 years since their birth they have attracted the widest interest among the physicians and surgeons of the country. They are talented entertainers, beautiful girls, are perfectly happy and enjoy every moment of their tour throughout the country.

These children were born joined together at the base of the spine, are destined to live their lives together with death always menacing in the foreground should they ever be separated through surgery.

The super-sensitive shudder at the mere words and the over-sympathetic shed copious tears. Those who think only to add to their brood and give them comforting shelter. Some eight thousand men have sought to do just that thing. The average father enjoying a comfortable existence will glance at his offspring and mumble, "Thank God I wasn't me." Celebrities feel the sheen of the spotlight slip from their shoulders when they come in contact with them. The world's busiest corners become a deserted main street from a point of action when they cross and smile are seemingly smitten from every face as they approach. And why not—one of the seven wonders of the modern world—a mystery to science—a study in surgery—a freak to the morbid and an object of pity to the world.

As of old the world is not wrong. It is the people in it for Violet and Daisy Hilton, the San Antonio Siamese twins, go on day by day, growing more beautiful than ever, enjoying perfect health and laughing gleefully at a world which pities them.

Sixteen years ago they saw the light of day in a small village in England. Daisy preceded Violet into the world by exactly four minutes but the latter has made up for lost time in yelling since then. The mother, who died at birth, came of a large family. The father who has died since was a barber and a prosperous one at that. The attending physician at the time declared they would never walk, even if they lived. Several days ago Mrs. Meyer Myers, their aunt and guardian sent him a photograph of the girls, now 16 years of age, which proved conclusively that they are not only quite able to walk but dance as well.

Happily the girls these days lead a life of ease and comfort, walking or daily routine of living. Mrs. Myers says to that. At first Daisy had a tendency to drag one foot. They were taught not to drag each other.

'TOWN TOPICS' HEADS KEITH'S FORSYTH BILL

"Town Topics," a typical topical revue with seven stars of vaudeville offering their talents will provide patrons of Keith's Forsyth theater with a headlining act all this week of unusual entertaining qualities.

In the dramatic personnel of the company such well known names as LeBlanc, Billy Carpenter, Larry Lawrence, George Armfield, Marty Barrett and William Randall offer everything that could be desired in the way of performers.

Their bright morsel of amusement was written and produced by Alex Gerber and music by Gene Schwartz. It has been constructed with the assumption that matters of moment as Town Topics are of little importance compared to mirth and melody, and so Town Topics has to do only with fun and dance and song and these are served in a refreshing and appealing manner.

A special feature of the program will be the act of Carl Rosini and company, the master magician, in "Changing a Swede Into a Dane." All the conjurers of India combined never created a wider variety of mystifying pieces than those offered by this successful conjurer. Apparently he makes "what is not" and "what is," and all the while he keeps up a bright, witty thread of patter.

Rosini is assisted by two girls who not only help him in his stunts but add picturequeness to his performance.

An added attraction will be the act of old Mack and Gail Rossiter in "A Modern Occurrence." Conversation is certainly a modern occurrence and, when it is used to discuss topics of the moment, might even be called action when they cross and smile are seemingly smitten from every face as they approach. And why not—one of the seven wonders of the modern world—a mystery to science—a study in surgery—a freak to the morbid and an object of pity to the world.

Jack Ryan, assisted by Hazel Webster, presents "Songs and Stories You Like." Mr. Ryan is a likeable chap with an appealing voice and something which puts a song over.

The youngsters in their own creation, "Posing and Balancing," offer more musical act. In this presentation they have combined beauty and agility. The former is depicted in their truly artistic postures and the latter in their feats of balancing, which are exceedingly difficult. They command admiration for their originality and showmanship.

Age, which proved conclusively that they are not only quite able to walk but dance as well.

Happily the girls these days lead a life of ease and comfort, walking or daily routine of living. Mrs. Myers says to that. At first Daisy had a tendency to drag one foot. They were taught not to drag each other.

STAGE STARS

Greater movie season starts its third week in Atlanta with these big attractions on the stage: Top, left, the pretty Siamese twins, Daisy and Violet Hilton, who feature the Loew's vaudeville bill; top, center, Miss Olive Hill, who is feature dancer of the Howard prologue for the week; right, top, Miss Mary Leila Patterson, at the Metropolitan as prologue feature; below, scene from "Town Topics," headline feature at the Forsyth.

and in a crowd at the present-time Kennedy and Billee Davies, two attractive girl singers and dancers in a sketch "Fun in One," and Edmond Guigas, the military athlete in an exhibition of cannon ball juggling and other feats of strength and skill. The Loew feature picture for the week is the ever popular Johnny Hines in the speedy and fast-stepping comedy, "The Cracker Jack."

ONE FLEA MAKES MAN AND MONKEY AKIN

They were there in the interests of science—

Three learned, serious-minded professors from Columbia and the University of California—

A real ape was going to act for the movies and her mate was to be a make-believe ape, Bull Montana, if you please—

The scientists were eager to know whether or not the movie make-up on Bull would fool the monkey—

Bull was hoping the ape wouldn't be fooled—

The director of "The Lost World" was hoping she would—

There was a tense moment—

The scientists held their breath as Mary, the ape, was trotted out—

She spied Bull—

Closer drew the ape to the impostor—

Bull felt Mary's breath on him as she thrust her jaw toward him—

She was giving him the once over—

Then out dashed her paw—

To strike him?

No—the paw dived into Bull's hairy covering and was withdrawn with—

A flea—

Puzzle—was the experiment a success?

Bull Montana takes a special role among the "missing links" in "The Lost World," showing at the Metropolitan.

Golf, it is said, has not been taken up seriously by the people of Switzerland, and Punch opines this is because the Swiss are too busy chasing cuckoos into cuckoo clocks.

JOHNNY HINES STARS IN 'THE CRACKER JACK'

Loew's Picture Has a Laugh to Each Foot of the Film.

The ever-popular Johnny Hines in his latest vehicle "The Cracker Jack" at Loew's Grand theater this week. This is one of the Hines brand of cyclonic productions jammed to the brim with ingenious comedy, romance and thrills. The picture is to be offered with the famous bill of vaudeville which will be headed by the noted San Antonio Siamese twins, Daisy and Violet Hilton.

With the breezy Johnny Hines in the stellar role, "The Cracker Jack" is in the hands of a most capable personage who romps through seven intensive reels of action, speed, humor and intrigue that registers practically every foot of the way.

"The Cracker Jack" is decidedly fast in its action, and its continuity builds gradually and evenly without a break, so that when the climax is reached one is prompted to say that it is a genuinely built structure with all the elements of bigness.

Hines' personality and ingenuity dominate the entire production, and justly so since he is the very hub around which the ingenious plot revolves. "The Cracker Jack" tells the story of a college boy who puts his genius to the test by putting over his uncle's pickle product. Perkins' stuffed pickles have been on the market in haphazard fashion, due to the slipshod business methods of Colonel Perkins, but Hines, in the role of Tommy Perkins, comes to the rescue and by his whirlwind advertising methods makes the pickle product known the length and breadth of the country. Particularly interesting is the sequence in which Tommy, in his attempt to sell a large shipment for export to South America, becomes mixed up in a peon revolution in Esquasada, which he single-handedly puts down, gets the girl of his dreams and incidentally saves the president of a South American republic. This latter sequence furnishes the main ingredients of a hair-raising plot that is bound to be a success.

"The Cracker Jack" is a clever concoction of all those refreshing elements of action, humor, speed, love, interest and climaxes that make it sure-fire entertainment.

NELLIE SULLIVAN AND JAZZ BAND AT RIALTO

The Rialto theater this week will offer Atlantans a rare treat in a double-barreled prologue in addition to the feature pictures, "In the Name of Love" and "The Pacemakers."

Carl LaFell and his jazz orchestra, one of the leading exponents of symphonic jazz, warmly recommended by Jan Garber, but more heartily recommended by Atlantans who have heard them in dances and during their engagement at the new Henry Grady hotel, have been engaged for the week to give four concerts daily and five on Saturday.

The other half of the added attraction list is a revue, dancing and singing, presented by Miss Nellie Sullivan, with Paula DeVoll, Lucille Amaker, Pansy Watson, Annie Connolly and Shirley Small in elaborate and high-class numbers.

Carl LaFell since his last engagement in Atlanta, has had a tour in vaudeville, "stand" in Chicago at the Gypsyland cabaret and at several resorts and watering places in North and South Carolina.

LaFell and his orchestra are one of the few recording orchestras for both Columbia and Okeh records, LaFell having made his debut in the fascinating art of record making while playing at the Gypsyland.

LaFell, who directs his orchestra from the piano, is noted for the personality and "pop" he injects into his music and instantaneous popularity is predicted for the syncopators after they are heard for the first time Monday afternoon.

"Baree, Son of Kazan."

(At Alamo No. 2.)

The third week of greater movie season in a brand-new James Oliver Curwood story for a first Atlanta showing, entitled "Baree, Son of Kazan," which stars Anita Stewart, at Alamo 2 on Whittell street.

In signing a contract to star in "Baree, Son of Kazan," Anita Stewart returned to her first love—Vita-graph. Like many other picture celebrities, Miss Stewart had her start with that company, and it was under the Vita-graph banner that she rose to stardom.

Wolf, who plays the title role, is a dog, probably the most remarkable dog alive. He is a world war hero, a wearer of the Iron Cross. This decoration was pinned to his collar by Marshal Foch himself, it is said.

Donald Keith, who has the important role of Jim Carvel, is a comparatively new "find" in motion pictures, and assuredly a "comer." As he is only 19 years old, it is safe to predict a brilliant future for him. He recently played important parts in "Secrets" with Norma Talmadge; "K, the Unknown," with Virginia Valli, and "The Begonia" with Lila Lee.

Another exceptionally fine photograph is scheduled for Thursday and Friday in "Tides of Passion," a brand-new picture from Vita-graph. Mrs. Marsh is the star, and Laska Winter, a new name to Atlantans, capably supports her.

NEW FULTON MARKET BRANCH OFFICE OPEN

Wednesday, August 12, was the opening day for the Fulton Market's new branch at 207-9 Peachtree. This new market is the very last word in sanitary markets. The fixtures have all been made of the most modern material and all of the new sanitary methods have been installed. The new market is down right beautiful.

The progressive spirit expressed by the investment in this market exemplifies the spirit, the progress and faith in Atlanta that ever throbs in the breast of the two Andersons, father and son, who own the Fulton market. Atlanta's pride in this kind of business.

Of course, the main market at 27 East Alabama street will continue to give its excellent service and enjoy its tremendous business. The new market was installed for the benefit of its many Northside friends and to give them access to Fulton service near their homes.

The Fulton Market company also does a tremendous out-of-town sale business and have built up a widespread clientele around the markets of the smaller cities in Georgia. This is particularly true in their fish and sea food department. It would pay any of the out-of-town dealers in fish and sea food to call on the Messrs. Anderson when next in the city and make some kind of arrangement with them to handle their excellent varieties in his home town. Fulton products and Fulton service have in a score of years built a business that ranks far in the lead in the city of Atlanta. At least this is the writer's humble opinion. Proof of this was shown Wednesday when hundreds of people crowded through the doors of the new market, some to buy and some to compliment their friends, the Andersons, upon their enterprise and faith in Atlanta.

SOUTH NOW SEES ITS OWN WEALTH

The south is being "discovered" not only by the world, but by its own people.

This is the opinion of the Woodalls—three of them—who direct the destinies of The Industrial Index, of Columbus, Ga., well-known business publication of the southeast.

"A region so rich with resources that it staggers the imagination, a section so abundantly blessed that it seems almost unbelievable, is coming into its own." That's the way the Woodalls put it, and they say further: "The coal, the iron, the limestone, the kaolin, the slate, the marble, the granite, the phosphate, the oil, the copper has been here all along. For countless ages the southern rivers have run down to the sea, untold millions of unused horsepower riding carefree and with joyous abandon on the white crests of the rushing floods. We have always had the climate. We have always had the soil. The possibilities of agricultural diversification are no greater than they were 50, a 100 years ago. The field of manufacturing, which the south has entered with such enthusiasm and such success has always been open to our people. The south is no nearer the great markets of America and Europe than it was 100 years ago, although in truth, the Orient has been brought much closer to us since the great canal was dug. That marvelous coastline of ours, the greatest stretch of waterfront in the United States is the same, mile for mile, that it always was.

The editor of The Industrial Index predicts that the south, in the latter of the great industrial development of the United States in the next 25 years.

GEORGIA HIDES USED FOR FINEST SHOES

Georgia hides that were once used for a low grade of leather are now making the finest grade of patent leather shoes since the leather has all the tick, according to manufacturers here. One Georgia concern handling hides, it was stated, has handled over 10,000 hides that have been used in the manufacture of high-grade patent leather shoes for women.

The enforcement of the Georgia cat-dipping law has done much to improve the hides throughout the state, it was stated here today. A marked improvement also is found, dealers stress, in the sales of Georgia hides and there seems to be a demand for them throughout the east.

HEROIC GUM REMEDY SALES ON INCREASE

The Heroic Gum Remedy company, of Atlanta, has had a surprising increase in its business considering the limited amount of money that it has had for operating and advertising expenses.

LESLIE M. DAVIES.

It is the writer's belief that this remedy ranks at the very top of medicines of this kind. The main use for the remedy is as its name indicates, for the relief and curing of bleeding gums and those that have hardened after extraction of teeth. Taken in the formative stages of pyorrhea, it has had a marvelous success in checking this prevalent and obnoxious disease.

It is of interest to know that this remedy was made possible by the experimenting of Leslie M. Davies, president and general manager of the company, at a time when he was suffering with his dental surgeon. This remedy, which he has now perfected and which, according to chemical analysis, is a perfect solution, cured his own mouth. Realizing that many other people probably were suffering as he suffered, he decided to market his product. He did this.

In an interesting conversation with Mr. Davies, the writer was impressed with this, his final statement. "I am only sorry that I have not the money to advertise my remedy in such a manner as to be able to place it where all the sufferers can easily obtain it, and so that I could educate them to its wonderful curative power. The few stockholders in the Heroic Gum Remedy company have all been very much satisfied with the results Mr. Davies has been able to obtain upon the limited capital with which he has operated so far.

The large drug stores like Jacobs, Liggett's, Frazier's and many other well-known Atlanta drug stores all have the remedy and report ever increasing sales. Bear in mind the fact that this has been done with very little advertising other than that of word of mouth. It's success so far has been obtained by the satisfaction of its users, and their recommendations of it to their friends who have suffered from like troubles.

Mr. Davies is a most genial man and one who is absolutely sold on his own product. It is the writer's firm belief that every time Mr. Davies ships out a bottle of Heroic Gum Remedy, he is under the firm conviction that he is doing humanity a great favor.

Specht Engraving Company Serves Southern States

The growth of the L. D. Specht Engraving company in the past few years has been very interesting. Profits of the company have been reinvested into new and better equipment from month to month, and today Specht is doing a handsome business throughout the entire southeast. Some of the additional work that has been made necessary by the increasing business is a larger power press and other smaller presses to take care of the demands from the commercial printers.

Vitrolite Company Leads Field in Business Volume

The Atlanta office of the Vitrolite Products company is still leading the field in the volume of Vitrolite's business. It is expected that it will lead the other Southern offices of this company for some time. Anyway, business conditions indicate this to be the case. The Atlanta office is the main office.

The Vitrolite Products company has branches in Tampa, New Orleans, and Miami. It is also a fact that a tremendous volume of business is being done in these three branches.

Mr. Draper vice president and treasurer of the company, has just returned from a trip through Florida. He made the trip by automobile, going down the east coast and coming back by way of the west, and he states that the Florida architects and contractors are accepting Vitrolite products with enthusiasm.

The Lakeland hospital has just specified Vitrolite for its operating room. Many of the better homes that are being built in Tampa are specifying the Vitrolite due to its perfection and adaptability to the climate.

RAIL LINE PROFITS SHOW RAPID CLIMB

Railway executives here today made public the figures covering revenue freight hauled by the railroads of the country during the first half of 1925 which, it was stated, establishes an extraordinary record. They run to a new record of almost 1,000,000 cars a week, on the average, for each of the 26 weeks.

Save for the single year of 1923 railroad earnings apparently have climbed higher during the first six months of the year than at any time since America's entry into the war.

MODEL FARMS USED TO DRAW SETTLERS

Georgia farms, in some sections of the state at least will be made to blossom, on the proverbial rose—which they are capable of doing, it is claimed—to attract new settlers. One concern—the Atlanta Trust company—which operates a large number of model farms has taken the lead in dressing up considerable farm property, particularly in Coffee county. Their first move is to put upon these farms a good-looking tenant house and a large barn.

Officials of the trust company or bank for it is one of Atlanta's largest banks—take the position that no matter how productive a farm may be it does not appear so if the tenant house is ramshackle, the barn dilapidated and the fences broken down. One looking at such a farm instinctively feels, it is claimed, that former owners lost money there, at least not making enough to keep the farm in good condition, which is not always the case.

The Flare

Fashion has flared off to the left, to the right, to the back and to the front—until flares are the dominant feature of smart dresses today.

The Bolero

and the cape back and bib are assuming fashion prominence upon frocks and coats. More especially upon cloth frocks and dresses of black satin.

The Tight Sleeve

which is also very long may be gauntlet cuffed or flared in peasant fullness, colorful in modernistic embroidery.

Back Fullness

a grateful and gracious break in the tubular silhouette. This new freedom at the back gives a yielding, graceful line.

Fashions for Fall

Mayer---Amsterdam---Brenner---names to conjure with in the world of Fashion! . . . Is it not a significant thing to the smartly-gowned woman that these and other foremost New York and Paris designers have placed their authentic creations in the Rich Fashion Rooms exclusively in Atlanta? Never before have we announced a Pre-Autumnal Opening with such enthusiasm as we feel toward this 1925 Fall Showing! Cloth Frocks, Silk Dresses, Evening Gowns that run the gamut of every new fashion tendency in line, in color, in fabric.

Newest Cloth Frocks

at Rich's are mostly tailored two-piece models exhibiting a slight tendency to flare. The silk-like texture of the popular Twillsheen, Poiretsheen, Mirroleen and Lorscheen lends itself beautifully to the vogue of the drape. The large and interesting assortment at Rich's priced $25 to $77.50.

Street Dresses of Silk

never before showed such a decided preference for shimmering black satin! There's a vitality and animation about these autumn frocks achieved partly by the lavish use of colorful, modernistic embroidery—but especially by the uneven hem lines and undulating flares. The crepes and satins that take to color have such names as Claret, Tanaga, Burgundy, Cuckoo, Epinard, Cracklehead, Queenbird, Skylark. Priced $25 to $177.50.

The Evening Silhouette has undergone the most radical changes of all. The bustle has made a definite attempt to break the straight line of the mode. The flare has gone a bit further, achieving motion through much curving, fluttering. Another innovation is in the neckline—the décolletage sloping lower in the back than in the front. Ombre Chiffon Velvet, Moire Crepe, Gold Brocade and Metal Tissue—and Chiffon are the fashion-favored materials shown at Rich's. $39.50 to $237.50.

Bride-Elect of Early Fall

Miss Marcelle Johnston, whose engagement was recently announced to Rudolph Johnston, the marriage to take place in the early fall. Miss Johnston is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Johnston, of Bolton.

Miss Hammack Weds Gilbert Alexander.

The wedding of Miss Eloise Hammack and L. Gilbert Alexander took place Tuesday, August 12, at high noon at the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Turner, on Park drive. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Chamblee, president of Bessie Tift college.

The bride was lovely in an autumn model of black satin trimmed in cream lace and embroidered roses. Her hair was an imported model of black velvet applied with roses in the pastel shades. She carried a bouquet of orchids and valley lilies. After the ceremony the aunt of the bride, Mrs. Turner, entertained at a wedding breakfast. Assisting her in the entertainment of the guests was Mrs. R. G. Hammack, mother of the bride, Mrs. A. L. Murphy, aunt of the bride, Mrs. Annie Jenkins, her grandmother and Mrs. W. H. Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander left on automobile tour of the mountain resorts of North Carolina, and on their return will be at home at Forsyth, Georgia.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Grant Hammack, and a grand-daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Hammack, of Coleman, Ga., pioneer and honored citizens of southern Georgia. Mrs. Alexander is a graduate of Bessie Tift college, where following her graduation she was a member of the faculty for two years. Mr. Alexander is the son of Dr. and Mrs. G. L. Alexander, of Forsyth, Ga., Dr. Alexander being one of the most prominent physicians of the state, and both of these lovely people come from long lines of southern ancestry. He is a graduate of Georgia Tech and is a popular and successful business man of Forsyth.

Miss Stripling Weds A. M. French.

Cordial interest of a large number of friends and relatives centers in the marriage of Miss Eleanor Stripling and A. M. French, which occurred on last Saturday evening at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Minnie P. Stripling.

The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion with quantities of summer garden flowers. The ceremony took place in the living room before an improvised altar of ferns, pink begonias and pink cathedral candles. Soft lights under rose shades added to the effective decorations. Just before the ceremony a beautiful program of nuptial music was rendered. Mrs. Griggs Zachry, Mrs. A. D. Ferguson, Jake Chaffin and Shaefer Heard sang "Oh, Perfect Love." Edgar Mitchell played a violin solo, "At Dawning," and Mrs. Ferguson sang "The Sweetest Story Ever Told." Then to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by Mrs. Edgar Mitchell on the piano and Mr. Mitchell on the violin, the bride and groom entered the living room.

Miss Hazel Wells, the maid-of-honor, came first, her girlish beauty enhanced by a stylish dress of rose satin in the new fall shade with hat to match and carried a bouquet of sweet heart roses tied with pink tulle streamers. The bride entered next with her brother, Ernest Stripling, who gave her in marriage. She was most attractive in a new fall dress of pearly colored satin with hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies. She was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Roy Stewart. The lovely ring ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Veatch, of the First Methodist church, of West Point.

Mr. and Mrs. French left immediately after the ceremony for an automobile trip through Florida and upon their return will make their home with Mrs. Minnie Stripling. Mrs. French, as Miss Eleanor Stripling, is one of West Point's most popular young ladies. She possesses a most lovable disposition and has endeared herself to a large number of friends. She is quite an acquisition to West Point's musical circle, since she has a soprano voice of much sweetness.

Mr. French is the popular manager of the Woodworth store of this city. He has scores of friends in the business and social world.

Miss Williams Weds Dr. W. N. Glymph.

Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Williams, of Locust Grove, announce the marriage of their daughter, Sarah Frances, to Dr. Walton N. Glymph, of Union, S. C., August 5. After a motor trip to several points of interest in North Carolina and Washington, D. C., they will be at home in Union, S. C., September 1.

THE STORY OF STERLING

IN THE MIDDLE AGES a family of traders named Easterling, ranged the Baltic.

The Easterlings were silversmiths as well, and dealt only in the purest metal—hence the word "sterling," synonym for fine silver.

The word "sterling" has popularly come to mean quality in all things precious—gold, platinum and gems.

This house, like the historic Easterlings, is devoted to jewelry of sterling merit in whatever material.

Miss Lightfoot Weds Lewis B. Robertson At Home Ceremony

Of great interest in Atlanta and throughout the southern states was the marriage of Miss Ellen Ross Lightfoot and Lewis B. Robertson, of Dundee, Scotland, which was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, at 602 West Peachtree street, Atlanta, at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, August 11.

Dr. Richard Orme Flynn, of Atlanta, was the officiating clergyman and with impressive solemnity used the beautiful ring ceremony.

The colors of pink and white and the green of southern smilax, which was sent from "Tarrymore," the plantation home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. J. J. Rooney, of Tifton, Ga., were the principal shades combined to make up the decorations of the home.

The bride wore a handsome two-piece suit of crepe de chine with small hat to match and carried a bridal bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

The groom wore a tuxedo and was accompanied by his brother, Mr. and Mrs. Robertson left for New York and sailed August 15 on the S. S. Cameronia for Glasgow, Scotland. They will visit the groom's family in Dundee for several weeks and will then tour England, Scotland, Ireland and the continent before returning to the United States.

banked with handsome palms and masses of potted ferns and smilax, forming a tiered effect as it towered from floor to ceiling. Toward the top a five-pronged candelabra of burnished brass held burning white candles. Two similar arrangements were formed lower and handsome baskets on carved ebony stands and floor baskets tied with flowing bows of white tulle held beautiful white ascension lilies. In each corner and on the interesting pieces of antique furniture was an artistic arrangement of baskets of sweetheart roses and ferns, and floor baskets of pink gladioli. Southern smilax draped over windows and doorways formed entrancing vistas in the distance.

Miss Dickey Weds Mr. Grier At High Noon Ceremony

Unusual interest centers in the wedding of Miss Mary Dickey, the former secretary of Central Presbyterian church, of this city, and T. F. Grier, of Charlotte, N. C., which took place at noon in the Westminster Presbyterian church in San Antonio, Texas, on Wednesday, August 5. The church was decorated in cut flowers with a background of palms and rubber plants.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, F. R. Dickey, of San Antonio and the ceremony was performed by the two minister brothers of the bride, Brooks I. Dickey, of Dallas, Texas, and W. P. Dickey, of Knoxville, Tenn.

Miss Rowena Dickey, of Dallas, was her aunt's maid-of-honor and her brother Clement Dickey, was Mr. Grier's best man.

Miss Mary Louise Green, daughter of the pastor of Westminster church played the wedding music.

The bride is the daughter of the late Rev. W. N. Dickey, well-known to Presbyterians in Texas, where for many years he was a pioneer home missionary of that church, and Mrs. W. N. Dickey, of San Antonio. For the last five years Miss Dickey has served as secretary of Central Presbyterian church, of Atlanta, Ga., where, by her charming personality she has won hundreds of friends.

Mr. Grier is a son of a classmate of the bride's father when he attended Davidson college, Davidson, N. C. He is recognized as a specially fine character and as leader in the Christian work of his community, near Charlotte, N. C.

The bride wore a modish gown of brown canton crepe fashioned in ensemble style, with coat of the same shade, and hat, slippers and gloves of harmonizing shades. Her corsage bouquet was of sweetheart roses, tied with pale yellow tulle.

Miss Rowena Dickey wore a summery frock of orchid crepe georgette with hat of horse hair of the same hue garlanded with pink flowers. Her flowers were pink carnations.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Grier left for their future home in Charlotte, N. C.

An interesting social event was the gathering of the relatives at a dinner at the Gunter the evening before the wedding, where the bride's brothers were the hosts.

Those enjoying their hospitality were the bride and groom, Mrs. W. N. Dickey, the bride's mother; Rev. and Mrs. Brooks I. Dickey, of San Antonio, Rev. and Mrs. W. P. Dickey, of Knoxville, Texas, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Dickey, Misses Rowena and Martha Dickey, of Dallas; Little Misses Jane and Dorothy and Master Frank Dickey, Jr., of San Antonio; Clement Dickey, of Dallas; Mrs. Sallie Williams and Mrs. S. R. The 1925 Debutante Furnishes Timely Topic of Conversation

By Bessie S. Stafford.

Just who the 1925-26 debutantes will be furnishes a pleasing topic for conversation these August days, with the temperature flitting around somewhere in the 90-something-or-other degrees, and nobody wanting to do anything but sit on attractive, awning-shaded verandas, sipping iced-tea and eating cold, luscious Georgia watermelons. Society will be pleasantly a-flutter over her ladyships' plans for the forthcoming season in a few weeks, although none of the below-mentioned are under contract to make social obeisance this year.

An addition to the group will be Miss Aileen Lonsdale, of St. Louis, a perfect golden-locks type, just like the princess in Grimm's Fairy Tales, who spent several years in Atlanta with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Brower, and her aunt, Mrs. Clifford Hatcher, while she attended Washington seminary. She joined the recruits to the European trek last December, and returned to America until the George Washington, that famous wartime steamer, which carried the late President Wilson to France, docks at New York in early October. Following her introduction to society in the Mound City by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Lonsdale, who live on Lindell boulevard, she is scheduled to arrive in Atlanta to join the 1926 rank of debbies.

Appearing on the fashionable horizon as the stellar debutante of Pace's Ferry road is Miss Frances Arnold, who will hold the social spotlight for whom there is certain to be much entertaining. Reuben Arnold here, is one of Atlanta's most eminent lawyers, and through her mother, and her aunt, Mrs. Hollins Randolph, she inherits great charm and beauty.

One of the set of buds to blossom in the social garden is Miss Virginia Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bulow Campbell, who have been traveling since springtime in Europe and are returning via Seotland for a sojourn with relatives. She belongs to that distinguished Berry family, so well identified with cultural and educational life in Georgia. Miss Campbell is an only child, naturalness and utter lack of snobishness being her most admirable characteristics, accepting wealth and aristocratic lineage as a matter of course.

Miss Taylor's Introduction. Miss Frances Taylor's introduction to society will also follow an extended tour of Europe with her mother, Mrs. George Taylor, who is named for Mrs. Don Pardee, for the Taylor and Pardee families are next-door neighbors for many years and lived on Ponce de Leon avenue. Somewhat wavering between a professional and social career is Miss Yolande Erwin, who hasn't decided whether to leave sub-edu or not. Sufficiently illuminating to admit her to exclusive circles anywhere in America are the ancestors of Miss Mary Middleton, for it is known that her paternal and maternal forebears are signers of the Declaration of Independence, and nothing can surpass that. Her paternal great-grandfather owned the famous Middleton gardens just outside of Charleston, S. C., and a rival to Magnolia Gardens. She took special French preparation at Toul, France, where she has been completing her education the past year, to pass a French degree which enabled her to teach French, and before the 12 months were over she was asked to remain overseas as a member of the faculty at Clairmont. With Miss Martin Maddox, of Atlanta, who may also "come out," she docked yesterday at New York and if they passed the customs before the 6 o'clock train left the metropolis, they are speeding Atlanta-wards at this moment. Although Miss Jane Davidson could not be reached at Lakemont, where she is spending the summer, it may be rather interesting to note that this pretty cousin of Miss Maddox may also be one of the members of this charmed circle.

Preparing to Renig. Systematic questioning revealed the fact that a number of prospective debbies are preparing to renig on being a glorified debutante of 1925-26, as Miss Catherine Candler expects to play around informally this winter as the sub-deb of "Calanwolde," the Briarcliff road mansion of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Candler, one of the most patial in suburban Druid Hills, so that her formal entrance into society is postponed for at least a dozen seasons. Back to her intimate friends, Miss Ruth Osburn, is an accomplished pianist and pledges herself to four hours of steady practice every day this winter, but, after the holidays, she's going to New York for two months, returning in time to revel in the musical joys and thrills of grand opera. Back to Hollins college in Virginia goes Miss Kuna Erwin, the third member of this congenial trio, who will make her bows together a year hence.

Miss Nancy Carr enters Bryn Mawr for which she prepared at Miss Shipley's school, only expecting to remain in town a few weeks between the time she arrives from Norway and Sweden late in August or early in September, until her departure for college.

"Debutanting" is a secondary consideration with Miss Constance Spalding, who will return to her junior work at Randolph-Macon in Lynchburg, determined to complete as did her sister, a bud of last year, her college course in three and a half years. She is on the high seas, a passenger on the Montclair, and is returning from a summer spent abroad.

Miss Estelle Boynton will dip into the profound sophomore subjects at Vassar the middle of September, with the hour of her debut timed for the winter after her graduation from this great college.

Had Miss Mary Heman Pearce, her sister, Miss Jennie Gray Pearce, and their cousin, Miss Mary Louise Brunby been formally introduced this year they would have had a grandmother to sponsor them whose spirit is capable of great enjoyment in Mrs. James R. Gray. She occupies a seat among the social mighty and enters heart and soul into the pleasure of Vanity Fair.

While musing upon the subject it is interesting to note that on the

Miss Annie Gallegher Writes Upon Styles As Viewed in Paris

Miss Annie Mae Gallegher, manager and buyer for Rich's ready-to-wear department, is in Paris, where she went to purchase the most exclusive models for fall. She writes in the following interesting letter regarding the latest styles:

"Representatives of all America's great stores were present, and we met many famous American designers, including Edward L. Mayer, Amsterdam M. 'el Monte, William Bloom and Hattie Carnegie."

Of the styles typified at this event she states: "The thing that struck most of us most decidedly about the gowns was the unusual adaptability to American usage."

"Never in the history of a Paris opening has such enthusiasm been evinced. Conservatism was the great keynote. Newness, yes, but nothing outlandish, nothing unbecoming, and I think will be outstandingly good; two-piece effects, of course, predominated in these."

"The very simplicity of the dinner dresses, marked their individuality. Chiffon and velvet used mostly in the loveliest of new reds and a new green just off the chartreuse, quite similar to the new things we bought at 'Nettie's' the day before we embarked. Tinsel lace is next in importance, but while I bought some of 'every-thing,' I did not lean so strongly to this type as to the plainer things."

"There is still a slight flare tendency. Things are being worn as they were, but with a new twist, quite surprising to find fur seals used extensively, cross fox and silver fox are particularly good."

"So far, we have bought about 350 models, many of the very elaborate things that are not to be had at any price in the States and many things to sell around $89.50 to $99.50, that I simply couldn't resist."

"Rose Kling is buying mostly fine lingerie, negligees, kimonos and children's wear, and she delights in the marks over here."

Linens for The Discriminating.

THE housewife is judged by her taste in linens. If they are of fine, exquisite texture, if they are woven in beautiful patterns—then the housewife is displaying genuine discrimination and a sense of the artistic in the furnishing of her home. But linens, especially those from far away, are expensive, and a woman with excellent taste might not be able to display it, for lack of funds. For her benefit as well as for the bride, High's announces their August sale of linens. How every housewife will revel in these piles of snowy white linens at High's—table cloths of almost silken texture to form the proper background for crystal glasses and handsome silver, luncheon sets of exquisite Italian cutwork, towels and vanity sets—they are all here and at such great savings, that the woman with the dream of a home in which there is refinement and distinction in every detail, may find it possible to realize it here. So come early to this linen sale at High's—before the choice patterns have been chosen.

The fastidious and the discriminating dine at the Wincoff Terrace. Meet your friends here for lunch or dinner.

For the College Girl.

GAY college girls demand smart frocks, practical frocks—and frocks for all occasions. But, to select a frock that is smart, that is practical, that is suited for all occasions—that is, to combine all these qualities in one—is to select the Bradley All-Purpose Knitted frock. It is the same Bradley Knitting company that is famed for its bathing suits and sweaters. It is the frock of frocks for the college girl, for it is so trim, so neat, and its long, slender lines and smart simplicity lend more grace, more slowness to her appearance. And what could be more practical than these one-piece costumes of soft knitted silk and wool, and of that close, but soft weave, that means perfect comfort, accurate cut and trimness of fit. Practically indestructible, it will be the frock chosen for travel, for the longest journey will leave the Bradley frock fresh and unmarred when your destination is reached.

Or in the dormitory when the college girl steals those extra winks of sleep in the morning, and consequently making rapid preparations for that 8 o'clock class at the other end of the campus, she will select the dress that she can slip into and out of easily—and it will be the Bradley. A one-piece suit, with no buttons or snaps, and just a little vestee to adjust, it will provide indispensable—always ready of fit. Practically indestructible, it will be the frock chosen for travel, for the longest journey will leave the Bradley frock fresh and unmarred when your destination is reached.

Winter Comes

—Will you be prepared for it? When the first frost announces the coming of winter and puts an end to fresh fruits and garden truck, will you have your pantry well filled with rows and rows of delicious canned fruits, preserves and vegetables? The thrifty housewife takes a real joy and satisfaction in the abundance of delicacies which she has stored away for the long winter months—pickles and tasty jams and fruits which will make each meal on the bleakest winter day a jolly affair.

You have, no doubt, already done much canning for the coming winter, but to complete your work I suggest that you do it now while fresh garden truck and a great variety of fruits are plentiful. I find at Rogers more produce now than they have had during the entire summer, and it is to be had for such low prices that cannot prevail long.

Rogers, however, have not stopped here in helping the housewife in her canning and preserving tasks. They have just received four car loads of Mason jars—the square Flint variety, which is very new and a great improvement over the old style. The material used in the manufacture of these jars is much clearer than in the older type of Mason jar and the fruits and vegetables appear much more attractive. Their square shape makes them much easier to handle and the caps are easier to screw on. So remember to get your supply of these early for even four car loads is not so many when you remember that they are distributed over the entire system of Rogers stores in Atlanta.

If you already have your jars, but want separate caps and rubbers, Rogers have these also. The rubbers are of the heavy red variety—double lip—and insure air-tightness. Their caps are porcelain lined—all of this equipment from Rogers assures you that your canned goods will not spoil.

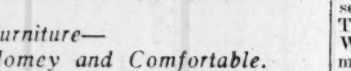

For your jellies and jams, Rogers have just secured a fresh supply of jelly glasses. Your clear jellies of red and yellow will look even clearer in these high-grade glasses from Rogers.

But your preserving is never complete without sugar—and you will need plenty of it. For picking, for jelly or for whatever it be, you are sure to need plenty of sugar. Rogers are having a special sale on it also, just to help the housewife to keep down her canning expenses and yet enable her to have a well-filled pantry. All the sugar you will need is at Rogers, but secure it now, while the price is low. You can never tell when it may soar.

Winter need have no qualms for you, if you take advantage of these deals. That age-old question, "What shall I have for dinner today?" which inspires mortal fear in the heart of many housewives will resolve itself into this pleasant situation, "Which of the delectable food in my pantry shall I choose today?" Jolly winter may come along—even Thanksgiving and Christmas, too—but you need not mind. There will be pickles—a great variety of them—delicious jams and preserves, and canned fruits for desserts—they will make the most sumptuous meal easy to prepare, and for the quick meal which must be prepared in a hurry when chance guests drop in, it will be the day.

All roads lead to Rogers.

The appetizing food is made ever more appetizing and palatable by the pleasant surroundings of the Wincoff Terrace.

Furniture—Homey and Comfortable.

FURNITURE of individuality—is ever the reputation which Satterwhite gained for themselves during the comparatively short time in which they have served the people of Atlanta—a little less than a year. Already we see signs of rapid growth and the name of Satterwhite means quality in the best business circles.

They now announce the opening of their entire third floor to the public. These rooms have been beautifully furnished in order to display the various suites of furniture as they would appear in the home. All the rooms have been recently decorated and rooms of every type—bedrooms, dining rooms and living rooms—reveal the possibilities in artistic home decoration.

Do not fail to see these rooms at Satterwhite's. Cozy overstuffed arm chair and davenport suggest home comfort in front of a cheery fire. Or the cool wicker sets in sage green or soft cream suggest sun porch and are breezy in summer but jolly and warm in winter. The various salesmen at Satterwhite's will be glad to show you these furnished rooms at any time.

Rest a bit and watch the passers-by as you lunch at the Wincoff Terrace.

A hat with scarf to match is the essence of smartness in sports wear. They are gay and colorful in duvety or velvet when a bit of embroidery or applique adorns them.

"Flares are first in fall frocks," proclaims the mode.

THE SOUTHERN ROUTE TO PARIS — THE MUSE FIFTH FLOOR

The COLORS THAT ARE SMART THIS FALL

The new mode speaks with graceful accent that is neither Spanish, Parisian, nor Oriental—and yet hints of all three.

It is a season of poise, of fine bearing—grace, charm, and discernment. The colors are individual—and very important!

Let's Read About The Fall Colors—

AMARANTH: A dark and extremely wearable purple of the grape family. A tone very becoming to the average woman.

AMAZON: Named for the little tropical bird of the Kingfisher family. It is a dark sage green almost black, and is being extensively used by the best designers to make dress and to line and trim the coat of the smart ensemble.

AVENTURINE: A light, youthful green, especially designed for the country club and sports coat.

BALSAM: A very dark green—the shadowy color of the tree from which it takes its name. It is an extremely wearable green.

BISHOP: A bright purple as its name suggests—a trifle more red than Empress, and a most desirable contrast for the black coat.

BLUE BIRD: A perfect royal blue, reproducing the fascinating shade found in the plumage of the bird after which it is named. The color is reminiscent of the tones found in the finest and rarest of sapphires. Blue Bird is being extremely used in some of the newest and most exclusive of the new winter coats.

BLUE JAY: This is a true blue without the suggestion of any other color which had its inspiration in the beautiful American bird so familiar to all of us. It is akin to royal blue, but deeper and richer. It is one of the important blues of a season which shows indication of an extensive vogue for blues in general.

BROWN DOVE: This is one of those marvelous shades—a true soft brown, not too light, yet dark enough to make a really staple color that is becoming to practically every woman. It is one of the best browns of the season for the separate coat, or the ensemble, blending equally well with heaver, fitch and similar brown furs.

CUCKOO: A deep, rich, slightly reddish brown; an excellent medium shade, and very popular. It is being used to make many of the smartest coats, where it combines beautifully with this season's furs. In many ensembles the dresses are made and the coats lined and trimmed with this shade.

THERE ARE YET OTHER COLORS—VERY SMART. TOMORROW THEY WILL ALL BE SHOWN—

IT IS NOW FALL AT MUSE'S! THE FIFTH FLOOR IS BRILLIANT WITH THE UNBOUNDED BEAUTY OF THE NEW!

Ill., and Mrs. Ernest Duncan of Miami, and Mrs. Arthur Rylander, Jr., of Americus, Ga., as honor guests.

Dinner-Dance at Driving Club.

Prominent among the week-end gaieties was the regular dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club Saturday evening, gathering a distinguished group of Atlantans who are finding life at home this summer very interesting.

The charm of the setting of the dinner and dance on the spacious terrace of the club is always felt. Amid the cool green shrubbery the tables were placed around the outer edge of the terrace, under the spread of the old oak trees. The cool terrace is always a mecca, and a delightful spot these hot summer evenings.

Dinner was served at 8:30 o'clock and during the dinner and afterwards for the dancing attractive music was rendered.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Barnwell, Jr., entertained as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Boyce Worthy, Mr. Cook and Mr. Joyner of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. William Spalding and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nunnally and others dined together.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Hurt entertained Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Jones, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Dana Belser, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Freeman and Mr. and Mrs. Wimberly Peters.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Neal Harris entertained a small group of friends.

Brooks' Mell had as his guests Mr. and Mrs. Ward Wright.

Others dining and having guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shelton, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. DeGivie and others.

Mrs. Murphy Writes Of European Travels.

Mrs. John E. Murphy, who has spent the summer in Europe, is having very interesting trip and in the following letter to a friend in Atlanta says:

"We attended mass today at Brompton oratory and heard the most divine music. The choir at that church is marvelous. The shows here are very good and the theaters very beautiful."

"It was most exciting the other night when the rajah, one of the wealthiest of Indian princes, arrived. He had one hundred rooms for his suite here. The Savoy—they came in a flock like blackbirds—and equally as dark. They brought their own chef who prepares all the mysterious food they eat. We have been promised to go up on the fifth floor and see them prepare the dishes. Katherine is having a lovely time. She has so many friends among the young college crowd from Oxford and Cambridge. Young Jim McKelton and his boy friends called on her also. I think Bessie said Jim was going to enter Oxford for three years. The king and queen are out of London at Cannes for the regatta. We have been here so often but Katherine has taken in again all the historical places. We are going with a party of friends to all the poorer parts of London. There seems to be so much poverty here, more than in France. I do think France and the other countries should pay their debt to the United States. The places over here are all so nicely kept and France seemed to be in excellent condition—every inch of land under cultivation—the hills filled with sheep and cows and the trees laden with fruit, and the fields with hay, grain and vegetables. I have never seen a poorly clad child in my hundreds of miles of motoring."

"Every hotel over here at the tea hour is filled with the English men drinking tea, really nothing else, and talking for an hour over the tea cup. At lunch time they take their hour, not hurriedly but leisurely at dejeuner."

Mrs. Sanford Is Prominent Visitor.

Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, prominent in club and social life, was the guest in Atlanta during the past week of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin R. McClatchey at their home on Lombard way.

Many delightful informal affairs were given in her honor. Mrs. John K. Otley was hostess at an informal tea at the Piedmont Driving club on Wednesday afternoon, as a compliment to Mrs. Sanford. Tea was served on the porch overlooking the swimming pool. The tea table was beautifully appointed, and covers placed for Mrs. Felton Jones, of Rome, Mrs. Clifford Walker, Mrs. S. M. Imman, Mrs. Howard McCall, Mrs. R. K. Rump, Mrs. Marvin McClatchey, Mrs. Price-Smith and Mrs. Otley.

Mrs. Sanford wore a lovely gown of white georgette, and a large hat of almond green straw.

Miss Josephine Clark Weds Horace Battey.

Mrs. Reuben Grove Clark, Sr., announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Josephine Habersham Clark, to Horace Battey, which took place Tuesday, August 11, Savannah, Ga.

Mrs. Battey, as Miss Clark, was a frequent and popular visitor in Atlanta.

She is descended from one of Georgia's oldest and most prominent families. She is the only daughter of Mrs. Reuben Trone Clarke, Sr., and the late Mr. Clark and a sister of Reuben G. Clark, Jr., and Newell Clark. Mrs. Clark was formerly a Miss King, of Rome, Ga.

Mr. Battey is a member of one of Savannah's most distinguished families, prominently connected in the city's social and civic life.

Lieut. and Mrs. Lambright Give Buffet Supper.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Percy Lambright entertained at an informal buffet supper Saturday evening at their home on West Peachtree street, the occasion honoring a group of officers of the 122d infantry.

This was the first in a series of social affairs to be given throughout the winter by the officers of the 122d infantry.

Among those present were Colonel Charles H. Cox, Major and Mrs. Ed H. Greene, Major and Mrs. Charles E. Thompson, Mrs. M. B. Baskin, Stockbridge, Captain and Mrs. Walter W. Daniel, Captain L. O. Moseley, Captain Thomas H. Goodwin, Lieutenant Walter Godwin, Mr. and Mrs. Earl G. Neale, Abb Smith, Jack Sharp, Miss Mary Tuller and William Lambright.

Mrs. Prescott Honors
Miss Clio Mable.

Honoring Miss Clio Mable, whose wedding to Henry Roy Cates will be an interesting event of August 18, was the lovely bridge-ten at which Mrs. Calvin Prescott was hostess on Saturday afternoon at the home of her mother, Mrs. W. R. Prescott, on Clifton road.

A color scheme of yellow and white was effectively carried out. Lovely garden flowers were gracefully arranged throughout the home.

Mrs. L. L. Hunnicut assisted Mrs. Prescott in entertaining.

Miss Mable was presented with a pair of hand-painted perfume bottles. Twenty guests were invited.

Kirkwood Civic League Honors Leader With Tea

A delightful occasion was the 5 o'clock tea given by the Kirkwood Civic league on Tuesday afternoon at The Three Oaks Tea rooms in Kirkwood in honor of the president, Mrs. E. W. Camp, who leaves soon for her far-away Texas home. Sweet strains of music greeted the members of the league and the invited guests as they assembled. The tea rooms and halls presented a scene of rare loveliness in the profuse decorations of Paul Neyron roses and other lovely flowers.

The guest of honor, the officers of the league and others who wished to pay tribute to Mrs. Camp were seated at the long table beautiful in its dainty appointments.

At the smaller tables, also exquisite in their decorations, were seated other congenial groups. Those who paid tribute in short, effective talks, were Mrs. Joseph Smith, Mrs. L. J. Cassels, Mrs. A. J. Brannan, Mrs. J. L. Murphy, Mrs. H. G. Parks, Mrs. W. E. Carter, Mrs. W. L. Hunnicutt, and Mrs. J. D. Dunwoody. Mrs. J. D. Dunwoody, the first president of the league, then presented Mrs. Camp, in the name of the league, with a handsome floral basket.

Mrs. Camp's response will ever be remembered and all present felt the force of her words as they expressed her love and interest in those about her and hopes for the future of the league. To the softly played piano accompaniment of "Then You'll Remember Me" by Bernard Owen.

After a moment of silence under the spell of the resolutions, all stood and sang, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

The secretary, Mrs. F. R. Shearer, read the league's resolutions on the going away of its president, closing with: "Wherever you go, and whatever you do, please do not forget that we're thinking of you."

After a moment of silence under the spell of the resolutions, all stood and sang, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

Hugh Hodgson Will Give Piano Recital At Woman's Club

Atlanta music lovers will be given an opportunity to enjoy a full evening with Chopin, the celebrated French composer, when Hugh Hodgson, one of the south's most artistic pianists, will be heard in a moonlight recital Tuesday evening, September 1.

The beautiful terrace at the home of Governor and Mrs. John Slaton will be the scene of the musical, where nature has provided a most alluring and spacious amphitheater, which has been the delight of many of Atlanta's artists in the presentation of various phases of art in the past.

As a celebrated pianist and composer, Chopin attracted the attention of critics before he was 20 years old, and at this age he composed several mazurkas and nocturnes, which still stand among the best extant, he himself never excelling and rarely equaling his early powers. His works display a rare gift of poetic fancy and beautiful melody, which Mr. Hodgson is especially gifted in depicting.

The moonlight recital will be sponsored by the Atlanta Woman's club, under the direction of Mrs. F. Guy Woolford, second vice president; Mrs. Hamilton Douglas and Mrs. William Randolph Smith. The advisory committee upon arrangements includes: C. B. Bidwell, Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, Colonel William L. Peel, Mrs. T. Guy Woolford, Harvey Phillips, Mrs. William Randolph Smith, Mrs. John M. Cooper, Mrs. James R. Little, Mrs. John R. Hornady, Mrs. Lee Hagan.

"Open-House" Day at Highland Will Be Held on Saturday

"Open-House Day" at Camp Highland, the Y. W. C. A. camp's annual gala day, will be held on Saturday, August 22, this year, instead of on Labor Day as is customary. This change in schedule is necessitated by two occurrences—the early opening of the public schools in the city and the departure of the camp director, Miss Lucy M. Adams, for New York. Miss Adams will leave Atlanta on August 20 and will spend four months in New York doing a special piece of health education work for the national board of the Y. W. C. A.

The camp will be thrown open to many friends of both sexes who take this opportunity every year to visit Highland. Parents, former campers, members of the Y. W. C. A. board of directors and camp committee, and many other men and women of Atlanta will swell the regular week-end crowd at camp and will add to the gaiety of the occasion.

Highland Players.

In accordance with the custom established last summer, the day will be marked by the presentation in the afternoon of a program by the "Highland Players." The program this year will be a diversified one consisting of a number of stunts, song numbers, and various types of dancing in which members of the camp staff and their friends will participate.

Among the attractions of the afternoon will be a stunt, "A-la" by Weonah; "Too Late," by the camp staff; "Fashions of 1900," "Pictures of 1950," the modern tango, a chorus and a grand finale by the camp staff.

Among the special artists who will be featured on the program will be little Misses Anne and Carolyn McCarty, pupils of Mrs. William C. Spitzer, who will appear together in a dance, "Felix, the Cat." Miss Adele Anderson, who will be presented in a special song number, and Misses Virginia Haire and Margaret Bodeker of the camp staff, who will be presented in clog dance solos.

Admission to this entertainment will be 50 cents, and tickets may be obtained from any member of the camp staff, from the Y. W. C. A. headquarters at 21 West Baker street, from the Y. W. C. A. cafeteria on the corner of Alabama and Broad, or may be purchased at camp on the afternoon of the performance.

Special Feature.

Another special feature of the afternoon will be the annual presentation of the William Arnold cup for the best all-round camper of the summer. This cup is given every year by Mr. Arnold, prominent Atlanta attorney and organizer of All Saints Episcopal church. It is awarded by a vote of the camp staff and is considered the highest honor of the summer at Camp Highland. This is the fourth season that it has been awarded and the 1925 winner is still a dead secret.

In 1922 it was won by Miss Dorothy Morris, of Atlanta; in 1923 by Miss Sarah Frances Keller, of Savannah; in 1924 by Miss Rose Wootton, now of Atlanta, formerly of England.

Camp Highland is easily accessible to those who would motor through the country, being only two and one-half miles off the main Marietta road between Atlanta and Smyrna. It may also be reached by train from Atlanta. The afternoon train leaves the Terminal station at 2:30, arriving at camp a little before 3 o'clock. The program will take place later in the afternoon allowing ample time for the guests to have supper at Highland and to depart on the train leaving camp at 7 o'clock and arriving in Atlanta at the Terminal station at 7:30. The round trip fare for the outing is 50 cents.

Miss Strickland Weds E. R. Johnson.

Tallapoosa, Ga., August 15.—The wedding of Miss Mary Florie Strickland, of Tallapoosa, and Eric Ridley Johnson, of Carrollton, was solemnized at sunset on the lawn of the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Strickland, on Wednesday evening, August 12. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. J. Hagood, of the First Baptist church.

The bridesmaids were Miss Elizabeth Heaton and Miss Alice Mae Strickland. The little flower girls were Miss Mary Frances Wheeler and Miss Virginia Hagood.

Miss Sarah Kate Strickland, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Master George Hagood carried the ring on a white satin pillow.

The bride entered with her brother, Mac Strickland, who gave her in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and Verne Johnson, who was his brother's best man.

The bride was radiantly beautiful in her exquisite gown of raspberry satin, wearing a beautiful picture hat and accessories to match. She carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Johnson left for a motor trip to various points of interest in Florida.

They will be at home in Carrollton, Ga., after September 1.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Strickland, of Tallapoosa, and a graduate of S. N. S. Athens. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Johnson, of Carrollton. He was educated at the University of Georgia, and is now associated with his father in business as mortician.

English Ave. P. T. A. Holds Meeting.

The August meeting of the English Avenue Parent-Teacher association was held at the home of Mrs. C. D. Reed Friday afternoon with 13 mothers and no teachers present. The ice cream sale committee reported the sale a success, making a profit of $16.45. There was a committee appointed to see that the danger signals be placed on the streets approaching the school grounds and to see about boulevard stops. Also a committee was appointed to go before the board of education in regards to shades that are needed for some of the class rooms. A social hour was enjoyed and the meeting adjourned.

Parody Club Will Give Dancing Party.

Miss Lola Laubenstein, of 580 North Boulevard, will act as hostess to her friends at the regular Parody club dance next Wednesday evening, August 19. She will be assisted by Miss Evelyn Fitchett and Miss Martha Weaver.

Letter to Chapter Regents

Atlanta, Ga., August 15, 1925.
Dear Madam Regent:

Do you recall that September 17 is "constitution day?" We believe that its observance should be in great measure entrusted to the D. A. R., the strongest organization of patriotic women in the United States.

Does not your local, state and national patriotism urge you to observe it so markedly that it will impel every one in your community to study the constitution with intense interest?

Please try to arouse the enthusiasm of school, press and pulpit to teach intelligently the provisions of this document of which we are the fortunate heirs by inalienable right.

Fraternally,
MRS. CHARLES F. RICE,
State Chairman Constitution and Magna Charta Day, 2896 Peachtree Road, Atlanta, Ga.

Where Are the Over-Fat?

A few years ago excess fat was common. Men and women did not seem to care. Now look around in any circle. Note how rare it is.

One reason is this: Fat is now recognized as a blight to beauty, to health, to efficiency. It is regarded as abnormal, often due to a disorder easily corrected. And people abhor the abnormal.

Another reason is Marmola. For 18 years the Marmola Prescription has been proving that fat can be easily and pleasantly reduced. It has proved that to countless thousands and those users have told others. Now people are taking over a million boxes yearly of these famous reducing tablets.

Mark the results. You see them everywhere in slender figures which you envy, maybe. Then why not ask about Marmola? Learn how those results have come without abnormal exercise or diet.

We state the ingredients in Marmola and explain just how they act. Thus every user knows why Marmola is so efficient, helpful, safe. Investigate this famous treatment in justice to yourself.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. Send this coupon for our latest book, a 35-cent sample free and our guarantee. Clip it now.

By Mary Synon

YOU know Los Angeles of the post-cards, wide streeted, palm fringed, pepper-berried, its houses of a hundred hues rambling over brown hill-sides, a city of real estate boomer and oil stock booster, of widening skylines and raucous news-criers, of Pershing Square and chimes and pigeons, of gray Plaza and gold and red and jade Chinatown, of cafeterias and rubberneck wagons, of transplanted Iowa and touring Texas.

You know Los Angeles of the studios, clustered under the Hollywood mountains, a blend of Paris, France, and Paris, Illinois, of claptrap bungalows on the marshes and rose-hung palaces on the hills, of mimic castles and real, of fame and fortune, of magic and mummery.

You may not know—for it lies between the false fronts of dismal Main street and the graying shabbiness of Grand avenue, and no "Come to California" evangelist ever takes a stranger there—the street which welcomed Rita Menora home from work one Saturday afternoon. It is a narrow street of little stores and little cottages, broken here and there by four-square structures of peeling stucco which house inevitable furnished apartments. It has a few pepper trees, a dusty magnolia, a rusty avocado. In the rains it flows like a canal. In summer it whirls eddies of sand over hot pavements. Except for the cobalt blue of the sky above it the street lies an ordinary, dead-level city cul de sac, but it is, for all that, a land of youth and love, of pathos and humor, of ambition and adventure, for Rita Menora lives in the next to the smallest of its little houses, and Joe Orezon works and dwells in the tiniest of its little stores.

He was laboring at his trade, lathering the stubbed chin of Officer Meacham, when Rita, bright as an oriole in yellow hat and sweater and saucy as a road runner, passed the window. Waving blithe greeting to him, she kept her way in full knowledge of the joy which had leaped to his serious young face at sight of her.

"It's three o'clock in the morning," she began to hum, caroling happiness into the refrain which had seized the neighborhood like fever.

"We've danced the whole night through," she lilted to the world, as she ran up the steps of the cottage. "O, Ma," she shouted. "Ma, I'm home."

From the kitchen, Mrs. Menora, stout, swarthy, eyes like back glass, hair like oiled string, hips like billowing waves, waddled forth to the littered back yard, making a detour around the front to reach the parlor, arousing the suspicion that there might be one door in the house too narrow to permit her surging passage. "At least," she sighed in English, then lapsed into a torrent of Mexican to tell her child how she had too long waited her coming for money to do the marketing for Sunday. "What'd you do if I didn't get paid on Saturday?" Rita asked, counting over the larger part of her weekly wage, and pocketing the rest for carfare, luncheon and raiment.

"WAIT till your father is paid on Tuesday," her mother confessed placidly.

"O, la, la, la, la, la," Rita kissed her resoundingly. "And will you fix the mutton with no garlic tomorrow?"

"For twenty-five years," said Mrs.

Joe turned away, an unwilling victim of industrial necessity

Menora in the language of her fathers, "I have peeled the garlic bean. From my sainted mother I learned the way to prepare mutton. Is it now that my daughter should tell me how to cook?"

"But this isn't Mexico, Ma."

"Ill was the day we came from there."

"O, go on, Ma, you know you were lucky to get here. How long do you suppose we'd be there before we'd be living like this? Doesn't Pa get four dollars a day from the city? Don't I get eighteen a week? We'd be a long time finding that in San Felipe."

"It is my own land," Mrs. Menora began to weep.

"O, cut it, Ma."

"But the garlic—why is it that I should change?"

"I thought maybe you'd like to ask Joe to come over to dinner tomorrow."

"Joe Orezon?"

"He's the only Joe I play with."

"He likes garlic. But why should we ask him tomorrow?"

"O, I just thought the poor kid might be lonesome."

"Lonesome?"

"Sure. Haven't you ever heard him play the violin over there in the shop evenings? If that ain't lonesome, why—"

"But suitors do not dine at the house until—"

"Cut the old stuff, Ma. This is Los Angeles. I'm nineteen, and earning my living. I ain't saying what I could do if I did what some girls do, but I think the least I can ask is to have the chance to have my friends, some times."

"I do not keep them away. Maria and Fernanda, and Conception—do they not come night after night?"

"Girls!"

"But it is not right that a man—"

"O, I suppose I ought to hang out of the window and throw a rose down to some fellow who's playing the guitar on the sidewalk?" She laughed with the gaiety of a child, and kissed her mother again with more aim than emotion. "Run along to the market," she bade her. "I'll take care of the house."

She kept her word by disappearing within it as Mrs. Menora departed, and starting on the mechanical piano a wild fanfare of sound which reverberated through the street. Whenever she could she lifted her voice above the din. Finally, wearied of her struggle with art, she came back to the narrow porch. There she read the daily paper's installment of a thrilling serial until the collector for the piano made his weekly appearance. In her annoyance that her mother had departed without leaving money for him, thereby forcing her to make an advance to the household fund which would be long in returning, she flung aside the tribulations of another, and concentrated on her own. Thinking of them she grew restless, and decided that she needed the solace of an ice cream soda.

TO gain it she had to pass the barber shop. Joe, idle for the moment, must have seen her coming, for he was at the door as she passed. "Holloa," he said, with a flash of startlingly white teeth.

"Holloa," she told him, lowering long lashes in sudden decision to be coy.

"Nice day."

"Hot a little."

"But nice."

"I suppose so."

"Working hard?"

"Never do on Saturdays."

"That's my rush day."

"Going to work late tonight?"

"Ten o'clock." His eyes leaped to flame. "Say, can I come over when I'm through? That's early, really, in summer. It doesn't get dark till after eight, and there's a moon. Rita! Say I can come."

"Ma don't let men come alone."

"I won't be coming to see her."

They laughed as if they both found the thought deliciously funny. "Maybe Pa'll let you talk to him," she said, blushing under the ardor in his eyes. A customer entered the shop. Joe turned away, an unwilling victim of industrial necessity. "So long, Rita."

"So long, Joe."

Still tingling with the thrill of his look she went on to the drug store.

MEX

A Blue Ribbon
Short Story

Three nurses from the neighboring hospital were perched on the only high stools before the soda fountain. Their occupation of that fort changed her decision. She sauntered to the case where rouge and powder, creams and lotions offered temptations to womankind. "I want a compact," she told the clerk. "Deep rose."

"You don't need it," he said lightly. "It's none of your business," she retorted, without rancor. "Besides, it ain't for me. It's for my mother."

That threw him into peals of laughter. "You're some kiddier," he told her with admiration. "Say, have you seen 'Fires of Passion' at the Metropolitan? They say it's some hot show. Marta Gordo plays in it. Sa-ay! I've got you now. You look like her, honest you do."

"She's my sister."

"Go on. She's from Madrid."

"Sure, we left her there when we came away."

"That's a good line. Well, will you come with me tonight? It's my Saturday off."

"I do not go out with strange men." She lifted her shoulders, and gave him a blaze of eyes which Marta Gordo could not have bettered. "How dare you ask me?"

"O, say, I didn't mean anything. I forgot you were Mexican. No harm done."

He gave her the package and her change, and she was going out as majestically as bobbed hair and oriole garb permitted when the druggist at the prescription counter, gray-haired, weary-eyed, called to her, "How's Miss Kellar, Rita?"

"I ain't seen her today."

"She was worse yesterday."

"That's what Ma said."

"Tough luck," he sighed, "to be sick and all alone."

"Ain't it?" she blazed. "What do you think of her people leaving her there?"

"She ought to be in a hospital," one of the nurses turned to say.

"Sure," said Rita. "She's not fit to take care of herself."

"Doesn't any one go in to her? another nurse inquired."

"My mother goes every day, and takes her something hot. I go in, too. But they——" her young voice rose high in anger "——they drive up to the curbstone once a week, maybe not so often, and one of them'll come in for five minutes to ask how she's getting on. And she's their sister, and she's dying!"

"T. b.," said the druggist.

"Why don't they take her to a hospital?"

"She won't go," Rita said, "but that doesn't let them out. It's a shame!"

The shameful of this neglect of her sick neighbor gripped her so hard that she forgot, as she returned, to smile in at Joe. Instead of going home she passed the cottage to the one next door, the house even tinier than the Menoras. She rattled the knob to announce herself, and plunged from the brilliant sunlight of the outdoors to the blinding dimness of a darkened room. "Can I come in?" she inquired, although she had closed the door behind her.

"Of course you may," a weak voice assured her. In the gloom she could discern faintly the woman on the white bed. "It's always good to see you, Rita."

"Same to you, Miss Kellar. Feel better?"

"About the same."

"Can't I do something for you?"

"Just a drink, please. Your mother was in at noon. I don't know what I'd do without you for neighbors."

"O, we're nothing to brag on. The woman next door on the other side said she'd call the police if we kept the piano going after ten o'clock Sunday night. She called me a dirty Mex. I talked American to her, all right. You ought to hear me, what I said to her. But, say, does that music bother you at all? If it does——"

"Not at all." The voice quivered a little. "It's good to know that there's gaiety and youth and laughter in the world, even if it has to be in the house next door."

"I'll say you're a good sport."

"Not so good. But tell me about yourself. How's the job?"

"O, it's all right, but I get sick of it when these days come. It's no joke, clerking."

"What do you want to do?"

"I want to go in the movies." Even in the shaded gloom of the place her face shone with eagerness. "There was a girl down at the store in the Chinese goods section, and a woman came in last week to buy a mah jongg set, and she talked to this girl, and she said to her that she was just about the type they were looking for to take a part. She went right out with that woman, and she's working in a picture out in Hollywood now, and she's getting twice as much already as she got in the store."

"But that's one girl, Rita. There are thousands who——"

"Sure, I know. The town's full of them, doubling up in rooms anywhere, beating their way to free lunches on the oil excursions. But there was another girl over at the Blue Bulldog, just waiting on table, and a man saw her, and offered her a job in the movies, and you ought to see her when she comes downtown now. Class! She looks like a million dollars."

"But Rita, perhaps——"

"O, she's got a job sure. She played in 'For Her Daughter's Sake.' That was a grand show, Miss Kellar. She has just a little part, but——"

"Even if she has, she's the exception."

"O, I know that, but there are exceptions."

FROM the shadows came a sigh. "We all believe we're going to be among them. But, Rita dear, take a sick woman's advice. There's nothing in all the world as terrible as loneliness. You're young now. You're gay. You're happy. Some day you won't be any of these things, and unless you build against being alone when that day comes, you'll find that everything you've done was in vain. Why don't you marry Joe, Rita?"

"Joe? O, Miss Kellar!"

"Why not? He's a good boy. He loves you."

"We're just——friends."

"Are you sure it's nothing more?"

"O yes. We're Americans. We don't even keep company."

"But Americans do that." The weak voice trembled in unwonted amusement.

"Not like Mexicans. O, la, you don't know Mexican love. It's hot."

"You may not know Joe as well as you think."

"O, I know him. She arose, laughing. "You sure I can't do anything for you?"

"Well, you ring the bell if you want me. We'll hear you. Goodby, Miss Kellar."

"Goodby, Rita."

"Thank you."

She sighed as she closed the door, but her smile returned as she resumed vigil on her own front porch. For nearly an hour she sat in the sun, dreaming in lazy contentment. Then the notion seized her to experiment with new styles, and she went indoors to try various ways of arranging short hair, and to estimate the effects of a dozen different kinds of cheap earrings. She was wearing the longest, most picturesque pair, and holding a wild colored scarf around her when her father came in. She made a mad rush to kiss him, nearly knocking off his broad brimmed white hat as she hurried herself upon his anything but spotless white uniform of the street cleaning brigade. "You look like a fiesta," he said affectionately as he disentangled her. "What is the occasion?"

"This is for you."

His dark eyes tired by long years of hard labor and the traditions of long generations of less hopeful living than his own, smiled down at her. She was the only flower left on the bush. "You cannot fool the old man," he told her. "Who comes tonight?"

"No one. Only Joe."

"Joe?"

"Don't you like Joe, my father?"

"Well enough. But you—are you sure?"

"O, I like him very well. We are friends. This is United States."

"You think, then, love dies at the border?"

"O, no, but only——" Her cheeks flamed brighter than her scarf. "I shall make you the pie for supper."

"But I don't——"

"The pie of the prune."

She was working with whirlwind energy when Mrs. Menora, winded by her walk and her haggling struggle with Jap on Main street, returned to the kitchen, sinking into the big chair she kept for such emergencies, and gladly leaving the making of the supper to Rita. Neither through the preparations nor in the course of the meal which the three of them ate in cheerfulness did the mention of Joe again arise, but Rita knew, as her father and mother went off to church, that they would not round the corner before they would begin to talk of her invitation. "Well, she didn't say I couldn't," she triumphed as she took her post on the porch and watched the lights in the barber shop.

At eight o'clock the light in Miss Kellar's tiny house went out. At nine o'clock her father and mother came home. At half-past nine they went to bed, her mother calling to ask if she were coming in. "Not yet," she said. "It's too nice out." At quarter to ten Officer Meacham passed on patrol. "He'll be through soon," he teased her. "I ain't waiting," she lied.

At ten o'clock the street was quiet even from the cries of shouting children. The clanging of bells on the Grand avenue cars came muffled. The moon, a great golden ball, came over the top of the apartment house across the street and flooded the pavement with radiance which made the pepper trees of a fairy loveliness. The light in the barber shop went out. Rita ruffled her hair, twisted her earrings, loosened her scarf, leaned her head against the porch pillar, and fell into a pose of dreamy wistfulness. A moment later came Joe up the steps.

"Nice night?" he said.

"Sure."

"Lovely moon." He slipped down to the step below her, a vantage point from which he could watch both moonlight and her face.

"It's nice."

"It's nicer than nice——here."

The moon lifted high in the deep blue sky. A little wind from the ocean drifted in to stir the swaying branches of the trees. His hand sought and found hers, and held it closely. Her heart leaped in thrilled ecstasy. Her eyes grew dark with languor as she glimpsed the desire shining in his own. Seconds raced into minutes, and minutes sped toward the hour as they stood on the brink of avowal. She could think of nothing but the nearness of his black hair just below the level of her eyes, could feel nothing beyond the compass of his throbbing hand, could see nothing farther than the quivering of his lips.

The moon went down behind the high roof of another apartment house. The wind from the sea rushed chill. Joe Orezon rose swiftly, lifted her to her feet, clasped her in his arms as if with the hunger of waiting years, and kissed her till her senses reeled in the glory of love. Then, "Rita," fell across their joy. Mrs. Menora was calling. "Rita!" She drew back, her eyes dewy. "It's 12 o'clock." She put her hand over his lips. "Good-by."

"No," he pleaded.

"Good night."

"Not till you tell me——"

"Buenos noches."

"Rita!" The call came once more.

"Tell me that——"

"Tomorrow," she promised.

"Tomorrow," he exulted.

SHE drew back into the doorway as he went and called to her mother that she was coming; but she slipped back into the shadow of the porch to watch Joe's going. She heard the sudden banging of the shop door, and watched for the light from the little room back of the shop where he lived, but no light came. Instead there rose the sound of music, the thin wail of a violin. He was playing—for her! All the words he could not say, all the longing he dared not voice throbbed in the measures of the song he had chosen, an old song out of Spain which her father sometimes hummed, a song of the Mexico she was almost forgetting. For this moment Joe Orezon had studied and practiced through the long evenings of the rains, that he might lift on the summer night his heart's pleading to the girl he loved. For this he had borne taunts and jibes. Now, perfect with the artistry of devotion, he stood before his altar, not a sleek young Mexican barber fiddling for a gay young Mexican sales girl on a Los Angeles side street, but Paganini flinging aloft his genius as jewels for his beloved. "I love you, love you, love you," she whispered, her eyes bright as the star following the moon. Only as she locked the door did the memory of her declaration return to her. "Friends," she breathed softly, and laughed as she went to her room.

Not until the next morning did realization come to her that she had forgotten to ask Joe to dinner. A week ago she would have paused on her way to church at the door of the shop, and blithely giving him the invitation, assuming to be merely her mother's messenger. Today, with the fire of his kiss still burning on her lips, she dared not meet him on such informal terms. Instead, finding Fernanda Ramiro at St. Vincent's, she brought her home, forestalling by the chance Mrs. Menora's comment on her change of plan. Fernanda, gay with gossip, entertained the elder Menoras brightly as she consumed her garlicked mutton. "Concepcion is going to be married in October. Sure, it's Pedro. She's never looked at any one else. That's what I say, Mrs. Menora. O, Rita, I do not flirt. And Maria has a new fellow. Wait till you see him. He works in Hollywood. And his eyes!" She rolled her own eloquently. "No, there's no danger, Mrs. Menora. I got all I can do deciding between Miguel and John Breen. He's Irish, yes; Mrs. Menora, but he's nice boy. Why don't you get a real sweetheart, Rita," she teased, anxious to divert attention from her own tangling affairs, "instead of Joe?"

"O, maybe Joe——" Mrs. Menora hinted, remembering Rita's lingering in last night's moonlight.

"That's silly," Rita managed to say evenly, but her cheeks flushed so hotly that Fernanda gave her a sudden, calculating glance ere she lifted her topic to safer ground. "I think you like Joe," the other girl told her as they washed the dishes. "I like him," she insisted sturdily, "as a good friend."

She felt, however, that her defenses were down before Fernanda's watchfulness, when Joe appeared. Nothing but realization that he was as self-conscious as was she fortified her through the hour in the hot parlor. In desperation she started the piano. Fernanda and Joe raised their voices

Among Us Georgians

—By—
W. C. WOODALL

JUDGE A. W. COZART, of Columbus, one of the most highly educated men in the state, delivered his first address before the Georgia Bar association on a very sultry afternoon at Tybee, quite some years ago.

A learned Georgian had just finished reading a two-hour paper on the income tax or the tariff or some other subject equally heavy and dreary, and the lawyers were tired out. Then Judge Cozart, a brand-new speaker to them, an absolutely unknown quantity, arose to consume the thirty minutes on the program assumed to him. Gloomily, they feared the worse and prepared for another season of torture.

The only vestige of comfort, the only possible salvage in the situation, was that the new speaker had no manuscript. In his very first remarks Judge Cozart referred to this distressing fact.

"You have perhaps noticed, gentlemen, that I have no manuscript, and perhaps you have wondered at it," he said. "This is a very embarrassing situation to me, and a source of great mortification. But I had just as well confess it at the outset, for it's bound to come out. The truth is, gentlemen, my early education was sadly neglected, and I can neither read nor write!"

That woke them up! The quick laugh that followed showed the new speaker that the crowd was with him, and there followed one of the most delightful humorous addresses the Bar association has ever heard, delivered in Judge Cozart's characteristic quaint style. He has been on the program of the Georgia Bar association two or three times since then.

THE next morning a good many of the lawyers were up early, to take a before-breakfast dip in the briny Atlantic, as it rolls up the beach at Tybee. Judge Cozart was along, and they told him he must get acquainted with the sea. It was quite a ceremony. A committee hustled him into the bath house and saw to it that he donned an appropriate bathing suit. Another committee escorted him a proper distance out into the waves and then released him to the tender mercies of a man's-size ocean.

Judge Cozart, really a good swimmer, entered into the spirit of the performance. He permitted an oncoming wave to take complete charge of him and was rolled upon the beach, a frantically waving, struggling mass of arms and legs. The sight was engaging, for the judge is well equipped with arms and legs, and the lawyers laughed at the liberties the ocean was taking with the humorist.

Struggling to his feet, an expression of greatest surprise on his face, Judge Cozart looked out at the ocean reproachfully and said, with some feeling:

"Why, I didn't know that thing was over my head anywhere!"

A TRAIT of human nature that will be recognized instantly by all of us, since all of us have it, is illustrated in a delightful little story told by Rev. Dr. L. R. Christie, widely known Baptist minister, formerly pastor at Valdosta, Savannah and Columbus, and now in charge of a big Baptist church at Meridian, Miss.

It seems that a rural preacher of great natural power and of deep consecration had attracted such attention by his effective labors that he was invited to preach in a large city church—one of the leading churches of the state. It was the first time this really talented man had ever preached in town.

As he was preparing to enter the pulpit a church official handed him a surplice.

"What is that?" asked the rural preacher.

"It's a robe," replied the church official.

"What do you do with it?"

"Why, the clergymen who preach at our church usually wear it while in the pulpit."

"Do I HAVE to wear it?" demanded the country preacher.

"No, you don't HAVE to wear it," replied the attendant.

"Very well, then, I'll wear it," said the visiting minister, as he slipped it on.

"This expresses my own position in a good many matters," commented Dr. Christie. "If I am told that I HAVE to do a thing, I feel like balking, but if it's just left up to me, if the compulsion's left out, I don't mind doing it at all!"

THERE is serious complaint of the "static" at the north pole. There is entirely too much of it, and it is too stubborn in quality, the airship explorers say, and naturally such a distressing situation calls for relief. The Georgia legislature is not unmoved in the presence of this highly undesirable, if not criminal situation, and it is understood that a measure will soon be introduced in that body making it distinctly unlawful for the static in the vicinity of what is commonly known as the north pole to static so. It was the Georgia legislature which, at a closing session some years ago, repealed the law of gravity, and so the regulation of a little matter like static oughtn't to give it any trouble.

THE world war brought its changes.

One of them was to change the official mileage of the Central of Georgia railway from Macon to Columbus from 100 to 101 miles. It was due, it was claimed, to some temporary readjustment of trackage, or something of the kind—but everybody knew, of course, that it was just that awfully upsetting business, the war, that caused it. Sure enough, when the war was over, and trackage kink or whatever it was was straightened out, and conditions became normal, the distance between Macon and Columbus itself regained a state of normalcy, so that the official mileage was once more one hundred miles!

THIS recalls, somehow, the case of a Dublin citizen who used to go to the market every Saturday to buy mullet, of which he was very fond. Everything else was going up in price, and one day the fish man made a radical increase in the mullet quotations. (Continued on Page 13.)

Donatello, the Organ Grinder

—By—
PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

HE is blind and his hairs are threads of fine silver. Life has carved deep wrinkles across his forehead, straight, merciless grooves. His step wavers and there is a slight stoop to the shoulders when he walks. But his face is always lifted high—either to be bathed by a mellow sun or to be touched by the breath of a storm. For above the roar of New York's maelstrom his sensitive ears can distinguish other sounds—the soft murmur of the blue Adriatic, the rustle of laurel leaves and the soft swish of an orange grove or singing voices of young girls as they gather flowers for a marriage on the hills of Tuscany.

Suddenly I noticed him by my side while we stood waiting for a flow of traffic at a crossing. On his back he carried a small hand-organ, slung across the shoulder with a broad leather strap; in his right hand a cane of rosewood. He asked me to guide him across and then I knew he was blind. He told me that the sun was golden and that he could feel things growing in the world of nature. "I haven't seen the flowers for thirty years, but I can feel them grow," he said, and a smile illumined his noble face. We had arrived at the other curb and I asked him if he was going straight on and so we walked together.

AND as this old man talked it seemed to me that he possessed a strange lucidity; he saw more than others who have healthy eyes. Perhaps it was in a hallucination of fever, but his talk sketched vivid pictures, dreadful scenes. It brought back hours of sorrow out of his own life, flashes of joy, beauty, and love. He told me of his life with the passionate frenzy of the Latin and the musical language of Lombardy.

"Oh, I have played this hand-organ for thirty years. I have made my living with it. I could have gone to Italy, where I was born, but I must stay here and die here. Are you listening to me?" he asked suddenly. "I will stay here because I must be close to Jocanda. She sleeps over on the East Side cemetery."

"Jocanda was a singer," he continued. "Her voice was a joy. She was straight as a stem and when the music played she swayed softly like a stem to the rhythm of the hushed harmony. I played my violin then. Together we toured the world. People call me 'Smiling Jim' now. That is not my name. My real name is Donatello. I am an artist. You have seen a spring bubbling over blue marble. That was Jocanda's voice. Pure like crystal and vibrant with life. From her lips came miracles, she transformed the world with her voice."

I LISTENED to the old man, thunder struck. He lifted his hands and gesticulated. His pale face became serene and majestic when he described the beauty of his Jocanda, but his smile faded and his features contorted when he told of the hours of sorrow, of the long road of suffering.

"We were in Chicago thirty years ago. It was a rough town then. A man had followed us from Montreal. He was in love with Jocanda, so he said. There had been many before, but she had paid no attention. This man was persistent. He was at the stage-door each night and I came to blows with him on one occasion. I thought that would have finished the affair, but I caught sight of him very often after that. Yet each time he slunk away.

"Jocanda was never more beautiful and her beauty inspired me. To be near her meant glory for me. When I looked upon her my bow seemed to draw life from the music of her body. I felt carried away on the wings of her song. I lived in ecstasy. I could have created great and lasting things. For her voice and beauty transfigured the world into an enchanted empire. I had measureless visions and my playing corresponded to the moods of nature. Fire I had then and I could sway the crowd with my motives.

"But that man came again and one day Jocanda was gone. I knew she had not run away with him, for she loved me too dearly. Still she was gone. I was frantic, I tore my hair and tortured the police with my questions. I spent days and nights walking the streets. A female form at the end of a lonely gas-lit street sent me racing for the spot. The face of a woman behind a curtained window paralyzed me. I walked for weeks, for months, I spent all I had on private detectives, but I could not find Jocanda. How long it was I do not know, but one day I woke up in a hospital. They told me the year. Jocanda had been away eighteen months. I was discharged from the hospital. But I could not play any more. There was no music in my soul any longer. I had gone with Jocanda. I bought this hand-organ, this same hand-organ and I started grinding. I have ground at it for thirty years. I do not know the tunes it is playing, because I will not listen.

"People were kind to me. I always had enough to eat. At nights I walked the streets looking for Jocanda. I had never given up hope of seeing her back. I have wept rivers. I have cursed and I have prayed. I have burnt candles to Our Lady of Good Counsel and to the Mother of Jesus, who suffered herself.

"I have stood on the edge of the water, ready to jump. But always there rose before me the picture of Jocanda, my own Madonna, with her divine smile, and her flaming hair of purple. I could again hear her intoxicating voice. And I never jumped.

"Now that peace has come to me I sometimes dream of far-off Italy, of its azure skies and foaming mountain cataracts and I walk in perfumed gardens with her. I am at rest now.

"For I found Jocanda one day, thirty years ago now. A friend came and told me that she was dying in a hospital. He wanted to prepare me for the blow. He told me she was raving with dope, that her face was blotched and her beauty had long since faded. She had been hauled out of a vile den by the police. She told them she had been kept a prisoner there for five years. They laughed at her. Her body was diseased. She was dying.

"I went down to the hospital. I heard her voice again. That sweetest melody that I will hear on the hour when I reach the gate of heaven. She

Why the "Charleston" Was a Science Explains How the Dancers' Rhythmic Leaping Across the Ballroom Floor Exerted a Pressure Which Crushed a 5-Story Building Like an Egg Shell and Killed Nearly Fifty Persons

Removing the body of a woman victim from the ghastly wreck the "Charleston" made of the Boston night club

Kate Pullman, a professional exponent of the "Charleston"

There is more kicking, jumping and other vigorous action in the "Charleston" than there was in the old-fashioned breakdown.

Frank Decker, a singer employed at the ill-fated club and one of the survivors, says that the dance which ended in the tragedy was unusually boisterous. It was nearly dawn. The dancers were highly exhilarated by the night's gaieties—and the liquor which many of them had been consuming.

Another singer, John Duffy, who was among the killed, had just finished singing "West of the Great Divide." After the club "members" and their guests were through applauding him, they noisily demanded another "Charleston."

The weary, perspiring musicians picked up their instruments and started playing "West of the Great Divide" again, this time to a lively dance tempo.

"At least 50 couples crowded on the floor," says Frank Decker, "and they danced like folks gone mad. Before the orchestra had played a dozen notes I could feel the floor swaying. I heard loud cracks, but thought they were firecrackers.

"As the dance neared its close the orchestra speeded up the tempo and the dancers grew crazier than ever. It seemed as if they couldn't kick high enough or stamp their feet hard enough to satisfy themselves.

"When the orchestra was blaring almost the last note of the piece, there came a deafening roar. The lights went out and, in the twinkling of an eye, the old Pickwick club was no more."

Ironically enough the song that had vied in popularity with "West of the Great Divide" all through the club's celebration of the night before the Fourth was called "All Aboard for Heaven." A torn copy of the sheet music was found clutched in the dead hand of one of the women victims.

Near her lay the man with whom she had been dancing when the crash came. Beside him was an empty half-pint bottle and in his pocket was a half-emptied silver flask.

Professor John L. Carver is another of the eminent scientists who think that the concerted vigor with which the dancers followed the rhythm of the "Charleston" music was responsible for the building's collapse.

"It is a scientific fact," he says, "that rhythm exerts a far greater effect on a building than a broken pressure.

"If several men wish to break down a door, they pound against it together, with a log or other weapon. The telling blows are those which are de-

THE "Charleston," newest and most amazingly strenuous of the modern dances, became literally a dance of death in Boston the other night.

Scientists declare that the vigor with which a hundred dancers in a well-known night club on the edge of Boston's Chinatown kept time to the "Charleston's" peculiar and strongly accented rhythm was the direct cause of the five-story building's collapse, the killing of nearly 50 persons and the serious injury of scores of others.

If some far less strenuous dance had taken the "Charleston's" place, or if the dancers had been less exhilarated by their celebration of the night before the Fourth, the disaster would, science believes, have never occurred.

How did the "Charleston" release from the hand of death a weight that struck this building with a force many times greater than any thunderbolt and crushed it like an egg shell?

The explanation, according to physicists and engineers who have given the matter careful study, is a very simple one.

A minute or two before the Pickwick club collapsed a hundred hilarious men and women had taken the floor to dance the "Charleston." The total pressure on the floor of these 50 couples when standing or sitting quietly was about 15,000 pounds—just what they weighed.

But when the music began and their feet started hitting the floor all at once with the unusual vigor the "Charleston" calls for, their pressure on the floor was instantly increased 155 per cent—raised to the tremendous total of nearly 40,000 pounds.

As the music grew madder and the dancers more wildly boisterous, their feet hit the floor with ever-increasing force. Each time the building swayed a little more menacingly.

At last came the fatal moment—a beat of music that called for a more vigorous stamping than any that had gone before. The none too strong building, weakened by the rapid succession of sledge hammer blows falling with a weight pressure of many tons, could not withstand the strain.

Down it went into a tangled mass of wreckage that buried nearly 200 men and women.

In a report to District Attorney O'Brien, Edward W. Davis, graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and well-known consulting engineer, says:

"The rhythm of the 'Charleston,' with its thumping and rhythmic lateral swaying, would have a destructive tendency on any dance floor.

"Both the fox-trot and the 'Charleston' have a downward pressure. And the weight of a person exerted on a floor as pressure while dancing, increases 155 per cent over the normal weight while standing still.

"Thus, if in the Pickwick club at the moment of the fatal collapse, 50 couples—100 persons—were standing still, each with an average normal weight of 150 pounds, their total weight pressure on the floor would be 15,000 pounds.

"But if these couples were dancing, their weight pressure would be increased to a total of 38,250 pounds, or nearly twelve tons above normal.

"Soldiers, when crossing a bridge on a march, are always ordered to break step so that the bridge structure will not collapse beneath them as a result of the heavy rhythmic beat of their tread.

"This same principle applies to a dance floor. When the entire weight of the dancers presses rhythmically upon the same point, the foundations are naturally imperilled.

"The 'Charleston,' with its steady swaying and stamping of feet, was undoubtedly a fateful dance—a veritable dance of death."

THE "Charleston," as every follower of the modern dances knows, is a mixture of leaping and gliding, with very little of the latter. The dancers join hands, jump about and come down heavily on the floor.

Miss Doris Stevens, killed in the Pickwick club disaster livered in unison and not in broken and scattered fashion.

"The Pickwick club might have ultimately collapsed if the 'Charleston' had not been danced just as it was that morning. But the dance undoubtedly hastened the building's downfall.

"Even the air waves set in motion by a great organ or other musical instruments are capable of producing disastrous effects on a bridge, a building or other similar structure. And the same principle holds true with music as with dancing. The stress of the pressure is greater if the musical notes are sounded in rhythmic unison than if they are sounded in broken and scattered fashion."

PROFESSOR CARVER calls attention to the Old Testament's dramatic account of the way the walls of the city of Jericho fell at the cries and trumpet blasts of the children of Israel. In the Book of Joshua we read:

"So the people shouted when the priests blew with the trumpets: and it came to pass when the people heard the sound of the trumpets, and the people shouted with a great shout, that the wall fell down flat, so that the people went up into the city, every man straight before him, and they took the city."

Many scientists think that perhaps the true explanation of this remarkable incident is to be found in the effect the vibrations caused by the shouting and the trumpet blowing exerted on the city wall.

Vibration, the physicists tell us, is practically the essence of all matter. Light and color are ether vibrations. Sound is a transmission of vibratory waves.

vibration, the instructures of metal, concrete and wood contributes to their destruction. When, under the strain of constant vibration, such substances reach their elastic limit there may be a disaster to the building which they compose.

Lewis Irvine Thompson, distinguished architect and engineer, declared that the collapse of the Knickerbocker theater in Washington a few years ago was the result of the vibrations produced by the playing of a great organ—aided, perhaps, by the orchestral selection that followed.

THOSE rhythmic vibrations, Mr. Thompson believed, aggravated some trivial structural defect in the roof until the point of saturation was reached and the whole thing gave way, burying most of the audience and costing nearly 100 persons their lives.

Science holds it theoretically possible for a violinist to wreck the Brooklyn bridge by standing in its center

"The dancers' normal pressure of 15,000 pounds on the floor was raised to nearly 40,000 pounds the instant they began leaping about to the rhythm of the lively 'Charleston' music. The madder the dance grew the greater the pressure became. At last one particularly strenuous thump of the dancers' feet released from the hand of Death a weight tremendous enough to send the building crashing down into a tangled mass of wreckage" and playing one particular note on his violin. The rhythm of one note repeated over and over might produce a reciprocal vibration of some cable or steel support whose weakness would precipitate the whole structure into the East river.

It is well known that bridges are peculiarly sensitive to the movement of dogs, which trot with more regularity, evenness and rhythm of movement than any other animal.

Herbert Payne Smith, a well-known engineer, says that while Brooklyn bridge will stand for generations under even more than its present dead weight, it would not last very long under the strain of a drove of dogs crossing it every day. The synchronous vibration of the dogs' trot would, he says, find its response in some structural part and wreck the strongest bridge ever built.

The bridge could not withstand the vibrations. Brooklyn bridge carries daily a dead weight greater than any other structure in the world. But if this traffic maintained a synchronous vibration—if there was a sympathy of harmonics among all the elements of traffic—the bridge would soon be nothing but a mass of twisted steel.

This synchronous vibration is of peculiar significance in cities where many large buildings are devoted to the manufacture of clothing. If all the sewing machines in these factories maintained a synchronous vibration many buildings would be wrecked.

As a result of the Pickwick club disaster the dancing of the "Charleston" in public dance halls in Boston and several other cities has been prohibited for fear of the disastrous effect it might have on old or flimsy buildings.

How Much Ought a Wronged Wife

Mrs. Frank Tinney Explains From Her Long Experience in Forgiving Her Wayward Comedian Husband Just What the Limit Should Be

Mr. Tinney having his double chin photo graphed along with some of his English chorus girl friends

Mrs. Tinney and her little son and the police dog that is their chief protection since the husband and father succumbed to the lure of Imogene Wilson and other beauties

WHEN reports reached here from London the other day that Frank Tinney was tired of his rather hectic recent life and ready to come back home to his wife and son, everybody took it for granted that kind-hearted Mrs. Tinney was already to repeat the forgiveness she had so often before bestowed on her wayward comedian husband.

People recalled how a year ago Frank Tinney was haled into court by his sweetheart, Imogene Wilson, charged with having blacked her beautiful eyes. At the time this revelation came, Mrs. Tinney was in California, about to start divorce proceedings.

But when she heard of Frank's latest trouble she promptly hurried back to New York. She visited her husband. She took him home with her to Baldwin, Long Island. She testified for him in court. She once more forgave him.

But hardly had everybody finished saying what a fine woman Mrs. Tinney must be, than the news came that Tinney had sailed for Europe and was joined there very soon by the young woman who had so recently caused him all the public disgrace of a court trial.

A year passed. Tinney announced he was coming back home to Mrs. Tinney. And the comment at once was inevitable.

"Mrs. Tinney has forgiven her bad boy once again!"

Was this really true? The question was put to the lady herself the other afternoon as she sat on the porch of the Tinney home at Baldwin. Had she forgiven? Was there a reconciliation? How much and how often should a wife forgive? And does the amount of forgiveness to which a man should be entitled vary according to the business or profession in which he is engaged?

"I'd like to explain, in the beginning," said she, "that I didn't have to forgive Mr. Tinney just now, when it was reported that he wanted to come back home again. I had forgiven him long ago—even, perhaps, before he had done the thing which needed forgiveness. As for being reconciled—well, that's a different matter.

"I love my husband, no matter what he may do or where he may be. I wish him well. I'm ready to help him, whenever he is willing to do his part and wishes my help but as for throwing out my arms and opening my doors to the Frank Tinney of so many escapades—I positively refuse to do that any more.

"Until my husband has remained sober for a year, and until he presents me with convincing evidence that he has remained sober; until he has secured some sort of work and has kept to it industriously for the same period of time, Mr. Tinney may not come back home here to me.

"I don't insist that Mr. Tinney get a $1,200 a week position, such as he had before the Imogene Wilson episode. I am not mercenary. I would be almost as pleased if he kept a $15 a week position steadily for a year. The amount of money my husband can make is not to be compared with the value of the backbone he might develop in holding down a $15 job—soberly—for 365 days.

"Now it's neither good taste nor good manners for a wife to talk over much about her private affairs, so let's make this a more general consideration of what a wife should forgive—and when.

"Should the wife of a minister or of a broker forgive less than the wife of an actor? Should the woman married to a theatrical star be the most lenient and forgiving of all wives because his profession surrounds him with so many temptations?

"I'll try to answer these questions honestly. First, let me speak of what I call the 'I-can't-forgive-him-THAT' wife.

WE all have met this lady. She'll forgive her husband if he spills his soup on his waistcoat. She'll overlook it if he cheats at cards. She'll even let him swear loudly before the children. But—if he once forgets himself with 'the other woman,' her lips are set and her door is shut.

"I can't forgive him THAT," she wails, and rushes to her lawyer.

"I could never understand such a woman. No husband is perfect. And it isn't to be expected that all husbands will sin in the same way, and therefore require the same sort of forgiveness. We all have our favorite ways of sinning, or it would be a dreary world. And so I have come to believe that there is no possible error in the domestic catechism which a wife shouldn't forgive—at the right time and place.

"For my part, I could never see why a brief lapse from morality—a lapse later repented—should not be as readily forgiven as a lifetime of lying, or an entire matrimonial career of petty, household tyranny. The two latter might cause far more actual distress than the first. And I think every wife should be ready to forgive every transgression against domestic happiness. In fact, I honestly believe many wives all about us are forgiving all of these every day.

"When I have considered myself rather sinned against, I have always struggled to be fair. I have always striven to keep myself from deteriorating into that rather unpleasant woman—the martyr wife.

"We frequently meet her, sitting in stolid saintliness, her hands crossed in her idle lap, exclaiming by her smugness, 'Look at me! See how forgiving I am! And how he treats me! Really, if justice were done, the bears would come out of the woods and swallow him whole!'

"No, if a wife forgives, she should do so cheerfully, and, likewise, she should remember that she isn't perfect herself. And probably also needs a little forbearance at some time or other.

Frank Tinney and the padlocked hip pocket which he never seems to find any difficulty in getting into

"I believe it to be only wifely, only kind and right and womanly, for a wife to forgive her husband every sin possible, at least once. It's her duty to the man she married, no matter how old or young or wise or ignorant he is, whether he's preacher or poet or dentist or drayman. When we pass this one time of forgiveness, we reach the nub of the matter, 'How many times should a wife forgive after the first?' We all have met the 'once only' wife.

" 'Well, I'll overlook it this once,' she says, dramatically, 'but never let it happen again!'

"Now, any woman of experience knows that it's hard for us to get out of the habit of sinning—whatever may be our pet brand of transgression. Each time a husband has flirted with his neighbor's wife makes it more of a struggle for him to stop flirting with her. Besides, he may have her at his coat tails and he may find it very hard to shake her off.

OBSERVATION has convinced me that the wife who forgives only once, is quite as narrow and unloving as the silly, foolish wife who forgives her husband, no matter what he does, just because in her sentimental girlhood she once listened to an old saw about how 'men will be men.'

"All of us women who have young sons could well apply some of the discipline we mete out to our boys to our husbands as well, before we forgive them. There is many a husband who should not be forgiven till he has been punished—sent to bed without his dinner or locked in the dark closet to think things over.

"I have always felt that a term in prison would have done my husband more good than all the forgiveness of my heart. If he had been confined for a year, at the time of the Imogene Wilson disturbance, I firmly believe that he would not be today the spiritual bankrupt he has become.

"I would advise all wives to overlook things in their husbands, but to administer small boy discipline, whenever they can.

"Now pardon me if I become rather personal again. Let us suppose a case. Let us imagine that Mr. Tinney at last comes to his senses. Let us imagine that he remains sober for a year. He returns to his family and continues sober and hard working for six months more. And once again, perhaps, he forgets himself and breaks his new rules.

"Should I put him out of my home? Should I send him away to wicked, selfish, immoral, flattering women, to fawning men who tell him what a good fellow he is, while they mix the drinks? Should I say he has thrown away his last chance when he becomes intoxicated again and turns to foolish women.

"If I did such a thing, after he had been sober for eighteen months, I think I would be a wicked woman. Instead I would better say to him:

" 'Now, my boy, you've shown me how well you can behave these last eighteen months—when your heart is in it. You've slipped—slipped shamefully. But I have faith in you. Buck up—and let's start again.'

"But before Mr. Tinney comes into this forgiveness, he would have to show me true repentance. He's got to show a 'heart of grace,' as the preachers say.

"Many people will smile when I say that were I a minister's wife, I would make less allowance for him than I, as an actor's wife, have for Mr. Tinney. This is the reason. A man of the church has all society arrayed at his back to help him behave.

"People expect ministers to be sober, sensible men, and it is human nature—particularly masculine human nature—to hand back to society what society expects. Therefore, because a minister's environment conduces to virtue, a minister's wife should not be called upon to forgive as much as an actor's wife, for instance.

"My husband was—and I believe still is—a clever, able, charming gentleman. By the force of the magnetism which was his stock in trade he attracted flocks of silly, adoring women who loaded him with foolish compliments.

" 'Oh, Mr. Tinney, you are so wonderful!'

" 'Oh, Mr. Tinney, you are the funniest man in the world!'

"I still can hear their foolish praise. This attitude tends to rob the actor of proper perspective. Because he has influenced great audiences as he will, because he has become drunk with their applause, he lives on emotions and not on reason, till he forgets right and duty altogether. Society prefers to find him a spoiled, bad boy. And so, obligingly, he becomes a bad boy.

"When I married Mr. Tinney, I thoroughly understood the emotional strain and the temptations which are a part of every actor's life. I was a woman of the theater myself. And because I understood, I promised myself to be a reasonable and forgiving wife. But in the first years, I am afraid I forgave too much. Or else, that I did not forgive wisely or constructively.

"I have learned my lesson, probably too late. I know that it is right for a wife to forgive, again and again and again—but only while her husband is trying to do better.

"No matter what may happen, I still love my husband. I still hope for his best good. But he may come back to me only after he has been sober and industrious for an entire year. If he really wants to come back, he will do this."

Broadway Banter

FORNEY WYLY

CATCHING D. W. Griffith direct one of his super-movies would never be classed as an uninteresting way to spend the afternoon. This director "The Birth of a Nation," "Hearts of the World" and countless other features, is now making for Paramount "That Royle Girl," adapted from a novel by the same name which recently appeared serially in a well-known monthly magazine. Carol Dempster has the lead in the new Griffith film, in fact of late she has had the lead in all of the Griffith films. Miss Dempster is featured with W. C. Fields in "Sally of the Saw Dust," the most recently released Griffith production.

Mr. Griffith, who first taught Mary Pickford how to pout and the Gishes how to gish, goes about his directing in a way entirely different from any of the other directors I have watched in action. This master director outlines the scene and situation, and then tells the players to go through it as they think it should be done. After they have given their own interpretation of the part, then and only then, does Mr. Griffith come forward with any changes and corrections he may have. In this way, a player's individualism and initiative are given full play, and he or she is far more apt to give a sane and natural performance, and much less inclined to give one of those ridiculously drilled and puppet-like interpretations so many directors seem to inspire.

Harrison Ford and James Kirkwood are playing the principal male roles in "That Royle Girl." Bobby Watson, whom if you didn't see this winter in "My Girl," you may have seen as "Madame Lucy" in the never-to-be-forgotten "Irene" has another "Madame Lucy" part in "That Royle Girl." The day I watched Mr. Griffith at work, he was directing a fashion show scenes, with stunning models wandering around in all directions. Bobby Watson was the "modiste" and Carol Dempster the slavey, who, with the unfailing awkwardness movie slaveys always have, was proceeding to burn one of the models with her iron in just the place nobody likes to be burned. See the picture for further details. Time and again was the scene rehearsed and you may be sure when it was finally "shot" the situation was about as perfect in every respect as was possible for it to be.

THERE are numberless things you've always heard go on around movie studios that you'd be surprised to find out really do go on. For instance, the music. In almost every studio I've been in there is an orchestra which plays appropriate music for each scene that is being filmed. There are portable dressing-rooms in the middle of the studio for some of the stars, so that they won't have to go all the way upstairs every time the make-up needs freshening. Yellow, of course, is the color of the make-up, and everyone more or less looks as though they were in the last stages of jaundice.

Around the set being used, there are chairs on which the names of the various stars are painted. There was a "Mr. Griffith" chair, a "Miss Dempster" chair, and a "Mr. Ford" one. I do not know what particular tragedy would occur should Mr. Ford sit in Miss Dempster's chair, or vice-versa, but I suppose the labelling of the chairs is necessary to prevent their being flopped into by just any passer-by who might feel a little weary. Indeed, it is only right to admit that at the time I first noticed these labelling, I was very comfortably settled in a chair which I unhappily found bore the unmistakable name of "Mr. Griffith."

IT is not entirely improbable you are becoming the least bit tired of having recounted to you week after week the doings of the same group of Atlanta people who are here in New York. If such is the case, why it is then up to you to send some new Atlanta people up, and I will be more than glad to expose as completely as I can anything and everything they do while here. Until their arrival, however, I have no choice other than to continue my observations of those same Atlantans who remain with us.

On a recent Saturday night, one of the tables at the Seawanhaka Yacht club at Oyster Bay might very easily have been one of those at the Driving

Glimpses of Hollywood

LEW CODY, devil extraordinary with the ladies, may be seen any evening nowadays working himself into a state bordering on apoplexy over his new table game which his friends congregate at his Beverly Hills home to play.

Down in Lew's basement is a big room, a replica of an English "pub," and here is installed this game, which is played by blowing a cork ball with hand bulbs over a smooth round board and into little holes.

On Wednesday night Claire Windsor, Bert Lytell, Ernst Lubitsch, Mrs. Lubitsch, Mabel Normand, Ann Pennington, Edwin Carewe, Mary Akin, Edmund Lowe and Lilyan Tashman were shrieking and puffing as the little balls rolled first into one hole and then another.

Bert Lytell, browner than an Indian from swimming, was having as hilarious a time as might be expected at a horse race, slapping Claire jovially on the back every time she missed, and calling her "Our Annie."

Claire herself was squealing over every puff of the bulb, being outdone only by Mabel Normand, whose small size kept her jumping up and using both hands for frenzied squeezes to keep the little cork ball arolling.

Lew's "pub" is the only room of its sort in Hollywood, and everything in it bespeaks the jolly English tavern. A big fireplace is surmounted by a tavern sign "The Goat and Boot," showing a goat rampant and a boot rampant. The sign is repeated on the curtains of rough monk cloth and on the old English oak chairs with laced thigh seats and backs.

A small old-time bar holds an accumulation of special glasses. Lew's friends are getting their names engraved on glasses and sending them to him much after the idea of the days of "way back when, when our dads all had their personal mug on the barber's racks."

A "lost and found" cabinet contains odd and startling objects left behind by guests, everything from false teeth to a lady's garter. Prints of English hunting scenes, red-coated riders and fox hounds, autographed photos from Lew's friends, the sport champions of pugilism and auto racing adorn the walls. Several iron lanterns—street lamps, purloined from dim corners of old London—lean crazily against the rough walls near the fireplace with its iron calfshead.

Corn beef and cabbage dinners are the specialty of "The Goat and Boot," which holds open house when Lew is not working on a picture. A big iron hinged oak door in the corner is used as a guest book, and all of Hollywood's famous names are there, scrawled or carved by nails that fit the guest's hand.

During supper Lew recounted a recent experience with his press agent, who always is calling on him to do publicity stunts. This time the P. A. wanted him to pose for a picture with a certain brand of eye glass.

"Say," said Lew, "I've opened shoe stores, I've given away caps at cafe dancing contests, I've posed in hats and approved of innovations in men's fashions all over Hollywood, but when it comes to crutches, bandages, gold fillings, ear lops and eye glasses, that's out."

MABEL NORMAND entertained all of old Hollywood and most of new on Tuesday in her new home in Beverly Hills. It was a farewell to her friends before her departure on Sunday for New York for her announced stay of five years and $2,500,000.

Pola Negri, in black crepe, with her flesh stockings and black slippers and a black Spanish shawl embroidered in scarlet was accompanied by Rod LaRocque. Jack White came in for a considerable share of her attention during the evening.

Mack Sennett, the man who started Mabel on the road to movie fame, was present. Lowell Sherman, Louis the Fifteenth of Monsieur Beaucaire, was handing about sandwiches with a courtly air in the patio, where the buffet lunch was laid, keeping a firm grip on his monocle the while.

Lou Tellegen, pale and interesting in full evening attire, maintained a watchful eye on the punch bowl.

Kenneth Harlan and Marie Prevost circulated through the thronged rooms together and in the parlor a band of five colored musicians entertained while one of their number did the Charleston.

Bessie Love followed the musician with her own version of the Charleston and encored with a Hula number.

A Spanish beauty with a mandolin did several Spanish and French songs with a rollicking air that went right to the heart of Hobart Henley, who is somewhat at a loss since Nita Naldi left Hollywood high and dry.

Rose, Kitty and Ted Doner came in after their show in town was over and Rose and Viola Dana staged an impromptu Charleston contest ably accompanied by Lefty Flynn on the mandolin and Roscoe Arbuckle on the steel guitar.

Lionel Barrymore with his wife, who is quite thin since recovery from a long illness were offering good luck wishes to Mabel, who was standing by an enormous urn of flowers bearing the same message from Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks. Mabel herself wore a white chiffon dress sprinkled with true love knots of brilliants, and looked remarkably pretty and well. Returning good fortune has restored the old-time sparkle to the little comedienne who leaves many devoted friends behind her. Floral offerings from Constance and Norma Talmadge also were there. Lew Cody held down his reputation as the life of the party. Agnes Ayres, in a gorgeous Spanish shawl and long Spanish earrings and necklace of filagree, looked the Castilian lady with her golden hair and her Mexican husband, Manuel Reach. Ann Pennington floated about in orchid chiffon, her auburn hair quite fluffed and ethereal looking. Jack Warner—divorced temporarily from the four other Warner brothers—expanded into more and more geniality. Ernst Lubitsch was accompanied by his wife, whose blond doll-like beauty was set off by a gown of roman striped silk with flesh tulle draped loosely over it. A sprinkling of oil and mining men also attended.

HOLLYWOOD'S funny bone is tinkling as the result of an incident involving two well-known names. At a party this week Buster Keaton walked up to John Barrymore with his customary sombre visage and said: "Mr. Barrymore, I certainly admired your last picture. Especially that fall you took. Lord, what a fall that was," and with that he took a fall himself in his best comedy manner.

"No," remonstrated Mr. Barrymore, "you got that wrong. It was this way." And with that HE took the fall to show Buster just where Buster was wrong.

But alas, and another alas, Jawn sprained his neck and went around with his head on one side for the rest of the evening.

This was the greatest American actor's only casualty this week. Jawn

William Jennings Bryan's Weekly Bible Talk

The Macedonian Call

BY WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

PHRASE that can stand the wear and tear of nineteen centuries shows great vitality; "The Macedonian call" the title of our Bible Talk today—has been used on innumerable occasions to describe a cry for help. The incident recorded in the text gives us another vision that appeared to Paul—a heavenly vision, like others he had, the truth of which is proven by his obedience and by the results that follow therefrom.

As Paul and Silas, together with Timothy, were traveling through the region of Phrygia and Galatia, they were "forbidden of the Holy Ghost to speak the word in Asia." Luke does not tell us by what means the message was communicated to the disciples; whatever the form, it was sufficient for the purpose and Paul and his associates obeyed.

Then the little group "assayed to go into Bithynia; but the Spirit suffered them not." Here, again, their purpose was thwarted. They had not yet been informed as to their destination; they were simply told where not to go until they finally reached Troas, the ancient Troy of historic renown.

Here, a vision appeared to Paul in the night. A man of Macedonia besought him, saying, "Come over into Macedonia, and help us." Luke gives us a very accurate picture of Paul's prompt obedience. "After he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us

Text of Today's Bible Talk by Mr. Bryan
(Acts 16: 6-15)

Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia, and were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia.
After they were come to Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia: but the Spirit suffered them not.
And they passing by Mysia came down to Troas.
And a vision appeared to Paul in the night; There stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, Come over into Macedonia and help us.
And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them.
Therefore loosing from Troas, we came with a straight course to Samothracia, and the next day to Neapolis;
And from thence to Philippi, which is the chief city of that part of Macedonia, and a colony: and we were in that city abiding certain days.
And on the sabbath we went out of the city by a river side, where prayer was wont to be made; and we sat down, and spake unto the women which resorted thither.
And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshipped God, heard us: whose heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul.
And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and abide there. And she constrained us.

for to preach the gospel unto them." Dr. David J. Burrell, recalls the fact that Troy was the embarking place of the heroes of two great epic poems, the Ulysses of Homer's Odyssey and Aeneas of Virgil's Aeneid. As Paul was an educated man, he had probably read both of these great poems.

HE had followed Ulysses in his wanderings and was familiar with the wonderful classical allusions that have been drawn from Homer's great poem; he is quite certain to have read the story as told by Virgil, the beginning of which every American student of Latin knows. "Arms, and the man I sing, who, forced by Fate, And haughty Juno's unrelenting hate, Expelled and exiled, left the Trojan shore." (Dryden's Translation) Paul set out upon his journey, doubtless little thinking that in the passing of the centuries it would prove more fascinating, more instructive, and more eventful than these fabled journeys that stand out so prominently in literature. Paul's mission was a spiritual one; his object was the conquest of a continent for Christ—a gigantic task when we remember the work to be done and the handful of Christians who essayed so great an achievement. The toil of Ulysses and Aeneas have pleased the fancy of a few students, while the labors of Paul and his companion have transformed hundreds of millions of people whom the gospel finally reached as the result of their pioneer work.

There are three lessons that may be drawn from this call: First, there is a supernatural power that governs the world—a power that can communicate its instructions to man.

The means by which these communications are conveyed are various. The vision or dream is the means most frequently employed. Joseph's dreams were the ones best known among those recorded in the Old Testament; and Paul's visions are the most prominent among those recorded in the New Testament, although we have other illustrations such as that which brought to Peter the call to the Gentiles.

But instructions are sometimes given in the form of an impression that is so imperative as to change the course of a life; and who knows but that all the decisions which affect for good hearts that are open to divine suggestion may be due to the invisible influence of that supernatural power that created the universe and still controls it.

This much we know, that two may be sitting together and listening to an evangelistic appeal; one decides to

Things New and Old About the Bible

The Foundation of the Old Testament Canon

BY REV. W. P. KING

Pastor First Methodist Church Gainesville, Ga.

HE ordinary traditional view of the canon is that throughout the history of Revelation certain great personages were mechanically inspired to produce certain books, and all of these books were preserved by a miraculous Providence. When the Revelation was complete all the various books were put together as one by a body of men who were unanimous in their judgment as to what should enter into the sacred collection. This easy traditional view is based on Jewish traditions of late origin.

An extravagant form of the legend assures us that the holy books were destroyed at the time of the captivity, and that Ezra restored them miraculously through Divine inspiration. A more rational form of the legend ascribes to Ezra, Nehemiah, and the Great Synagogue the work of completing the canon.

A modification of this tradition afterwards assigned to Ezra a more important function to the effect that Ezra and the Great Synagogue collected into one volume the dispersed books under three heads, of the law, the prophets, and sacred writings. It has been received as indisputable that the canon of the Old Testament was settled once for all through Divine inspiration by Ezra and the Great Synagogue.

As to the New Testament canon it has been naively supposed that there was entire unanimity in the early church conceiving the collection of books in the New Testament. The commanding influence of Augustine in reference to the canon was as a whole on the side of error. He would have everything settled by the authority of tradition. The necessity of maintaining a fight against the enemies of the church made Augustine unhistorical in his treatment of the canon. In this way he included in the canon a number of apocryphal books. For several centuries from the time of Augustine an unhistorical spirit prevailed. The question of the canon was determined by an appeal to the church fathers without any investigation into its real history.

WE ARE placed on a historical basis when we find the Ecclesiastes written about 130 B. C. and Josephus at close of first century A. D., mentions the three well-known divisions of the Old Testament.

It is now recognized that there is no ground for supposing the books to have been regarded as sacred from the time of their composition, nor even for supposing that they were composed for the purpose of forming an authoritative canon.

The history of the canon, both of the Old Testament and the New Testament presents many striking resemblances. It was formed not by a single person, nor by a single generation, but by slow and gradual growth as the need of the church demanded.

Bishop Ryle says: "First there was the law corresponding to the Gospels, then the prophets and historical works added like the acts of the Apostles and the Pauline Apostles, and finally the second writings added as a miscellaneous group in what were Ecclesiastes, Esther and Songs of Solomon, whose authority was as much questioned as some of the disputed Epistles in the New Testament.

But for the allegorical interpretations of the Song of Solomon, it is very unlikely that it would have been included in the canon.

The admission of books into the canon was determined by no outward supernatural manipulation. In the time of our Lord some books like Esther and Ecclesiastes were still held in dispute by many rabbinical teachers. Both of these books come within one vote of being left out of the Old Testament canon.

The evidence tends to show that the idea of a complete canon of scripture did not take its rise until towards the close of the monarchy, and the dispersion had begun.

Not until then was the need recognized of collecting the various records of tradition, of history and law, of prophecy and poetry and wisdom, which served the purpose of bringing into a closed spiritual union the Israel of God scattered abroad without a central temple of worship. We do not find the recognition of any writing as canonical Scriptures until Deuteronomy was so recognized in the reign of Josiah, 621 B. C.

THE Pentateuch as a whole was not canonized until the action recorded in Nehemiah, chapters 8-10. According to Ezra, chapter 7, verse 6, it was brought to Jerusalem in 458 B. C.

It was only after the exile that the canonization of the prophets took place. It was due in part to the growing disuse of the Hebrew language and the decline of the productive activity of the earlier theocratic spirit.

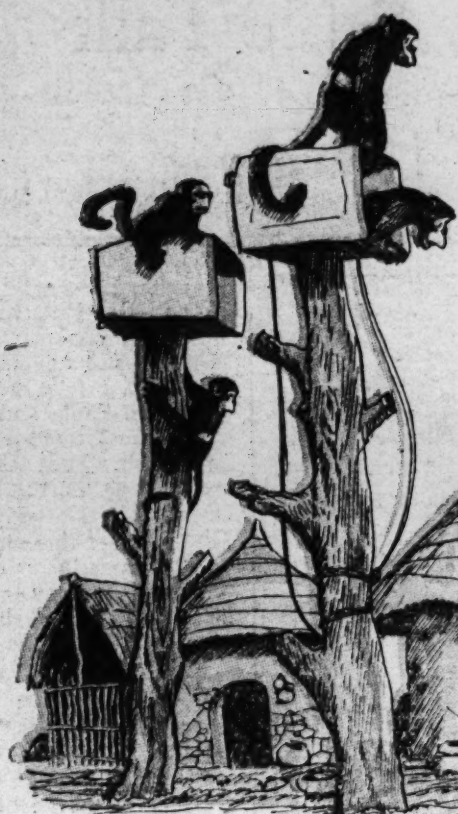

The fact that the term "The Law and the Prophets" was used to designate the entire Hebrew Bible shows how late was the canonizing of those writings called the Sacred Writings. In this third portion of the Old Testament the canonization of the Psalms was not completed until the Maccabean era.

The last step in completing the Old Testament canon consists in selecting from a miscellaneous group such works as Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther, Ruth and Daniel, which took place in the first century of the Christian era. The dispute in regard to Esther, Songs of Solomon and Ecclesiastes was not wholly settled even at the beginning of the third century A. D. Thus the Old Testament canon grew up under providential influences, which left it whence it came into the hands of the Christian church and still somewhat indefinite and without fixed limits. However, it is safe to say that the Old Testament canon was practically settled at Synod of Jamnia, 90 A. D.

A recent writer makes the following statement: "The Septuagint, the Greek version of the Old Testament in common use in New Testament times, contained more than a dozen books in addition to those that appear in our Protestant Bible. These books the so-called Apocrypha, were

BY MRS. WYNANT HUBBARD.

I WENT into the heart of Africa with my husband, and there we stayed throughout three years. We took our 14-months-old baby with us. When we returned to the United States there were four in the family, for Joe, our second child, was born in Rhodesia. Our experiences during those three years show that raising a young family in the Dark Continent, away from all white people, is not the impossible task that some might think it. But there were enough thrills and hardships to keep it continually entertaining, to say the least.

My husband has always been interested in animals, and this, coupled with the courses in mining which he studied while at Harvard, led our footsteps toward Africa. While he was in the university he used to work in the Boston zoo with the animals in his spare time, and he developed a fondness for them.

Before my graduation from Vassar I went up to Labrador during the war year of 1918 to do some nursing at the Grenfell Medical mission there. It was in Labrador that Mr. Hubbard and I first met. After our marriage we went to Nova Scotia and then to Africa on the business of asbestos mining.

But the asbestos prospects in Africa fell through, and as we were left stranded there with nothing to do, our thoughts turned naturally to wild animal capturing. It requires much skill to go out in the bush, take young animals alive and bring them up in good health and good spirits, but Mr. Hubbard had worked with them enough to acquire that skill. There is plenty of demand for them from the showmen and various animal trainers.

We decided to take the jump. After fixing up a partnership arrangement with a Rhodesian resident who agreed to furnish the necessary capital, Mr. Hubbard got the equipment together and we started for Tara, a small collection of huts at the end of a branch railroad which had ventured into the middle of the bush country.

When one goes out into the bush, they call it in Africa "going into the blue," and that phrase sounds the keynote of the country. Blue, blue sky, with never a break, for six months in the year contrasts with the yellow and brown of the rolling country which stretches away on all sides in gentle undulations. There is no hint of a jungle—neither Mr. Hubbard nor I ever saw one in our three years in Africa—and no "lush tropical growth" so often found in popular imagination, if we except the tall grass that grows through the wet summer (from October to March) and often reaches a height of 8 or 10 feet, covering all the countryside. It is burned off during the dry winter months.

Scattered around here and there are a few trees, not greatly unlike some of the common ones of New England in appearance. But they are rather scarce: I believe there were only three trees on our place near Tara. Clumps of bush complete the picture, and a finishing touch is added by the innumerable ant hills that dot the countryside. They are made by the white ant, and range from little mounds a few inches high to huge piles of earth raised up 10 or 12 feet.

THESE ant hills furnished us with an essential building material for our huts. When the little creatures heap up the dirt they seem to spit on it some peculiar juice that turns the mud into an ideal plaster. First, we dug shallow trenches in which we placed upright poles close together; we tied a few more branches on as cross supports and then covered this framework with the ant hill mud. For thatched roofs we cut the long grass. A touch of decoration was given by putting on the falls an outer coating of smooth blue mud.

All this was done about six miles from the little railroad siding of Tara. We had to prepare accommodations for ourselves and about 250 natives, and in addition fix up a "zoo" that would hold around 300 wild animals. By

Mr. and Mrs. Wynant Hubbard are the most unusual African adventurers of today and quite unlike the conventional picture that the term "big-game hunter" calls to mind. They have been out of college only four years. Mrs. Hubbard, a graduate of Vassar, would be distinguished in any ballroom gathering by her youthful charm and beauty, and Mr. Hubbard looks the typical clean-cut college athlete—as indeed he was, for at Harvard, where he studied mining, he starred at tackle on the football varsity.

In this and other articles to follow, Mrs. Hubbard tells how she and her husband ventured far beyond the white man's civilization in Africa, and managed to raise two babies and at the same time take care of a camp of 250 natives and a menagerie of 600 wild animals.

They are anxious to go back again. Mrs. Hubbard would rather live in Africa than in any other place, and her husband is eager to resume work as professional catcher of wild animals for trainers and zoos. His is a genuine profession, too, though there are at present only two others in it.

Starting for the bush country is called "going into the blue" in Matabeleland

October—this was in 1922—we had our huts finished.

Two days after we had moved in, Joe was born. We were 100 miles from a doctor, north and south, so Mr. Hubbard and a trained nurse were the only ones to officiate at Joe's rather hectic and hurried arrival at 2 o'clock in the morning of October 8. October is one of the hottest months of the year in Rhodesia, and it was, oh! so hot, even in our mud huts. I had chosen not to stay in the hospital at Livingstone, 100 miles away, because Davy, our first child, was so puny a baby that I could not bear to part with him for any length of time in this new country under strange conditions.

All went well, although Mr. Hubbard had to leave at critical moments to hush poor Davy, who was crying in the other hut.

The "boys," as all natives in Africa are called, no matter what their age, were delighted that a new "boss" was born. They celebrated by giving a dance the next night, in which they reached the heights of syncopation which only a true African can attain.

Joe thrived from the very moment of his birth. I started him off on a regular ration of one grain of equine

Our four leopards, all of them pet of breaking away from the "zoo" and

Mr. Hubbard with Davy, and Mrs. Hubbard with little Joe, breaking in the baby elephants then pets, had a troublesome habit of "zoo" and wandering around loose every night, and as a result he has had no more than three or four touches of fever in his life. Euquine is the same as quinine, without its bitter taste.

But the welfare of Joe and Davy could not take up all my time, for there were many other things incidental to our new life that had to be looked after.

FIRST, there were the natives to hire and care for. As soon as a white man or woman comes into that country the news spreads by word of mouth among the negroes in the district that there are prospects of good jobs and they come flocking around. Each one brings his "reference book"—a worn, old tablet, usually with a little mirror in the cover, in which all his previous employers have written down what they think of him. The native guards his book of references carefully indeed—he knows that it would be almost impossible to get a job without it.

It was not long before we had 250 natives working for us. Then Mr. Hubbard would go off on his hunting expeditions—he would be away sometimes two or three months at a time—and I would be alone with my children and the farm full of "boys."

At first I had a difficult time making my wants known, as none of the "boys" understood English and I didn't know anything about the Matebele tongue. The first four words that I learned in this new language were "manzi" (water), "chisa manzi" (hot water), "mooshe" (good) and "ikona mooshe" (no good). It came easier after a while.

Naturally it was impossible for me to supervise all the two-hundred odd natives personally, so I gave my orders through the "foremen" that we had and a jewel of a houseboy, "Johnny Mumba." Johnny was a Congo boy who had come from the Victoria Falls hotel; when he joined us he could speak no English except "hot water" and "cold water." But he was a capable chap; he kept the huts in perfect order and also did the washing. He would soak the clothes and linen with water, rub them with soap and then thump them soundly on a box until they were snowy white—the approved African method and really the most effective.

As to meals, we did not lack good food, though it was sometimes a rather unusual diet that we had. Later on, when we moved into Portuguese East Africa and were isolated by a flood, it was a different story—due to extraordinarily unfortunate circumstances. But in Rhodesia we always had enough.

The natives were our chief source of supply. When it was a time of plenty they would bring in all the game we wanted, and no one could ask for better meat than that of such strange-sounding animals as duiker, oribi, eland or sable antelope.

In famine time I had to change the main course to fowl. Guinea fowl was especially plentiful in season, and the boys would go out and trap them for 10 cents apiece. The country was alive with this bird and we almost became ashamed to look "n'kanka" in the face.

Milk I got by renting from the natives three or four tiny cows at the reasonable rate of $1.25 per month. Fruit and vegetables were more difficult to get. I had a fair-sized garden started there once and was in high hopes of having a steady supply, but the fates were against us. Just as the plants were beginning to develop, huge grasshoppers descended by the thou-

...ked out of the groups. I kept a closer supervision over the household affairs, but after a while the boys got so well trained that I had little worry.

The chief members of the household staff at first were the cook and destroyed the garden completely!

A typical Sunday dinner which I used to serve was as follows:

Eland Soup	Yams
Guinea Fowl	Tomatoes
Kidney Beans	Bananas or Watermelons
Tea

MY prize recipe, however, was that which I used for cream puffs one Christmas. They were made with buffalo fat and guinea fowl eggs.

Once I committed a bad mistake in this regime of cookery. I was busy on some beaten biscuits and suddenly found that the supply of buffalo fat was running low. I went into the room next to the kitchen, hurriedly seized a jar that appeared to contain what I wanted and mixed its contents with the rest of the biscuit recipe. I later found that I had used fat, all right—but it had come from a leopard. You may not think there is much difference between that and the buffalo fat, but I can assure you there is!

I was of necessity a policeman, judge, jury, doctor and nurse and general guardian of the natives while Mr. Hubbard was away. They would frequently get involved among themselves and then the white woman would have to administer approximate justice.

"Oh, he's dying—come quick, come quick," some one of the boys would exclaim, rushing up to me. "Oh, come quick, he's being killed!" So I would have to go down to the native compound and end the quarrel and afterward patch up the differences.

There was nearly always a woman at the bottom of it. When I found out whose wife was whose and got everybody sorted out properly, the fight would end and I could go back to more routine tasks. The natives did not sulk; once a quarrel was over it was over and they harbored no hard feelings about it. We had a Congo savage with a terrible temper (toward other natives, that is)—he had his front teeth filed to beautifully sharp points, and the bridge of his nose had been removed some time since by a peevish leopard, so he was a rather ferocious sight. Once I had to interfere in a vicious fight which he was staging with another boy. I panned him between the shoulder above it. Her father and mother dozed comfortably through the noise. She was pedaling with lusty determination when an open car swung up to the curbstone, and with loud honking proclaimed the coming of guests. "It's Concepcion," Fernanda cried excitedly, "and Pedro. There's Maria. And, O, look, Rita, there he is. Isn't he grand?"

"Who?" Joe asked jealously as Rita went to the window.

"The man with Maria."

"I don't think much of him."

"You wouldn't," said Fernanda.

"Call them in," said Rita.

The crowd in the car wouldn't be called in. They had come, they explained, to take Rita and Fernanda and Joe to the beach. "We can't all get in there," Joe protested. "You take Fern and Rita, and I'll go down in the cars. Where you going, Long Beach or Venice?"

"Long Beach," they shouted. Come on, though, there's plenty of room for everybody."

THERE was, they demonstrated, by crowding. The man with Maria moved gallantly so that Rita might find place beside him. Joe, glowering, had to crush in front with Pedro and Concepcion. Rita smiled tenderly at his rigid back. The new man—Maria had called him Manuel Sandro—spoke to her. "Are you sister, perhaps, to Marta Gordo?"

"Has she a sister?" She laughed joyously at his flattery, watching with tingling happiness in her new-found power over him the slow reddening of Joe's neck.

"If she had, it must be you."

"You know her?"

"Yes, well."

"Is she—"

"She is beautiful."

"Oh!"

"Perhaps you, too, are in pictures?"

"No."

"You could be."

Remembrance of the girl at the Chinese goods section, of the girl at the Blue Bulldog, of the hundred and one Cinderella tales of the town pumped the blood into her cheeks. If it could happen to others, why couldn't it happen to her? "But how?" she challenged Sandro, eyes entreating him.

"You really want to?"

Did she? Thought of last night, of the implied promise in Joe's love, of Miss Kellar's advice held her; but Maria was glowering at her in rage, Fernanda was breathing in excitement, Concepcion petrified in astonishment. "You ain't going to," Joe said, without turning from the front seat. Instantly she blazed with the fire of protest against his first proprietary assumption. "Sure, I want to," she told Sandro.

"You come out to the Palatial Studios tomorrow morning, and ask for me." He scribbled on a card. "That will get you in."

"Oh!"

"O, Rita!"

"O, you Mary Pickford!"

"What are you going to call yourself?"

"Will your father let you?"

They were all excited, all thrilled, Fernanda, Concepcion, Pedro, even Maria. Only Sandro sat back, holding his pose of man of the world. Joe never turned. "You let me out here," he bade Pedro as they halted at a car crossing. "You're not going?" the others assailed him, but Rita could say nothing. Tears filled her eyes as he insisted; but he did not see them, for he did not look back. "What do you know?" Fernanda shrieked. "He's jealous! Well, he cuts off his nose."

Because something within her ached intolerably at Joe's going Rita plunged into the gay game of nonsense they were all playing. Hurt, she wanted to hurt someone else. A barb from Maria drew blood. "I'll be there tomorrow," she promised Sandro, and through the rest of the day flirted with him till even Fernanda thrust in a word of caution. "You don't know nothing about him," she said, "except what Maria said, and she won't tell where she met him."

"I don't care," said Rita.

She cared about nothing, she told herself, as she stood on the porch that night after the crowd had gone. Again the moon came up over the top of the apartment house across the street. Again the breeze lifted from the salt marshes. There came no sound from the dark shop down the street. No light showed there. Miserably she went to her room to weep for long hours.

With morning came pride. Bravely she donned the white and yellow holiday attire. "Where do you go today in those?" her mother asked. "To the movies," said Rita. "They want me to come in pictures."

"To be sure," jibed Mrs. Menora. "The king sends for you, no doubt."

"With a chariot," Rita amended, glad to be disbelieved.

She began to have doubts of the reality of her luck as she took the long ride out to Hollywood. After all, she was Rita Menora, one of thousands of girls of her people to whom things like this didn't happen. O, well, she'd lose only a half-day's pay, she decided philosophically, and not even that if she could make the boss of the section believe she'd been ill. She was almost listless of her fortune as she presented Sandro's card at the gate of the Palatial lot, almost expectant of refusal; but the gatekeeper motioned her toward one of the sheet-iron structures. "Follow the crowd," he jerked out to her, and the mercury of hope once more ran up the thermometer of her spirits.

It came down again as she waited for Sandro. Scores of other Mexican girls sat on the hard benches in the hot room. A few of them she knew. One of them shifted place to talk to her. "We should start today," the girl said. "The set's ready."

"What set?"

"The street scene where we play. Do you think we'll see Marta Gordo? She's the dancer the mob turns on in this picture."

"And we're the mob?" Toppling came the dreams of eminence.

"Yes."

"I think," Rita said, studying the card Sandro had given her, "there must be some mistake. I think I get a part."

"Maybe," the girl shrugged.

There was no mistake, she discovered when Sandro came at last. He seemed to see her but vaguely as he took count of the girls in the hut, handing out identification cards to them, and shouting directions toward other structures where they would be given costumes and make-up. In the first pang of injured vanity she was ready to cry quits, but he smiled at her as he passed, and she told herself that, even if he had intention of giving her something better than a part in a mob, he must first try out her ability to act. "What does he do?" she asked the other girl as they crossed the lot.

"Who? Sandro? O, he hires the crowds for the Spanish and Indian pictures. He gets commission."

"From us?"

"Sure. Who'd you think?"

Again her anger surged, but the common sense of immediacy held her to work. She couldn't go down to the store at noon in her gay garb and carry out a story of illness. She'd lost a day's pay. It would be better to stay here and earn what she might. Even with Sandro's commission it would be a dollar more than she could make at the store. Then, too, the gaiety of the adventure was seeping into her blood. Here was sunshine, drama, excitement, crowds, the possibility of success. Thought of Fernanda's flattery, of Maria's envy, of Joe's anger made chains to hold her. The sight of Maria Gordo, lolting on the platform in the midst of attendant admirers, stirred ambition in her. A glimpse of herself in a dressing room mirror, a vivid, brilliant figure in the greens and reds and oranges of the Spanish shawl wound about her, gave her confidence. The gleam in Sandro's eyes when he repassed her brought an answering gleam to her own. "I win yet," she told herself.

THROUGH the hours she labored in achieving apparently easy poses she was building a wall against Joe. "I'll show him," she told herself vindictively time and again. In her own thoughts as she went through the motions of a loiterer on the edge of a street crowd she rehearsed scenes in which she humbled him to apology. A sharp voice cut in on her musings. "Here—you—that girl at the end—come up here to the front!" A director was calling her. "Stick that comb sidewise, that's it, face the camera. Hold it, hold it! Keep on looking as if you were going to kill her. Reach back as if you had a dagger there in your sash under the shawl. That's it, and hold it!"

Dazed by the distinction, she obeyed the command out of sheer terror of what might happen if she failed. Exhausted at last when release came, she turned to find Sandro beaming at her. "What did I tell you?" he inquired. "What'd I say? You go up high. May I take you home?"

She found him waiting outside after his assistant had given her pay for the day's work minus the commission which Sandro held. He was at the wheel of a rickety roadster which threatened its own imminent dissolution as it rattled toward, but its arrival in front of her house had all the effect of a triumphal procession. She won angry excitement out of the knowledge that Joe had seen her. She brought on herself maternal blame out of Mrs. Menora's glimpse of her way of homecoming and maternal wrath out of her information that she was working in Hollywood. To escape the moans, tears, entreaties, reproaches, ejaculations, prayers and threats which her mother heaped on her she fled to Miss Kellar.

"What does Joe say?" the sick woman asked.

"He don't know."

"Aren't you going to tell him?"

"No," she sulked, then poured out the tale of his conduct.

"Don't discount tomorrow for today," Miss Kellar urged her. "Make up with Joe, Rita. He loves you, I think, and that's what counts."

"Maybe he's not the only one," she boasted airily, remembering the glow in Sandro's eyes.

If Joe noticed the change in her way of life through the weeks which followed he seemed to pay it no heed. She might pass the shop a dozen times on Saturday afternoons without winning a glance from him. Night after night she could hear the tones of his violin, but he never played the music which she loved, and which she knew he had been wont to play for her hearing alone. If he remained apparently indifferent to her progress, though, he was alone among her circle of acquaintances in it. To the others Rita Menora's translation of the movies remained a nine days' wonder. What if she held but an infinitesimal part in Marta Gordo's picture? No one of her immediate crowd but Sandro and she knew how tiny it was; and Sandro did everything he could to help her build the fiction that she was destined for great things. With shrewd cleverness he sought to associate himself with her chance of success. "You stay with me, and you wear diamonds," was his frequent promise to her.

"Maybe I don't want diamonds," she once retorted out of a sadness which she did not strive to fathom.

"You get them anyhow," he said.

Had it not been for Joe's defection she would have slipped through the net of Sandro's weaving. She didn't love him. She didn't like his method or his manner of wooing her. At the studio she saw how many girls met him in a fashion a little too friendly, but she saw, too, that he had definitely singled her out for his interest, and this flattered her so that the thought was balm in the wound of Joe's change of heart. Night after night she thought of Joe with passionate hatred, and so day after day she welcomed Sandro's advances. Even at that he could not have won her by appeal to her affections alone. The memory of that one hour of love with Joe was still too poignant to admit another to the shrine; but Sandro took her upon the mountain of ambition. "Some day," he told her, "you'll pass Marta Gordo." Painstakingly he built for her a tradition, introducing her wherever she went with him as a player from Seville, and directing her speech and her clothes until she herself would have come to believe his plausible tale of her background had she not continued to live at home.

The drug store clerk, the nurse, her father and mother, even Miss Kellar took notice of the change in her style as well as in her fortunes. At the studio she was already Senorita de Menora. At home she affected a Spanish hauteur which far transcended the Castilian rigor of the De Molinas, who, poor but proud, scorned the Mexicans of the neighborhood in which they had to live. On the street she suggested, even if she did not wear, the comb and mantilla, the shawl and the rose. No longer did she saunter past the barber shop. No more did she find solace at the soda fountain.

Without Sandro her life outside the studios would have been dull, for she was cutting herself off from other associations, even from Fernanda. Sandro, however, filled in the gaps so well that she drifted into acceptance of his devotion while her mother ranted and father sighed. "You want me to be old maid?" she cried in fury when they disapproved, and went to find comfort in Miss Kellar. The sick woman, noticeably weaker in the cool weather, had none to give. "It's better to be sure than sorry," was all she would say.

Rita told herself that she was sure on the Saturday night when Sandro brought her home from a drive to Ocean Park. There had been a thrill of flight, even in his rattling car, which had roused her to response for his daring. All the way back over the smooth boulevard she had leaned close to him, ready to let him kiss her, but when he came with her up to the narrow porch she drew back in sudden distaste. The thought of Joe stood too near the pillar. "No, no," she said as Sandro sought her lips, and drew away from him. "Tomorrow night," he told her, enjoying anticipation with the zest of a connoisseur. "Perhaps," she said, and watched him almost listlessly as he chugged away.

THE was fitting her key to the lock—a revolution, waged with furious temper, had won her the right—when she heard her name. She turned unbelievably to find Joe Orezon at the foot of the steps. "I must talk with you," he said. There was no softness in his voice.

"Yes?" she taunted, still in the manner of Seville.

"You cannot go on this way," he declared.

"What way?"

"With that man."

"You mean Senor Sandro?"

"If that's what he calls himself."

"What else should he?"

"You do not love him."

"What should you know of that?"

"You can't, Rita." Misery broke through rage. "You love me. I'm

Wedding Lore

—By—DORIS BLAKE

DO YOU know why shoes are thrown after the bride and bridegroom?

Why they are showered with rice?

The why of wedding invitations and announcements?

The significance of the wedding cake?

Why the bride's face is covered with a veil?

Whence the custom of kissing the bride?

What the meaning of other rites observed today in accordance with old established custom?

We find on looking into the history of marriage from the most inferior savage tribes to modern civilized life the most general social object of marriage rites is to give publicity to the union. Publicity is recognized everywhere as the element which distinguishes a recognized marriage from an illicit union, hence the presence of witnesses in the assembly of guests summoned for the occasion.

Celebrating the wedding with feasting is a further method of giving publicity to the union. The wedding feast does not merely serve the object of making the marriage public. It brings together the families of the bride and bridegroom and makes them more friendly to each other. In countries where a common meal is looked upon almost as an act of convenancing, the social importance of the wedding is particularly great.

The weeping of the bride is the survival of an earlier custom of marriage by capture. The feeling of sadness or grief at the separation from her relatives was ceremoniously expressed and emphasized at the wedding. It was a general belief with some of the earlier peoples that the bride's crying was auspicious of her happiness in married life.

"Laughing bride, weeping wife; weeping bride, happy wife," was a popular belief among Slavonic peoples. In Russia until a few years ago, and still in many parts, much importance is attached to the bride's having a good cry. The more she cries the more she gains the admiration of her friends.

Wedding gifts apparently have developed from the earlier custom of exchange of gifts between bride and bridegroom, in turn based upon marriage by consideration, where the suitor had to give to the father of his intended wife a bride price or present and the daughter was provided with a dowry as a return gift. The price for a bride shows considerable variation, according to the wealth of the interested parties and the accomplishments of the bride. Among certain tribes a couple of pigs or goats seemed to be sufficient capital necessary for investment in one good husky helpmate. Among the Bedouins of Mount Sinai Westernmarch tells us the price of a girl is "from $5 to $20," but sometimes amounts to $30 if the girl is well connected and very handsome.

THE wedding ring was in use among the ancient Hindus and the betrothal ring in ancient Rome.

The wedding cake, which invariably accompanies a modern day wedding, may be traced back to the old Roman form of marriage by confarreatio, or eating together. A cake made of the old Italian grain called "far," from which the patrician marriage in ancient Rome received its name of confarreatio, was offered to Jupiter Farous and partaken of by bride and bridegroom in the presence of witnesses. The rite of eating from the same plate, or loaf, or dish had a fixed place in the marriage ritual of many primitive European peoples.

Other things than rice were formerly thrown upon the bride for luck. Wheat, cake baked with seeds and sugar broken into small pieces, coins, seeds, raisins, fruit, corn, hops, sweetmeats, nuts, barley have been used in various countries to symbolize the good wishes for the pair. Mannhardt suggests that the custom of throwing grain or seeds or dried fruit over the bride takes its rise from "the feeling of a sympathetic connection between mankind and seed-bearing grasses and the comparison between the fruit of the body and of corn." Some later writers likewise assume that it was intended to promote fecundity.

The Russians, it is said, throw corn on bride and groom in order that their married life shall be fruitful. In many cases the throwing of grain or rice is said to be the means of ensuring prosperity or abundance only. In the countries where raisins, figs and sweetmeats are thrown the symbol is "to make the bride sweet to the bridegroom's family." The practice of rice-throwing is the most general and the warranted assumption is that it ensures prosperity, abundance and fertility.

THE bridal veil is evidently of eastern origin, being a relic of the bridal canopy held over the heads of the bride and bridegroom. According to Saracen usage, a fine linen cloth was laid on the heads of the bridal couple and not removed until the benediction was said. The primary object, it is claimed, was to protect the bride, particularly against the evil eye. To exclude her from profane gaze is another explanation of the veil. Still another authority claims it to be modesty, real or assumed, befitting the role about to be adopted.

Various explanations are offered for the custom of throwing an old shoe after the couple. It is maintained by one authority that in the first place it was meant to avert evil influence and its connection with the idea of good luck was secondary. In Scotland it was the custom to wish brides and bridegrooms "a happy foot." It was also a custom in England, Denmark, Germany and elsewhere to throw a shoe or slipper after a person who goes on a journey or to do business. Success in his errand was meant.

Kissing the bride appears to have been an old Scotch custom, according to which "the person who presided over the marriage ceremony uniformly claimed it as his alienable privilege to have a smack at the lips of the bride immediately after the performance of his official duties," for it was cannily believed that the happiness of every bride lay involved in the pastoral kiss.

"The war!" exclaimed his customer irately—"what does a MULLET know about the war?"

A Columbus factory has received an order to manufacture the equipment for a $50,000 cotton ginning plant to be established by a New York company at Adana, Turkey—the first of a series of gins to be built by that company in the rich delta section of Turkey, where the soil is black and very deep, where rainfall is almost perfectly distributed, and where there are no boll weevils or other cotton pests. The cotton grown there is of the "Yerli" variety, and is gathered instead of being picked, as the bolls do not entirely open—simply cracking. After they are gathered the bolls are cracked by special machinery, and the fibre extracted. French and German experts claim that the delta section of Turkey, which corresponds in many respects to the delta of the Nile, can produce five million bales of cotton annually when all the available ground is under cultivation.

GEOORGIA-MADE cotton gins are in service wherever cotton is grown—in Asia, in Africa, in south-east Europe, in South America, in Mexico—and, of course, very extensively in the cotton belt in our own country.

So realistic was Barrymore's acting that when the final touch, the strawberry jam, was thrown on the supposedly amputated leg, a girl visitor, looking on, made for the door and draped herself over the stair railing, only being revived with some smelling salts from the proper department.

"Do I look like I was a ham in the Gadfly Comedy company?" Lowell asked. He didn't.

YOU say that he confessed?" Sir Richard's voice was laden with ineffable incredulity. "Abjectly."

"Y'amaize me! How did he bear himself at the trial?"

"Well, I am told. He was one of your cool, calm villains."

"Were ye not present?"

"Present?" cried Mr. Templeton. "Do you not understand, man, that from the hour of his arrest I durst not show my face in the town. I may count myself fortunate that I was not myself impeached."

And then fate, that ironical stage manager, displayed its interest in this comedy.

There was a tap at the door, and a footman entered.

"Captain Gaynor is below, sir, and begs leave to wait upon you," he announced.

The two men stared at him, as if they were both stricken into stone.

At length, in a croak, came Mr. Templeton's voice: "What the devil did you say?"

The footman stolidly repeated his announcement.

"Captain Gaynor?" echoed Mr. Templeton, with an accent on every syllable. "Captain Gay-nor!" he repeated. "Are ye mad or drunk?"

"Neither, sir," replied the footman, his manner as near perfect as any underling's manner dare be with the overawing Mr. Templeton.

Mr. Templeton screwed his face as he shot out the next question: "D'ye know Captain Gaynor? I mean have ye ever seen him here before?"

"Why, yes, sir; several times."

"And d'ye say this is he?"

"Yes, sir. Leastways, I think so, sir."

Sir Richard interposed. He was visibly as agitated as his cousin.

"Best desire him to step up, Ned," he suggested.

Mr. Templeton gave the order, and the intrigued footman vanished.

"What can it mean, Tollemache? What can it mean?"

"It seems to mean that I am right and that you and your government are wrong. For if this is really Captain Gaynor, then, obviously, he is not Captain Jenkyn."

"You mean that Lord Carteret is mistaken!" cried the other, a dazzling vista of reinstatement with the last and the best laugh on his side opening suddenly before him. He heaved himself, excited, from his chair, to collapse into it again an instant later. "But it is absurd!" he said, and sneered. "Impossible!"

On the word the door reopened and Captain Gaynor was ushered in. He wore his close fitting military blue coat buttoned to the chin, canon boots and steel hilted sword, and under his arm he carried his looped and feathered hat.

Undoubtedly this was the man himself. Yet, as the cousins stared at him, Edward Templeton disbelieved the evidence of his own eyes.

THE soldier advanced easily into the room, then bowed formally, his heels together. "I trust, Mr. Templeton, that I do not intrude. Why, 'tis you, Dick!" he cried, perceiving who it was that stood there. "I am indeed fortunate. I was considering a jaunt into Devonshire, unless by now your cousin's efforts on my behalf have borne the fruit we hope for. But what's amiss?" he cried on a sudden, different note, looking from one amazed face to the other.

"Will you tell me who the devil you are?" asked Mr. Templeton.

The captain stiffened slightly; perplexity crept into his face.

"Who the devil I am?" said he.

"Why, who the devil should I be but Captain Harry Gaynor, your obedient servant. I trust," he added, as if he suddenly suspected a possibility, "I trust, sir, that I have not unwittingly had the misfortune to offend you."

Mr. Templeton looked at his cousin.

in. "By God!" said he. "'Tis the man himself."

"So it is," said Sir Richard, and on that he exploded into laughter.

Captain Gaynor looked from one to the other. His expression of perplexity changed to one of annoyance.

"Gentlemen," said he, very distant, "you'll forgive me if I say that I find you vastly odd. And you, Dick—"

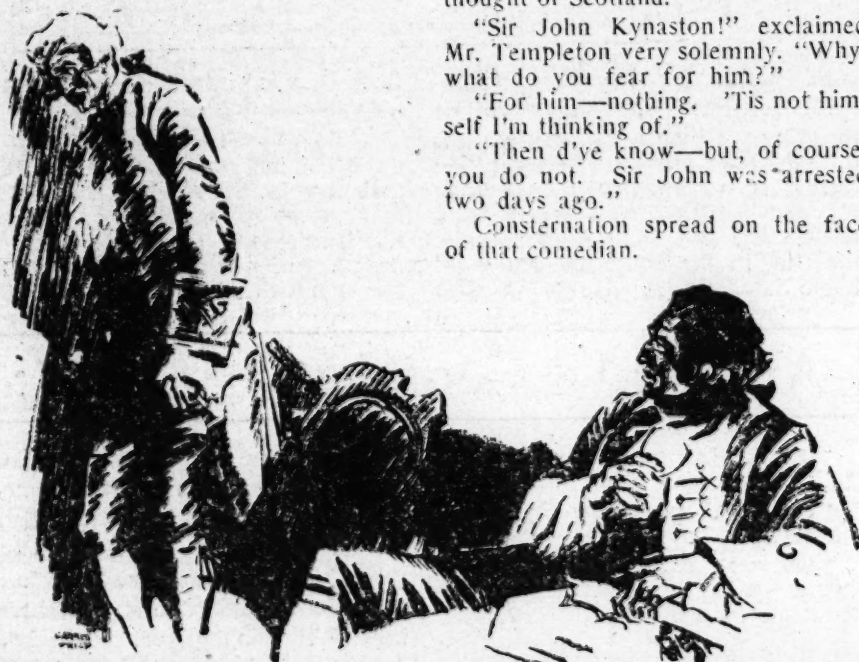

Sir Richard sprang to him and wrung his hand. "O, my dear Harry," he cried, "although my manner seem odd, I swear I never was more pleased to see you—or any man."

"Nor I—oddslife!—no," roared Mr. Templeton, who savored already in imagination the triumph that was in store for him, his complete vindication, and the turning of those malicious shafts of satire upon the fatuous Lord Carteret—their proper butt, "But can you explain it?" he demanded.

"Explain what, sir?" asked the apparently bewildered soldier.

Mr. Templeton changed his tone. "Where the devil have ye been this fortnight past?"

"Where? Why, did I not announce to you my departure for Scotland when last I came to take my leave of you? I should have tarried longer in the north, but that I was unable to find any of the friends I went to visit. So, as the north itself has little attraction for one who's accustomed to softer climates, I came south again forthwith." He lied glibly and smoothly. Again he observed that his audacity had conquered completely here, and with little hurt to his conscience. Would it conquer as completely elsewhere? He had little doubt of it now.

"And you have had no news of London in your absence?"

"Who should send me news? I have so few friends in England nowadays."

"Then ye'll not have heard that Captain Jenkyn was taken and hanged?"

"Captain Jenkyn?" echoed the soldier, after the manner of one who searches his memory. "D'ye mean the Jacobite agent? Faith, then, the world's well rid of a meddlesome fool. But—" He paused to stare at them, bewildered. "You tell me this, I see, with some purpose."

It was Richard who interposed to tell him the story—suddenly become so monstrously comical—that upon Captain Jenkyn, whose real identity was unknown, had been thrust the identity of Captain Gaynor.

THE captain laughed a little at first. Then he checked himself, and grew very sober.

"But, 'tis a monstrous thing you tell me!" quoth he. "I cannot lie under so absurd an error. It must be corrected forthwith. I shall look to you, Mr. Templeton, to do me justice."

"To me?" said Templeton. "Ye've further to learn that, as a consequence of my jeopardizing myself by denying the possibility of your being Captain Jenkyn, I am no longer a member of the government. I have resigned my office. But there are reprisals in store—egad! Reprisals!"

"Then I must see Lord Carteret at once," cried the captain.

"So you shall—and I'll come with you." Mr. Templeton was recovering his habitual breadth of manner. "If ye'll but stay for me till I am dressed, we will go together. And you had best come with us, Tollemache."

"Faith! I ask no better entertainment," laughed Sir Richard.

But Captain Gaynor had yet a question to ask ere he would allow Mr. Templeton to withdraw. "But how came this mistake about, sir? Was the fellow— Did he resemble me?"

"'Tis more than I can say, and less than matters now. I think my Lord Carteret took too much upon assumption. It is all the work of that fellow Pauncefort."

"Pauncefort!" cried the captain, and alarm flashed into his face. "Pauncefort! by heaven, then, I suspect some villainy here! Gad! 'Twas no mistake this; 'twas deliberate! I'll post to Priory Close and see Sir John Kynaston the moment I leave my Lord Carteret's. Heaven send I am not too late. I curse the hour I ever thought of Scotland."

"Sir John Kynaston!" exclaimed Mr. Templeton very solemnly. "Why, what do you fear for him?"

"For him—nothing. 'Tis not himself I'm thinking of."

"Then d'ye know—but, of course, you do not. Sir John was arrested two days ago."

Consternation spread on the face of that comedian.

"Arrested? Sir John? Upon what charge?"

"Why, upon the charge of having harbored a traitor and spy—upon the charge of having harbored Captain Gaynor."

The captain smote his brow with his clenched hand. "I see it all, then!" he cried. "Let us waste no time, sir. Sir John must instantly be restored to liberty."

"All things considered," said Sir Richard dryly, "I think my Lord Carteret will be very pleased to see you."

"He'll be the laughing stock o' the town," said Mr. Templeton, and he went out, chuckling, to make ready for that momentous visit.

THE arrest of Sir John Kynaston had been brought about, of course—like all the others—by the agency of the renegade Pauncefort. It was the last desperate throw he made in the game of mending his fortunes, a game which had reduced him to the treacherous infamy which he had perpetrated. But he intended that it should be more than the means to his end. It was no part of his purpose that Sir John should ultimately suffer. That is to say, it was no part of his present purpose.

He had pointed out to the secretary of state the grounds upon which Sir John should be arrested, and he had further informed against him out of his own knowledge of Sir John's association—however slight—with the Jacobite intriguers. But once the arrest was effected, he had come again to my Lord Carteret with the request that Sir John's fate should be placed in his own (Lord Pauncefort's) hands. He claimed this as part of the recompense due to him from the government for the signal services he had rendered.

Lord Carteret had listened to his request with that frank contempt which the secretary of state never failed to use towards this man who had turned informer. This contempt was rendered the more bitter on this occasion by the regard in which his lordship had ever held Sir John Kynaston, against whom, indeed, he had performed his duty most reluctantly—a feeling this which Lord Pauncefort had omitted from his calculations.

The statesman pursed his thin lips and considered the viscount in silence with that cold glance of his, which my Lord Pauncefort found it so difficult to endure with equanimity.

"I find your request more than extraordinary, sir," said he.

Lord Pauncefort laughed. "If your lordship had my own unfortunate acquaintance with the requests of creditors, you'd find little extraordinary in mine."

"By which," said the minister quietly, "you remind me, of course, that you are my creditor; or, rather, that I am your debtor for services rendered to the state. Ah!"

"I think, my lord, I deserve some recompense beyond the small sums of money which the treasury has paid me."

Lord Carteret leaned back in his armchair, his finger tips resting upon the edge of the writing table before him. "These small sums, my lord, amount to close upon twelve thousand pounds. And in addition you are kept out of a debtor's gaol by my warranty to your creditors that your debts will be liquidated on your marriage. I confess, sir, that you appear to me to have been more than well paid already for the services that you have rendered. Some, indeed," continued the statesman, with the faintest note of scorn in his quiet voice, "would account you have been paid far above the value of those services, although I am not of those. I recognize the position which you occupy, the estate to which you were born, and the fact, hence, that you require to be bribed upon a higher scale than does the ordinary—informer."

THE viscount swallowed that last insult as best he could. He had swallowed so many of Lord Carteret's already, in the course of these very turpid transactions, that one more or less was of little account. He kept his head high, and preserved a smiling front.

"I will admit, my lord, that the payment has been generous, provided that it is completed. I mean, provided that I am enabled to redeem the warranty your lordship has given my creditors."

"I am not sure," said the minister slowly, "that 'warranty' is, after all, the proper word. But your creditors understand me, and so, I think, do you."

"Perfectly, my lord. You have honored me by giving your word as bail for me to Israel Saurez and the others."

"And," Lord Carteret added, "it is entirely as a result of this that you continue to elude imprisonment for debt."

"And," Lord Pauncefort added on his own side, "it is precisely that your lordship may be relieved of your pledge for me that I prefer my present request touching Sir John Kynaston."

"You do not forget, I trust, that I retain the right of withdrawing my pledge at any moment, should it appear to me that you may no longer continue in the assurance of being ultimately able to satisfy your debts. But that is by the way. The thing you now propose is exceedingly distasteful to me. Indeed, I am not sure that I can honorably accede to such a request. I could do so only if I were satisfied that—" He broke off, and sat forward. "But we talk in the dark," he said more briskly. "Let me understand what ends you seek to serve by such a thing."

"Reasonable ends, my lord," replied Pauncefort easily. "I have already had the honor of informing your lordship of the terms of the late Mr. Hollinstone's will, under which it is in Sir John Kynaston's power to withhold his sanction to his ward's marriage until she is of full age—"

"Yes, yes," the statesman cut in. "You have already told me all that. Moreover," he added, with another of his quite incisive manifestations of mistrust, "I have obtained independent confirmation of the fact. Pray continue."

"I have also had the honor of informing your lordship that my betrothal to Miss Hollinstone does not receive Sir John's sanction."

"Knowing and respecting Sir John as I do, I am not surprised," was the withering comment. "Well, what then?"

"Sir John, my lord, is under arrest."

"By your contriving—yes," said his lordship. "It is a matter, let me tell you, concerning which your true motives have never intrigued me. I was aware that your betrothal to the lady was not sanctioned by her guardian" (his lordship was not, it seems, aware that the betrothal had been canceled), "and I perceived clearly enough that his conviction as a rebel would disqualify him from exercising his rights under the will. What I do not perceive is the reason of your present intervention. I hope you are attempting no double dealings with me, sir."

"Double dealings? I, my lord?"

"You don't know what they are, I suppose? Pshaw, sir! These virtuous airs are unnecessary here. Who has betrayed once will betray again. But I have no desire to recriminate, my lord. All I desire is to warn you to be frank with me. What is your aim?—briefly now, and clearly."

THE viscount was forced to swallow this peremptoriness with the rest. He was a knave unmasked, dealing with a man of honor.

"My lord," he answered, "I should have thought my aim would have been clear. I have no ill will against Sir John. If I am to wed his niece I would not be the one to encompass his ruin. I hope, sir, to be able to induce him to change his mind on the subject of my marriage with his niece either before or after the marriage has taken place. I conceive, sir, that if I can visit him in prison and offer to use my influence to procure his release and pardon, natural gratitude should inspire Sir John no longer to—"

"Fiddlesticks!" the statesman interrupted. "Natural gratitude, faith! Why can you not be frank and tell me it is your intent to drive a bargain with Sir John?"

Pauncefort permitted himself a wry smile. "It amounts to that, of course," he confessed. "And if I had the pardon in my pocket it would perhaps strengthen my hand."

The statesman sat back again, toying thoughtfully with a quill, and from that hesitation Lord Pauncefort gathered hope. He knew, as we know, that if there was one thing more detestable to Lord Carteret than these persistent Jacobite intrigues that simmered under the peaceful surface of the realm it was their disclosure. His policy was to stifle them; to strike alarm into the plotters and to disband them, effecting this with as little publicity as possible.

Now it was far from the secretary of state's desire to procure Sir John's conviction, since that must mean an increased publicity for the Jacobite cause. Ample for the government's purpose was his arrest. He might now be liberated, sufficiently shaken, no doubt, to leave plotting alone in future. And if there were plausible grounds for his enlargement, so much the better could the government be served. Now Lord Pauncefort's proposal afforded just those plausible grounds; through his agency Sir John might be left under the impression that his release had been the result of a personal intervention. Nothing, then, but the statesman's mistrust of Pauncefort caused him now to hesitate, while in his mind he cast about him for any other possible end which the informer might seek to serve. Presently a thought occurred to him.

"You do not by any chance require this pardon as an instrument with which to compel the lady?" he inquired in his cold, level voice.

Pauncefort was aghast at the minister's shrewdness, for Lord Carteret had dropped plump upon his real aims. That, indeed, was the last card that he proposed to play, confident that it was strong enough to win the game for him. But if his face showed anything it showed indignation of such a suggestion. That seeming indignation kept him silent for a moment. Then he smiled slowly, as it were in contempt of Lord Carteret's mistake.

"With the lady, sir, no compulsion is necessary, seeing that we are betrothed already, and have been these six months, as all the world knows."

It was a convincing answer, and yet it did not convince the statesman; for none knew better than Lord Carteret the crookedness of the man with whom he dealt. Slowly he shook his head, though for a moment he said nothing. At last:

"When is this marriage to take place?" he asked.

"Tomorrow evening at my place in Surrey," replied his lordship promptly—and, indeed, subject to his production of the pardon in question, such was the agreement he had that morning wrung from Damaris. His lordship fingered his quill a moment, then threw it down like one who has taken his resolve.

"Come to me again when you are married, then," he said, "and we will return to the subject. Very possibly I may do as you desire."

Almost Lord Pauncefort committed the imprudence of protesting, and thus betraying himself completely to one so shrewd as the secretary of state. He caught himself betimes. There was no more to be said, and the more readily he professed his entire acquiescence the better it must serve him.

He was checked for the moment. A fresh difficulty confronted him. Nevertheless, he smiled as he rose to take his leave.

"Be it so, then, my lord," said he. "I shall have the honor of waiting upon you again betimes on Friday."

Lord Carteret nodded. "Give you good day," he said coldly, and Lord Pauncefort withdrew, a smile on his lips and rage in his heart, to think out the situation and discover a means to surmount this obstacle which had presented itself where he had expected none. That means he was not slow in discovering, for a half hour later he penned and dispatched from his house in St. James street the following epistle to Miss Hollinstone:

"My dearest Damaris: I have but left my Lord Carteret, and I take pen at once to send you these to dispel the anxiety in which I know you to be lying. The secretary of state has lent an ear to my insistence, and is preparing Sir John's pardon. It will receive his majesty's signature tomorrow, and it shall be my wedding gift to you when you come to Woodlands tomorrow evening."

This was followed by protestations of undying passion and delirious anticipation with which we are not concerned, but in which Lord Pauncefort must be done the justice of being acknowledged sincere. He did with most delirious anticipation look forward to his emancipation from Israel Suarez and this nightmare of a debtor's gaol that was with him day and night, and had made a villain of him.

Now all this happened on Wednesday of that momentous week.

On the Thursday his lordship departed for his seat in Surrey, to complete the preparations for the reception of the bride, and he took with him, to serve his needs, a poor hedge parson of the name of Pugh.

At about the same hour that his chaise rolled up St. James street and turned into Piccadilly, another carriage drew up at Lord Carteret's door and deposited there Mr. Templeton, Sir Richard and Captain Gaynor, who thus descended upon the secretary of state.

Mr. Templeton came to explain—a sort of chorus to this comedy, and something more; Captain Gaynor came to seek explanation, and Sir Richard came as an important witness to certain matters, should it be found that they required investigation.

They did not. The mountainous fact that Captain Gaynor stood there in the flesh entirely crushed the absurd allegation that a fellow convicted of being Captain Jenkyn, the Jacobite spy, and hanged at Tyburn a fortnight since, had been this same Harry Gaynor.

Obviously a most colossal blunder had occurred. Lord Carteret's consternation flamed quickly to anger under the deft fanning of Mr. Templeton.

"Had your lordship but honored me with attention, this—ah—deplorable mistake had not occurred; had not occurred." His voice rolled and boomed. "I strove with all my power, but your lordship would not be guided. Even when I produced unimpeachable evidence your lordship still—ah—preferred to give heed to other counsellors. If you should now incur the—ah—ridicule of the malevolent and of your political enemies, your lordship will perhaps feel some sympathy for me in what I have undergone most undeservedly."

"You are within your rights," answered his lordship bitterly, his little eyes like gimlets upon Mr. Templeton, "to point out to me the error against which you warned me and into which I fell, that warning notwithstanding. But I will beg you, sir, not to turn the sword in the wound."

"O, my lord! I should be the last to be guilty of such an—ah—inhumanity. If I have said so much it has been to justify the insistence of my warning."

"With Captain Gaynor before us it requires no justifying," said his lordship.

"I pledged my honor," Mr. Templeton continued, "and I accounted my honor forfeit. I resigned my office under that assumption, and under that assumption your lordship accepted my resignation. I have been the butt of every scandalous tongue in town—of every scandalous—"

"It is possible," cut in his lordship, who felt it necessary to bribe Mr. Templeton into silence not only here but hereafter, "that your successor in office might be—induced to resign to the end that justice be done and yourself reinstated."

"In that," said Mr. Templeton, bowing, "I recognize your lordship's high sense of justice."

"To you, sir," continued his lordship, turning to Captain Gaynor, who stood stiffly at attention, "I shall see that proper reparation is made by publishing the error there has been—an error which even now, I confess, is entirely baffling."

Upon audacity Captain Gaynor now piled audacity.

"It is possible," said he, "that I may be able to elucidate the matter."

"Do you suggest one of those freaks of nature by which two men are given such identical features that one is not to be told from the other?"

"No such matter is in my mind. Though I am unable to speak as to a likeness between myself and this Captain Jenkyn, for I have never consciously stood face to face with him. I think, my lord, that the matter goes deeper. From what Mr. Templeton has told me I understand that Sir John Kynaston has been arrested for having harbored me—always upon the assumption that I was the man who was hanged a fortnight ago."

His lordship grimaced. "Ay!" he said irritably.

"That will be another error to correct," put in Mr. Templeton quietly. There can be no doubt that Mr. Templeton was enjoying himself.

"And I gather further that this, as well as the confusion of the late Captain Jenkyn with myself, is the work of my Lord Pauncefort."

"Yes," said his lordship, and he confirmed the affirmative by an oath.

"I find this the more extraordinary in that I am perfectly well known to his lordship—at least, on that score I should find it the more extraordinary did I not believe that I hold the explanation of his most singular behavior."

"What d'ye tell me?" demanded Lord Carteret sharply. "D'ye say that Lord Pauncefort knew you?"

"He knows me, my lord, as well as he knows Dick Templeton there, who is one of my oldest friends."

"Then—what the devil—" His lordship paused. His friendship for Sir John Kynaston, combining with mistrust of Pauncefort, spurred him suddenly to incredible conclusions. "D'ye suggest he did this thing—that he made a fool of me—to serve ends of his own?"

"I will suggest nothing," said Captain Gaynor. "I will state the facts."

He played boldly now. He saw that he held Pauncefort in the hollow of his hand, and he would have played as boldly and unwincingly had Pauncefort himself been present—for not all that nobleman's protestations and oaths could annihilate the overwhelming fact that the man whom he had alleged to be Captain Gaynor had been hanged a fortnight ago at Tyburn, whilst Captain Gaynor himself was alive.

"I shall need to trouble your lordship with some purely personal details," he said. "When, upon the instances of Dick Templeton, I came to England a month ago with letters to his cousin, the second secretary, and in the hope of finding employment for my sword in the service of my own country, I sought the hospitality of one who had been my father's dearest friend. I am speaking of Sir John Kynaston. Whilst there, my lord, being in Sir John's confidence, I learned that a betrothal which had existed between his ward and my Lord Pauncefort had lately been determined in consequence of the discovery of—of certain unworthy motives in his lordship's suit."

"Determined," cried the minister. "Determined, did ye say?" And swiftly his suspicions grew to certainty. "But I beg you to proceed," he added, almost grimly. "You promise to be very interesting."

Some vague fraction of what was passing in his lordship's mind was perceived by Captain Gaynor. It served to encourage him.

"It happened, sir," he resumed, "that I met the lady, and—in short, that his lordship had reason to behold in me a rival whom, under the circumstances of his own disfavor, he had cause to fear. Shortly thereafter, and in my absence from town, my name, I find, is given to a notorious rebel, the report of my execution sent abroad, and my friend Sir John arrested for having harbored me."

Upon the faces of his listeners he saw clearly stamped the impression he had made and the conclusion to which all three had instantly jumped.

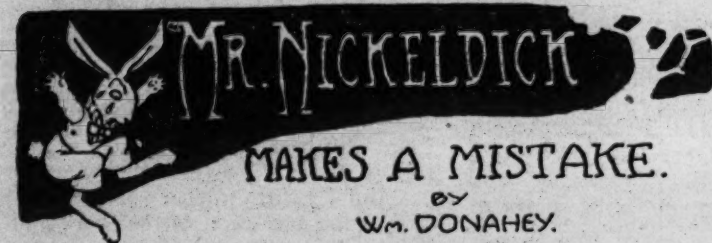

"Do you imply, sir, that it was to serve such ends as these that the villain abused my confidence?" said the

MR. NICKELDICK MAKES A MISTAKE.
Wm. DONAHEY.

ALLEXANDER NICKELDICK was most aristocratic. He wore striped shirts and slicked down his hair with clover-scented carrot oil. Mrs. Liberty Racoon, who did Alexander's washing, reported that the rabbit wore silk underwear, but the more sober minded folks considered that a bit of idle gossip. However, Mr. Nickeldick was very dainty in his habits and he would not soil his well kept paws with hard work. He almost always hired Billy Skittle to do the dirty work.

Billy Skittle was a fat waddling woodchuck, who talked to himself a great deal and never brushed his teeth. He preferred to sleep during the day and always did his work at night, for he received overtime wages for night work. Mr. Nickeldick hated to pay such high wages, but Billy belonged to the union, so there was nothing to do but hire him to do the work at night.

The task Mr. Nickeldick set Billy to work on, was digging a big hole in which a large supply of fresh carrots was to be buried for winter use.

Mr. Nickeldick entertained a great deal during the winter, so it was quite necessary to have a goodly supply of food on hand.

If Mr. Nickeldick had stayed at home and overseen the work, instead of going off to play golf with a fox squirrel, he might have saved himself a lot of trouble.

Billy Skittle performed the work in a most thorough way. He buried the carrots quite deep in the ground, covered them with moss to keep out the winter frost, and stamped the earth down flat with a potato masher.

Next he covered the spot with red pepper so thieves would not scent the spot, scattered leaves about, and went home to bed.

About a month later Mr. Nickeldick decided to give a dinner in honor of a black rabbit, who had moved into the neighborhood, but it suddenly occurred to him that he had forgotten to ask Billy Skittle where the carrots had been buried. He hunted and hunted for the spot.

He scratched, and sniffed, and ruined one of his best striped shirts looking through the briars and leaves, but he could not find the place where the carrots had been buried.

"What will I do? What will I do?" he shrieked, and then he completely lost his head. He ran around in a circle and mused up all his slicked down hair; he pulled his ears and stamped on the ground.

"What to do? What to do?" he cried.

"Why don't yo' all go and ask Billy Skittle whar he done bury us carrots?" suggested the colored cat who cooked for Mr. Nickeldick.

Mr. Nickeldick thought that an excellent plan, so he put on a fresh striped shirt, slicked down his hair and hurried over to Billy Skittle's house.

Billy Skittle always worked at night.

Billy Skittle lived in a peculiar sort of cellar under a big rock. Mr. Nickeldick knocked on the door. There was no answer. He kicked the door and scratched off a great deal of paint, but no one came. He ran around the house and peered through a window. The glass was dirty, so he wiped it off with his striped shirt sleeve. At first Mr. Nickeldick could not see plainly, but soon his eyes became accustomed to the dark and he could make out a few things. He saw a chair, a cupboard and a table, on which sat a china tea pot and a half eaten doughnut. The room had a tidied up appearance much as though the owner had gone away for a long visit.

A door into a bedroom was closed and Mr. Nickeldick looked for a window that might look into it, but he could not find one. Next he jumped onto the roof and shouted down the chimney. Nothing but a cloud of soot answered his cries. He wiped his eyes with his dirty striped shirt sleeve and jumped to the ground.

"I've got to think, I've got to think," muttered Mr. Nickeldick, so he began to walk around a tree. He tramped around and around until he got to wondering how many times he had circled the tree, which made him forget to think, so he sat down on the doorstep to think.

It was hard for Mr. Nickeldick to think and pretty soon he got to sweating from such hard thinking. The sweating made him worry so in worrying about sweating he forgot to think and soon he found himself staring vacantly at the sky. Suddenly he noticed a paper pinned to the house near the door. He jumped up and stared at it with both his ears and all his eyes and this is what he read:

NOTICE

Gone to bed for the winter. Will not be out till Groundhog day, on the second of February.

BILLY SKITTLE.

Poor Mr. Nickeldick mused up his ears and almost pulled out his whiskers in his rage. He leaned up against the house and cried great hot tears.

"It's all my fault," he wailed. "If I had stayed home and watched where Billy Skittle buried those carrots instead of going off to play golf I wouldn't be in this fix. I'm never going to play golf again." So he went home, chopped up his golf sticks and growled at the colored cat for the rest of the day.

THE HEAD HUNTERS OF SAN BLAS

SYNOPSIS
Frank Mulroy and Tom Benson, with Tom's father and a white guide, Daig, have come to the San Blas region of Panama—a section reputed to be filled with head hunters. While walking in the woods, the two boys are followed, and Frank, seeing a movement in a clump of bushes, fires his rifle. A moment later a machete, a sharp steel knife with a curved blade, is thrown and narrowly misses Tom. The two boys crawl on their hands and knees for an hour, until, exhausted, they fall asleep. They are awakened to find that savages have discovered them—they are not sure of the number—but succeed in escaping through the underbrush. They are lost in the woods, and Frank, climbing a tree, finds their bearings, and at the same time sees two Indians stealthily creeping on Tom, who is sitting down at the foot of the tree. Frank shouts for Tom to climb the tree.

INSTALLMENT IV.

Tom jumped to his feet, but hesitated a moment, unable to see the Indians, and not knowing why Frank had shouted. Seeing him hesitate, Frank shouted again, "Climb the tree—hurry, hurry!" At the same time, Frank, disregarding the danger of falling from his perch, let go his hold, and balancing himself on a light branch, aimed his rifle at the two Indians, who had stopped short on hearing his cries. He fired, but his bullet missed its mark, while the Indians, who had not yet discovered his vantage point, looked around them in surprise.

Meanwhile, Tom was climbing with all his strength, and Frank fired his rifle again. This time he saw one of the Indians drop his machete, and seize his arm with a snarl of rage. The bullet had struck him in the fleshy part of the arm. At the same time, the two caught sight of him, and saw Tom's effort to find a temporary

The uninjured Indian leaped forward, but Tom had already gained the first branch and was climbing higher every moment. Stepping back several paces, he swung his machete and let it fly at the boy, but Tom, who was looking down at him with eyes wide with fear, was too quick for the man. As the knife flashed through the air, Tom swung behind the trunk of the tree, and the machete, with a whirr, sank into the wood. At the same moment, Frank again fired his rifle, and the bullet, going wild, had yet the effect of frightening the savage, and causing him to run back to his Indian companion.

Frank looked down at the gleaming machete imbedded into the tree trunk, and saw Tom, climbing furiously to get to his side. "Hurry, boy, hurry," he shouted. "They've used up half their ammunition already. It's a good thing he threw his knife at you, because now it's out of harm, and he probably hasn't got another."

The two Indians had drawn off a few paces, and had stopped to examine the injury Frank had inflicted on one. It was a long, jagged wound, and it was bleeding profusely, and it seemed to pain the man a good deal, for he was grimacing and stamping his feet. While they were still examining the injury, Tom reached the branch which Frank was now straddling, panting hard, and his clothes soaking wet with perspiration.

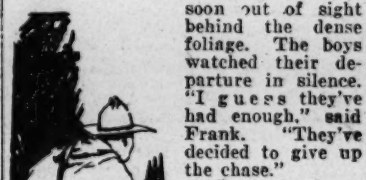

"If we only had wings," Frank murmured. "There's our ship out there, so close that we could almost jump to it, and here we are, up in a tree, with no way of getting down. And those ugly looking fellows just hoping we'll try."

The two Indians had again turned their attention to Tom and Frank, and looked at the boys with an expression of hatred on their faces. They seemed to be contemplating what step to take next, for it was plain that they did not intend to give up their first efforts to capture the two. One of them, in a moment of temper, picked up a short piece of hardwood from the ground, and threw it at the tree. It fell short, and in return, Frank fired his rifle at the man. The fellow dropped flat to the ground, but he was up in a moment, and turning on his heel, dashed back to a safer vantage point.

"We don't want to waste our ammunition," said Tom, "for we don't know how long we're going to be up here, and we don't know how many more of these fellows will be coming along soon. Let's just sit tight, and wait for them to make the next move. One thing is certain—we can keep them from climbing up here in the tree to get us."

As they were talking, the Indians seemed to have decided on a course of action. With a parting glare at the boys in the tree, they walked back a few feet, and were soon out of sight behind the dense foliage. The boys watched their departure in silence.

"I guess they've had enough," said Frank. "They've decided to give up the chase."

"I don't know about that," Tom answered. "It looks to me as though it is just a trick to get us to come down. I'll bet they're hiding back there sharpening up their knife in expectation of the moment we are going to climb down."

Whatever their idea was, the Indians evidently had sense enough not to try to climb the tree, and for some minutes there was no hint that they were anywhere near. "Maybe they've decided to wait until night, when we can't see them so well," Tom suggested.

"Well, we can stick it out as long as they can," his chum answered, "so if it's a waiting game they want to play, we'll play it too."

But, now that they had to do it, it was not as easy to perch high on the limb of a tree as one might imagine. Both boys began to be stiff and sore, and they moved about, changing their positions, with difficulty, as cramps shot up their legs, and their backs became sore from staying in one position. An hour passed, and still there was no sign of the Indians.

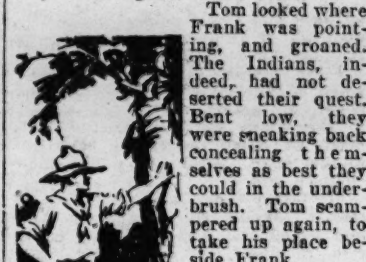

"I think they're gone," Tom said. "I'm going to climb down and scout a bit." It was already late afternoon. The water in the distance, where they could see the sturdy lines of the Jolly Maiden, had turned crimson, and all about them, tropic birds were chattering and singing with the ending of the day. The green of the foliage had turned darker, and already it was beginning to turn cooler. Nights in the tropics are frequently chilly.

"I wouldn't go down yet awhile," Frank cautioned. "I think those fellows are laying for us, and will pounce on the minute we get to earth."

But Tom was stubborn. He had just started to descend from his lofty perch, however, when he was detained by a cry from his chum.

"I told you so, Tom," he cried—they haven't gone. Look there."

Tom looked where Frank was pointing, and groaned. The Indians, indeed, had not deserted their quest. Bent low, they were sneaking back concealing themselves as best they could in the underbrush. Tom scampered up again, to take his place beside Frank.

"I almost got into it again, didn't I?" he said. "Well, let's take a shot at them for luck, just to show them that we know they're here." Accordingly, he aimed his rifle, and fired at the two figures, and while the bullet did not find its mark, it frightened the Indians so that they turned and fled once more.

"Wonder how persistent they are," murmured Frank. "I wouldn't want to stay out in this jungle all night if I were they, just to butcher a couple of kids."

Time passed slowly. Presently the sea had lost its crimson color, and had turned deep blue, and the shadows were beginning to deepen. The air became colder, and the boys shivered, drawing their shirts more closely around them. Their place in the treetop was decidedly uncomfortable now, but it was better than again chancing a meeting with the savages on solid ground.

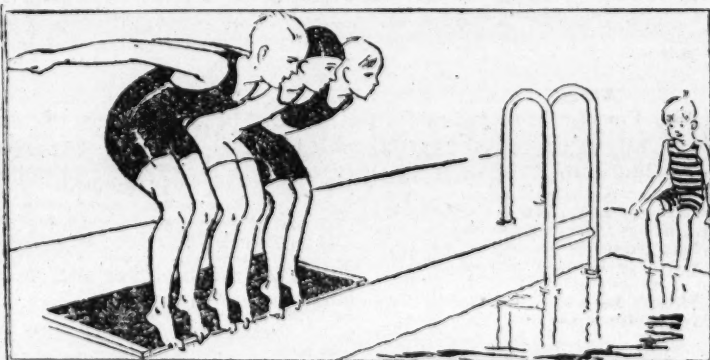

Just then, Tom saw a wisp of smoke curl up through the trees, possibly a hundred feet from their own nest. "They've built a fire, Frank," he said, calling his friend's attention to the smoke. "They must be intending to camp here all night."

But that was not the case. Hardly had he spoken when the Indians appeared again, and this time, each of them bore a burning firebrand in his hand. Running on a zigzag course, they advanced on the tree, and then dashed away again, and dodged behind trees nearby.

At first the boys did not understand the meaning of this strange action. Then Frank, leaning far over so that he could see below him, comprehended. "They're going to burn down our tree," he said excitedly.

(To Be Continued Next Week)

SWIMMING—Training

The "take-off" for a race. The swimmer who plunges farthest on the start, often wins the race.

The only way to train for a swimming race is to swim. If you are entered in a 50-yard dash, for instance, training should begin about a month in advance, and for the first week should consist of daily swims of about 200 yards. Take these swims easily, and try to perfect form. Emphatically, do not try to swim fast.

Top off your swim with practicing the take-off. For a sprint swim, the entrants line up on a platform that rises from one to two feet above the water. Plant the feet firmly, slightly apart on the edge of the board, so that the toes overlap. Crouch, and rest the hands on the knees; at "Get ready," let the arms shoot out behind, and at "Go," spring forward, arms over the head, head and shoulders well back, and body straight. Try to stay on the surface of the water, and do not begin your stroke until you have gotten full advantage of the plunge and feel your speed slackening up.

Some swimmers train with two heavy bathing suits on, so that they feel lighter the day of the race. This is a good idea. The second week of training, alternate a slow 300-yard swim one day with a faster 100-yard swim the next.

The third week, go back to a slow 200-yard swim, but speed up on the last 50 yards. Do not increase your stroke, but get as much power out of it as possible. The first day of the last week, swim a fast fifty, and without stopping swim a slow fifty. The next day swim a slow 200 yards, and alternate thus until the day before the race when you should swim only a slow hundred.

Eat common sense foods during training. Do not eat sweets, or too much fat-building foods. The day of the race eat a good breakfast, and be calm. Go in to win—and try your best. If you don't win, congratulate the winner, and resolve to do better the next time.

PIGEON KEY, FLA.

Dear Unknown Friends: I will write to The Constitution again and see if it will be printed. I wrote one a long time ago and it wasn't printed. It was a long one, too. I wrote seven pages.

I am going to tell you boys and girls about an accident that happened about one-half of a mile from this little island. It has never been known to happen on the Florida East Coast railway before.

An engine pulling a long train passed here and the engineer and brakeman waved at a man living here on the island and spoke to him.

First, I will tell you where I was when it happened: My mother, my sister, my cousin and I were sitting in the dining room eating an apple when we heard the engine blow up. Mother said, "What was that?" We children said we didn't know.

My father was out on the dock and saw it. My mother went to the door and asked him what it was and he told, then she told us children.

When everyone on the key knew what had happened we were all frightened.

Now I will finish what I started: When the engine got half a mile from the island the accident happened. The accident was the boiler burst. It blew the engineer, the fireman and the brakeman about 20 or 30 feet from the track. Just as soon as my father could get in a boat and get to it, he did it. It was he and three or four other men who went and got the three scalded men.

When the engine burst some of the iron of the engine hit the fireman and engineer and killed them, but it left the brakeman alive, holding to one of the piers, scalded almost to death by steam. They didn't get the engineer and fireman the first trip out there. They were already dead and had sunk to the bottom. They brought the live man in here and doctored him as quickly as they could. Then they went back out to the wreck and searched for the two dead men. They got them, too.

When my father and the other men got here with the brakeman he hadn't forgotten a thing that had happened. He even remembered what was the cause of the explosion. He said the fireman was the cause of it. He said there wasn't much water in the boiler and there is some kind of thing in the engine he turned and it didn't do to suit him, so he turned another. That didn't suit him, either, so he turned another, and the cold water hit the hot boiler—and B-A-N-G! the engine burst.

I tell you, boys and girls, that was an awful sight. The engineer was thrown about 30 feet into the Atlantic ocean and the fireman and brakeman about the same in the Florida bay.

The brakeman would have been killed if he had not seen the fireman when he tried to get the water from the engine. He said he tried to get away from the boiler before it burst. He got part the way. It was enough that he got scalded, but not killed. But a few days after he left here we got a message that he was dead. Wasn't that awful?

I know Mr. Waste Basket is waiting, so I will stop.

Dear Friends: I have enjoyed reading your letters every Sunday. I am a little boy nine years old and I am in the fifth grade. Miss M. L. Bence is my teacher and has been since I was in the first grade. She is a lovely teacher. I haven't been absent from school since I started and haven't been tardy but about three times. I go to Sunday school every Sunday and I haven't been absent at all. I have three brothers and not any sisters.

Dear Boys and Girls: May I join your Letter Writers' Club? I have read so much about it that I have decided I would like to become a member.

Before you allow me to do so, I suppose I ought to tell you something about myself. I am 13 and in the ninth grade. I take music and accidentally, elocution. The reason I take elocution accidentally is because my mother is an expression teacher. I learn expression by listening to her. I love that best. In reading the club page I found another girl loved this best and in spite of the fact that I'm two grades above her, I am just one year older than she. I am going to boost this club, because I think it is the best way of communication between all the boys and girls of America of any plan yet conceived.

I am going to try to write each one of you and hope you will do the same, because if you're like me you'd rather get a letter than anything in the world.

From a lover of the Young Folks' Section.

Dear Boys and Girls: May I join your Letter Writers' club. I have been reading the letters of the kiddies' page for a long, long time, and I sure do enjoy reading them. I always hate to read the last letter every Sunday for I enjoy them. I am a girl of 13 years old. I will be in the seventh grade when school starts. I go to church and Sunday school every Sunday.

Say, boys and girls, how d' you like the funny papers every Sunday? I always like to read Chester Gump and Perry Winkle first. I have many playmates. My nearest playmate is Luna Mae Coleman. We have had good times together. Say, boys and girls, you all write to me. I will be glad to answer any letter I get. Well, I hope Mr. W. B. does not happen to see this. Well, good-bye. From your unknown friend.

go forward and accept the offer of salvation and not only becomes a Christian himself but becomes the means of transmitting a religious influence to posterity—the other decides not to accept the call, and from that point the two lives diverge more and more throughout the years.

The second lesson is that there is always a harvest that is ripe, and a need of reapers. There are always Macedonians whose needs are imperative and the calls for help are numberless.

How can there be so many idlers in the world when there is labor enough for all—labor that gives to those who perform it a satisfaction not to be found elsewhere? It is difficult to understand the indifference of those who are heedless; they are like men famishing for water with abundant springs on every hand if they would only drink.

The third lesson is found in the fact that some hear the call—some in each generation—and thus the work is carried on. Man is the machine through which God works for the redemption of the world. The supply of power is infinite and the work to be done is beyond man's power to calculate; only the machine—the man-machine—is wanting.

An illustration can be taken from nature. Electricity was in the air long before a machine was fashioned to make use of it, and the work now done by electricity was waiting for the power that is now being used; but it was not until a machine was devised that the electricity in the air could be converted into an energy that is now measured by hundreds of thousands of horse power.

So God has been here always, infinite in wisdom, in love and in power, and the work has waited for the transforming influence of His Spirit. The world waits today and no other power known to man can take the place of God's spirit or supply the world's need for a regenerating influence. Only one factor is missing, viz., men like Paul and Silas and Timothy to transmit the divine power in the form of a persuasive message.

Before Paul lay a continent partly given over to the worship of false gods and partly in the grip of barbarism. Rome, with her boasted civilization, was in some respects as corrupt as the uncivilized nations. It required a sublime faith for the followers of Christ to undertake the leavening of the entire lump with the gospel that they carried.

The first convert in Europe was a woman; her name was Lydia and she was a seller of purple. Her home was in Thyatira, and she was a worshipper of God but not a follower of Christ. We are told that the Lord opened her heart so that she gave heed to the things that were spoken by Paul. When she had been baptized (and her household), she invited the disciples to make her house their abiding place and the invitation was accepted.

We may pause at this point to consider the fact that the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ has made a more powerful appeal to woman than any other religion. It has lifted woman to a higher place and more fully recognized her inalienable right to full companionship with man.

Women were conspicuous among those who were drawn to Christ by His personality and His message. The home of Mary and Martha was one of His stopping places when near Jerusalem. The door was always open and He was always a welcome guest. It was the brother of Mary and Martha whom Christ called back from the tomb. It was to a woman, Mary Magdalene, that He spoke first when He burst the bonds of death and emerged from the tomb.

Throughout the Holy Land and Europe and America, and in Asia and Africa also, women have been found among the most devoted of His followers. The materialistic philosophies have not corrupted as many women as they have men. A prominent writer, in boasting of the number of students who had been led to give up "the cardinal principles of the Christian faith," said that the percentage was greater among the young men than among the young women.

The Bible text for today will not exert the influence that it should unless, as a result of the study of it, a multitude of men are inspired to imitate the example of Paul and Silas and Timothy in responding to the calls for help that come from so many directions. A multitude of women, too, should find a stimulus in the conversion of Lydia who had the courage to be the first in her community to respond to the call of the Saviour. A Blue Ribbon Short Story sorry I said what I did that Sunday, but I went crazy thinking I was going to lose you just when you'd told me you loved me."

"I never told you I loved you."

"Rita!"

"You dreamed it."

"Right here on the steps."

"I never said I did."

"What are words?"

"What are kisses?" Precariously as a tight rope artist dances on the wire she managed to keep light her tone. "Did you think that just because I let you kiss me one moonlight night I must love you for life? Did you think I gave you the right to bully me, to say what I shall do, to say whom I shall know? Do you think you can stay away from me for weeks and weeks, never even looking up when I go by your window, never coming past here even to see my father, and now come over and tell me that I shall have nothing to do with another man? Is that what you call love? If it is, I think I take Manuel Sandro's way."

"You can take it if you like," he said hotly. "Maybe it is what you want. Maybe I do not know you. I have thought you good, and sweet, and kind, even though you make mistake. I tell myself that I am a wicked damn fool that I stay away from you. Then I come, and you tell me this. Now I tell you something. This is the only time I come to you. If you send me away now, you shall come to me if you ever want me."

"O!" The fire in her eyes flashed high as that in his. "Then you wait, I tell you, Joe Orezon, you wait till I die—and after." She turned back to the door, turning the key with furious haste. "You go," she raged at him over her shoulder. "Go to the devil!"

She banged the door as if to shut out thought of him with his presence, but she stood in the tiny hall within, palpitant with emotion. How dared he come to reproach her? How dared he say she had loved him? "I hate you, I hate you," she sobbed, clenching her fists till the long nails dug into her palms. Then she went swiftly to the window of her room which looked toward the dark shop, but there was no sign of Joe on the street. "I'll show you," she raged as she stood quivering. "I'll marry Manuel."

Throbbing with anger, she plunged into bed, but sleep would not come to her. Restlessly she tossed for hour after hour while memories and hopes fought on the battleground of her brain. To offset a hundred recollections of Joe she pictured herself in bridal finery walking up the aisle to meet Manuel. "We'll live in a grand house," she consoled herself savagely.

SHE was still awake when the sound of voices on the sidewalk startled her. She was just deciding that she would find out why men should be talking in low tones beneath the windows when the strumming of a guitar twanged across the silence, followed by the first notes of "La Paloma," sung in the high drawl of a quartet. In a bound she was out of bed, seeking to identify the director of the serenade. She could see only the singers, men hired, no doubt, for the ceremony, and her heart swung like a pendulum between two surmises. Joe? Manuel? Had Joe regretted his anger? Had Manuel taken her coquetry for promise? Vainly she peered through the shrouding curtains while windows in the neighborhood rose and protests came forth.

"Go home!" she heard a voice cry above the music. "This isn't Mexico." The serenade, urged by a hidden suitor, went on till Officer Meacham came down the street from Grand avenue. "Move on, boys," he said. "It's 4 o'clock." The serenaders came out of the shadows laughing. The light from the officer's torch fell on their faces and on that of a fifth man back of them. Rita slumped back with a little sigh. He was Sandro.

She welcomed him gaily enough that evening when he came. Her mother's tirade, violent after the serenading, had fortified her in her resolution to marry him, but she refused to go out with him, possibly because she realized that the sight of his roadster outside the house would be declaration of defiance to Joe. Her father and mother, going off to the fiesta in celebration of the anniversary of Mexican independence, gave her warning about a dozen household tasks, evidently in the hope that Sandro might be discouraged from remaining. "And do not forget to see Miss Kellar," Mrs. Menora advised. "She was very weak today."

"We won't," said Sandro lightly. He was in high humor, bristling with plans for Rita. Through the hours he babbled on while her mind tangented his but once in a while. Thrice she started the player-piano to keep him from assertion of love, but he finally thrust aside subterfuge. "You will marry me—when?" he demanded, coming to stand before her. "I don't know," she said in honest panic, now that the moment had arrived.

"Before Christmas," he said, as if he held the decision. "In January the Liebers are going to put on 'Don Juan.' They want some one new, some one younger, fresher than Marta Gordon." He leaned toward her, his face radiant in the hope of triumph. "It will be you."

"How can it be?" she protested. "If I marry you before Christmas I cannot play in a picture then."

"Why not?"

"Married women do not work." "Silly," he taunted. "We are in United States. Women work when they please."

"But I do not please to work that way when I marry. I want a home, and I want—children."

"After a time, yes," he smiled. "But now—this is the chance. Frederick Lieber himself told me that he will give you the tryout. I brought him to see you work. How is that? What do you think of that?"

"You—you," words would not speak for her as she sprang up to face him. "You would marry me to have me work for you? This is why you help me? This is why you say you love me? Viper! Snake! I put my foot on you. Go!" she bade him. Her voice rang out in metallic clanging. "Go from here!"

"But, Rita—"

"Don't you dare to touch me! I know your kind. Down in San Felipe when I was a child I saw men like you. Do you know what they called them?" She flung at him a Spanish word before which he shrank. "But I did not think I would ever know such a man. And I might have married you. Madre de Dios, you have spared your daughter! I am saved." Majestically as the princess she would never play she pointed to the door of the cottage. "Get out!" she ordered.

He went, shrugging a vain attempt at bravado. She heard the slam of his car door. The chugging of his engine grew fainter. Suddenly her strength went from her and she flung herself on the floor, sobbing like a hurt child. "I hate them, I hate them all," she cried. "I shall be old maid till I die."

She was still weaving St. Catherine's tresses in burning tears when, as a sleeper awakened by a sound whose source he cannot identify, she thought she heard the tinkle of a bell. She stopped her sobs to listen, but the sound was not repeated. Roused from her grief, however, she arose, bathed her aching eyes, and smoothed her tousled hair. Choked by her sorrow, she suddenly yearned for the cleansing surge of fresh air, and, flinging a shawl around her shoulders, she stepped out on the porch.

The night was dark, with a smell of coming rain on the wind. The street, dark, too, seemed strangely quiet. So ominous was the silence that she had for an instant a wild desire to rage against it with the riot of a dance record on the player-piano. As she hesitated she heard a thin trickle of sound. Little by little it grew louder, until, with quickened heartbeats, she located its coming. In his shop Joe Orezon was playing, playing as he had been wont to on nights when his violin was his messenger of love. It was the old song with which he had told his love long ere he had flung down their pretense of friendship, the song which Spain had brought to Mexico, and which Mexico had brought over the northern border:

Que no se apartan de mi."

HER thoughts kept time with the melody, singing the refrain of the two unforgotten kisses, his mother's and his beloved's, which the minstrel treasured in his soul. "He plays to me," she told herself joyously, but the joy died down in the face of pride. He was calling to her because he would not come. The narrow street yawned a chasm between them. Across it he was pleading, using every atom of what art he had to bring her to him. Lips, and arms, and heart, and soul ached for him as she stood listening, but memory of his ultimatum that she must come to him if she wanted him laid deathly hand upon desire. "I shall not go," she said, and turned back to the house.

A sudden fear of being alone held her at the threshold, and she shifted her course to Miss Kellar's cottage. The tiny house was dark as she crossed the yard. No one answered her knock at the door. "Miss Kellar, Miss Kellar," she cried as she rattled the knob. No one spoke. Terror rushed over her. She paused in the door, but she could not see in the darkness. "Miss Kellar!" she cried again, and drove herself toward the white bed which loomed ghostly in the shadows. "Are you asleep?" she demanded, bending down to touch the white hand on the coverlet. It was queerly cold, queerly hard. "Are you—?" she started to repeat. Then, swiftly, she knew. Miss Kellar was dead.

For a moment fear, awe, remorse struggled in Rita Menora's soul. Miss Kellar was dead, and she couldn't stay here alone. Death was too fearsome, too dreadful to meet in the dark, even after his passing. She had not come when she should have come to the task her mother had set upon her. If it had not been for Sandro, if it had not been for her own grief, she would have been able to have done something for the dying woman. "O, God, God, forgive me," she prayed. "Have mercy on my soul, as on hers!" Trembling, she wondered what she should do. Then, straight as an arrow goes to its mark, she rushed from the house and across the street to Joe Orezon's door. "Come, come with me," she pleaded as he answered her summons, and, with no further word of explanation, led him over the way.

"Go home, Rita," he said to her when he had found the reason for her call. "I shall do what must be done."

"No," she said, her terror gone. "I'm going to stay with you."

She lighted candles at his bidding, and knelt beside him as he said the prayers of their faith for a woman of another. She had the thought as she watched him that Joe had grown much older. Or was it only that he was sadder? The shadows beneath his eyes reproached her. The lines around his mouth seemed marking of her folly. The sorrow in his voice broke down her last barrier. Softly she slipped her hand within his own. He did not falter in the prayers, but his fingers closed over hers as if to hold them forever. Mrs. Menora found them on their knees when she came in from the fiesta.

With the wisdom of her kind she sent them on the many errands which follow death, the calling of the doctor, the notification of Miss Kellar's indifferent sisters. It was midnight before they returned to the cottage where the Menoras kept vigil. "You go to bed," Mrs. Menora told Rita. "You get up early tomorrow for the store."

"All right," Rita told her; but again she lingered with Joe on the steps of her own house. Summer was long gone. There was no moon. A cold wind rushed down from the mountains, but they gave it no heed. With shining eyes they faced each other. "I think," Rita said, tears not far from the laughter in her voice, "that maybe I have six bridesmaids, one in yellow, one in blue, one in pink, one—"

"In the old church of the Plaza, beloved!"

"O, no," she told him. "In the Irish church. We are Americans."

"Sure," he said. The kiss he gave her to seal her pledge was of a language universal; but it would have been superheated in any land, even in Mexico.

spoke with me a long time. I was happy. Then she became delirious and she died in my arms.

"But to me Jocanda will always be fair and young. I never saw her twisted features. I only felt her golden hair and with my fingers I pressed the transparent eyelids when she became still in that hospital and her body grew tired of the struggle."

"You will ask me 'did I not look at her face at all in that last moment?' No Signor I could not look. Before I went to that hospital I poured a bottle of acid over my eyes. I did not want to see another Jocanda. And I had no desire to see anything more in this world."

WE had passed over the Bowery and the old man halted in front of a tenement house. A little girl called him "Smiling Jim." He gave her something from his pocket. Then I saw him enter the hallway and I heard the stumble of his feet and cane on the wooden stairs.

party, I saw whom I introduced to innumerable people as Virginia Reynolds, the attractive girl who visited Louise Stubbs in Atlanta last winter. Only after I had completed these introductions (in a way that not even Nellie Dodd Orme could find fault with) did some kind friend tell me Miss Reynolds was now Mrs. Ketchum, she having recently married a resident of Oyster Bay by that name. It seems to me the former Miss Reynolds told me she had visited Miss Stubbs at Erie just prior to the wedding.

While on the subject of Atlanta people let me tell you Mrs. J. Frank Meador has bobbed her hair, and it looks much better than I'd thought it would!!!

THE Grand Street Follies is a revue which only in spots is entertaining. There is a tendency to compare these follies with the Garrick Gaieties, probably because these are the only two revues which make no pretense at spectacular costuming and scenery, relying absolutely on their humor and cleverness to get them over. The Grand Street revue I do not think is in a class with the Gaieties. Their number "They Knew What They Wanted Under the Elms" seemed to me to be a labored effort to include the names of as many current plays as possible without being particularly amusing in so doing. Vera Allen who impersonated Mary Morris as Abbie in "Desire Under the Elms" was very clever, but the young lady who impersonated Pauline Lord gives nearly as clever an impersonation of her as does Peggy Conway in the Gaieties.

The best impersonation in the whole follies, I thought, was Sadie Sussman's take-off of Mary Hay's dancing. This was surprisingly well done. There is a take-off of the Duncan sisters which is extremely clever. The number in which Gloria Swanson and the marquise, Lillian Gish and George Jean Nathan were brought in, seemed to me to be particularly unfunny, as did also the "Mr. and Mrs. Guardsman" sketch. (See the take-off of the same show in the Gaieties if you want to see something really clever). "What Price Morning Glories?" was quite an excellent burlesque of "What Price Glory?" and the high spot of the program. A very long drawn-out operatic version of "Abie's Irish Rose" I can never be convinced was funny.

The person in the revue who fairly radiates talent, however, is Albert Carroll. He tells me he was stationed in Augusta during the war, and that he played in Atlanta some years ago with the Ben Greet players. Mr. Carroll is at his funniest in "What Price Morning Glories?" and in a very laughable take-off of Pavlova.

IN glancing over the list of pictures you are to have during "Greater Movie Season"—whatever that is—I notice the newest Richard Dix picture, "The Lucky Devil," which I want to recommend to you without reservation. This picture I think quite the best Mr. Dix has ever done. Many of the screen stars I've seen in the flesh have failed to be as tall or as large as the camera made them out to be, but let me assure you Mr. Dix off-screen is quite as strapping as Mr. Dix on-screen.

"The Street of Forgotten Men" is another good picture I see you're to have. In this picture, Mary Brian and Percy Marmont do very excellent work. Mr. Marmont I have also met and he resembles quite faithfully his screen self. "The Beggar on Horseback" is also headed your way, and it is a most wonderful production. This picture, you may or may not know, played for two-twenty per seat during its lengthy New York engagement.

THE Godfrey MacDonalds have recently passed through New York on their way to Hyanisport, and quite frankly voiced their unhappiness at having to leave Atlanta in the fall for New Orleans, where Godfrey has received what is known as a promotion. Jack Brantley who used to visit the Tom Daniels and the Will Spaldings in Atlanta, is connected with a well-known brokerage firm here for the summer preparatory to entering the University of Virginia in the fall. Mr. and Mrs. Royer are two prominent Atlantans I encountered at "Louie the 14th" the other night.

"LOUIE THE 14TH," by the way, is a show which loses none of its charm on a second review. This show, which I first saw on opening night back in March, has been changed in some minor respects since then, but entirely for the better. I can still say I have seen no musical production in New York staged as lavishly as this Ziegfeld production at the Cosmopolitan.

"LADY BE GOOD" is another show which on the second trip is just sparkling as it was on the first. Ukelele Ike, it is to be regretted, is no longer in the cast, Mr. Edwards having sailed for Europe a while back. Mr. Edwards, I understand, is to be in the forthcoming Marillyn Miller show "Sunny," which Mr. Dillingham will present in the fall. In "Lady Be Good" the indefatigable Astaires are still very much present, and George Gershwin's music loses none of its appeal as time goes on. You are more or less familiar with the "Fascinating Rhythm" and "Lady Be Good" pieces, but of late the "So Am I" number has become quite popular. Why not try it over on your saxophone, an instrument, I am told, which has taken quite a hold on certain members of Atlanta's fashionable young set.

THE human nerves can stand just so many of these purple dresses and hats, and then no more. Purple is being worn by New York women with more uniformity than the army wore khaki during the war. When oh, when, will Mrs. Jean Nash issue a proclamation which will put an end to the present purple plague, and thus relieve our tired and purple-xed eyes?

How the Hubbards Raised a Family

blades until he realized what I meant and then he quit his altercation immediately, with no hard feelings afterward at all.

The natives had to come to me frequently for medical attention, and I soon learned that the two favorite prescriptions were salts and iodine. The iodine was held in especially high regard because it hurt a good deal when it was splashed liberally on an open cut, and to a native a medicine is no good at all unless it hurts. The more painful it is, they reason, the better it must be.

Another of my jobs was as head keeper of the menagerie while Mr. Hubbard was gone. The stock of animals on hand grew rapidly as he met with success in his hunts, and there were soon about 600 beasts on the place which had to be cared for.

Our zoo was mostly a conglomeration of wire cages, in which everything from lions to warthogs and from panthers to monkeys prowled and jumped and trotted around. The four leopards—all of them pets—were not caged. Instead, we fastened a chain from the collar to a wire which stretched overhead between two poles some distance apart. There was a sliding connection so the leopard could run the length of the wire and back, but no further. For the monkeys, an empty kerosene can perched on top of a six-foot pole served perfectly. The monkey's rawhide leash was so fixed that he could climb up and down this stilt that held his "house" and he was quite satisfied with the arrangement.

The most troublesome thing about it was the habit the animals had of breaking away and wandering around loose. The leopards, especially, were adept at escaping from confinement. When I saw one of them creeping around quite free I would have to approach him carefully and lead him back to the zoo. Sometimes the collar and chain would be broken off, and then it was necessary to grab the animal by its tail and, tugging as hard as possible, make it back up to where it belonged.

It's rather a funny feeling, I'll admit, to be dragging a leopard backward by its tail, because one is always thinking, "Now what's he going to do, I wonder? Will he still be interested in those monkeys he was trying to get that he won't bother about me? Or will he get irritated and decide to turn around and try a bite?"

But during all the three years in Africa I was never bitten by an animal, and Mr. Hubbard only had that misfortune once, when a monkey became peeved and nipped his hand. Our freedom from troubles was undoubtedly due mostly to the fact that we never hurt our captives, so they knew they had nothing to fear from us, and we were always on the watch against excessive playfulness.

THE GATES OF DOOM

statesman in a voice that was like a knife's edge.

Captain Gaynor shook his head, his face inscrutable.

"Far be it from me to imply anything, my lord," he answered. "Naturally I must draw my own inferences; but those inferences you will permit me to keep to myself. It would be unfair in me to utter them, since I am an interested party, and—like all interested parties—subject to the sway of interest. Therefore I state the facts—no more. Your lordship must draw the inferences for yourself. You have acted in this matter upon certain information. You will hold, no doubt, that my presence here today, alive, is a sufficient proof of the falseness of such information. When in conjunction with that you consider what else I have now told you, you will be able to judge clearly for yourself the truth of this matter."

In his anger at seeing his every suspicion confirmed—at discovering, as he believed, that he had been so unscrupulously used—the secretary of state came suddenly to his feet.

"O!" he cried, like a man who stifles, "it—it is incredible—as incredible as it is undeniable."

"No so incredible, perhaps, when your lordship knows what else is behind," said the captain. "Sir John's consent to Pauncefort's marriage with Miss Hollinstone is necessary, as otherwise—"

"I know, I know," the minister interrupted. "Sir, you can add nothing that I do not know already; nothing that I cannot now perceive for myself."

It was the captain's turn to be astonished. But he was careful to show nothing of it.

HOW GOOD A REPORTER ARE YOU?

GUS JUD

Here is a test to show you how good a reporter you would make. See if you can pass it.

First, cut off the list of questions below, trying not to read them, and lay them aside. Then hang this page on the wall or lay it on the table, where you and your friends can look at it. Let the group study the picture carefully for one minute. When the minute is up take pencil and paper and see how accurately you can answer the following questions:

- Where is the fire?
- On what story of the building is it?
- Whose place of business is burning?
- Has there been or will there be more than one alarm?
- What indications did you see that would show that the blaze is dangerous?
- What was the time of day?

If you can answer these questions you may consider yourself an accurate observer and a good reporter.

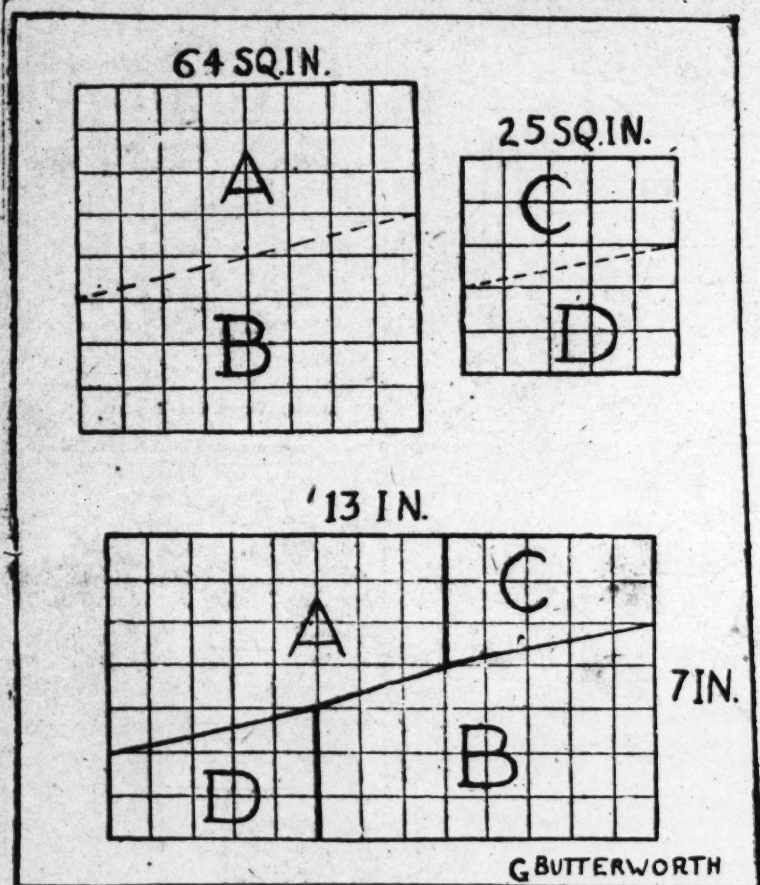

HARRY HOUDINI EDITS THE MAGIC SECTION

WHAT CITY IS BURIED HERE?

All of the above objects can be described in words of six letters each. When rightly guessed and written one below the other in the proper order, their initials will spell the name of a State, a city, a President and a mountain of the United States.

A SQUARE PARADOX

The large square contains 64 square inches; the smaller 25 square inches. If you cut them out and then cut them on the dotted lines, you would have four pieces, A, B, C and D. Now if you put the pieces together, as shown in the lower drawing, you have a figure 13 by 7 inches, containing 91 square inches. But the two squares together contain only 89 square inches. Where did the extra 2 square inches come from?

CAN YOU TRANSPOSE THE COINS?

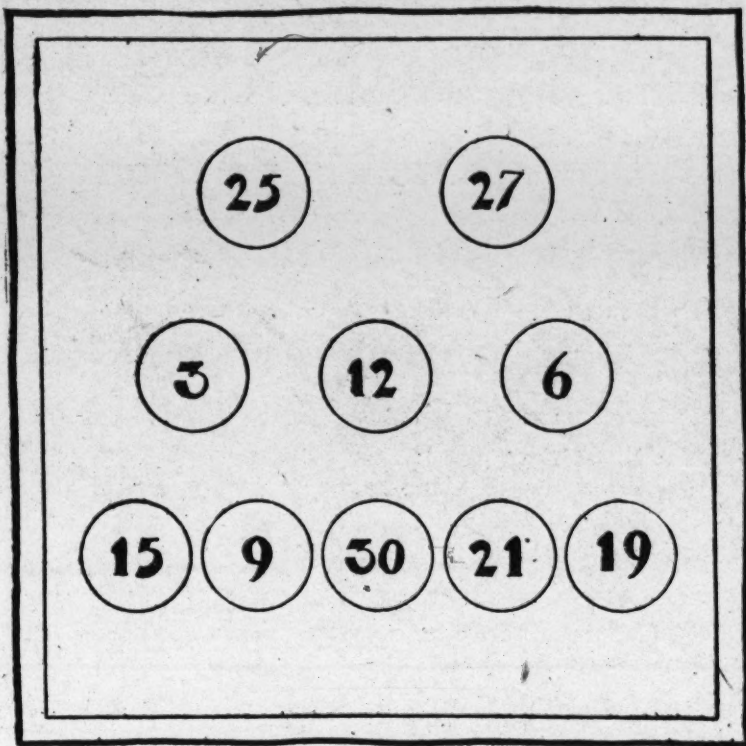

Here we have seven squares, on six of which are three pennies and three nickels. Number 1 is vacant; there are pennies on 2, 3 and 4, and nickels on 5, 6 and 7. The problem is to transpose the pennies and nickels, getting the nickels on 1, 2 and 3, and the pennies on 4, 5 and 6, leaving 7 vacant, by moving the coins one at a time. They can move to the next square if it happens to be vacant, or they can jump over either one or two other coins to a vacant square. For example, your first move is, of course, the penny on 2 to the vacant square 1; you then have three choices: you can move 3 to 2, or 4 to 2, jumping over 3, or 5 to 2, jumping over 3 and 4. The coins can be transposed in 10 moves. Can you do it?

A PUZZLING PROBLEM

By SAM LOYD

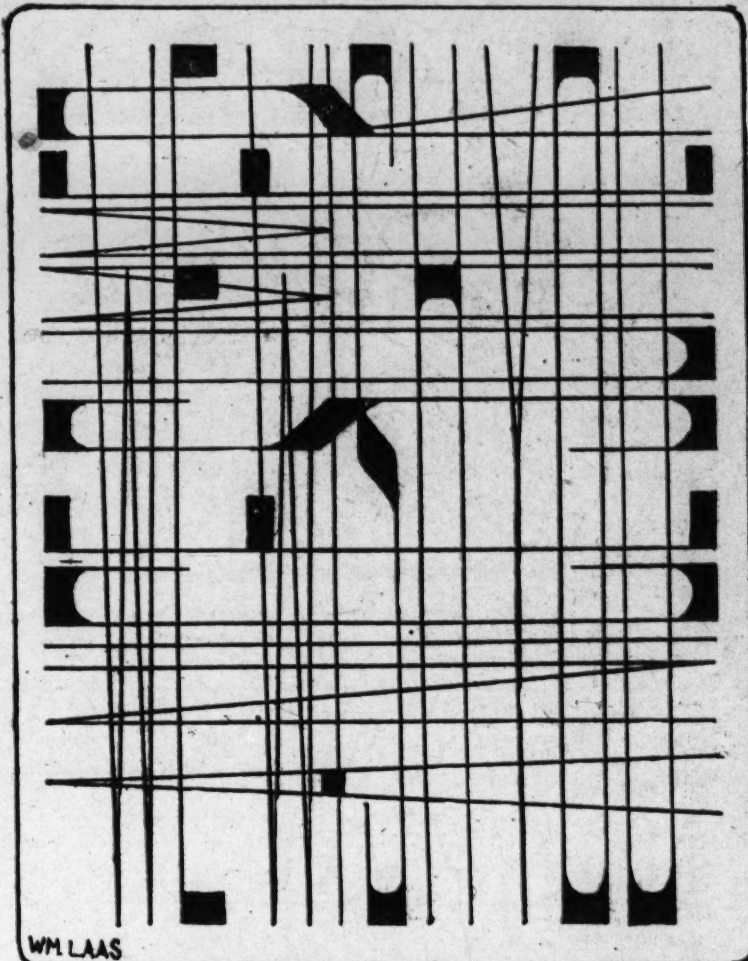

Here is a little problem in addition. (Don't be afraid, it has nothing to do with arithmetic.) The game is to see who can first pick three numbers that add up to 50 out of the numbers shown in the picture. Mr. Loyd says he got the puzzle from a game played at Coney Island, where the numbers were to be knocked down by throwing a baseball. Whoever knocked down three numbers that added up to exactly 50 won a prize. Can you find the numbers?

FOLLOW THE DOTS

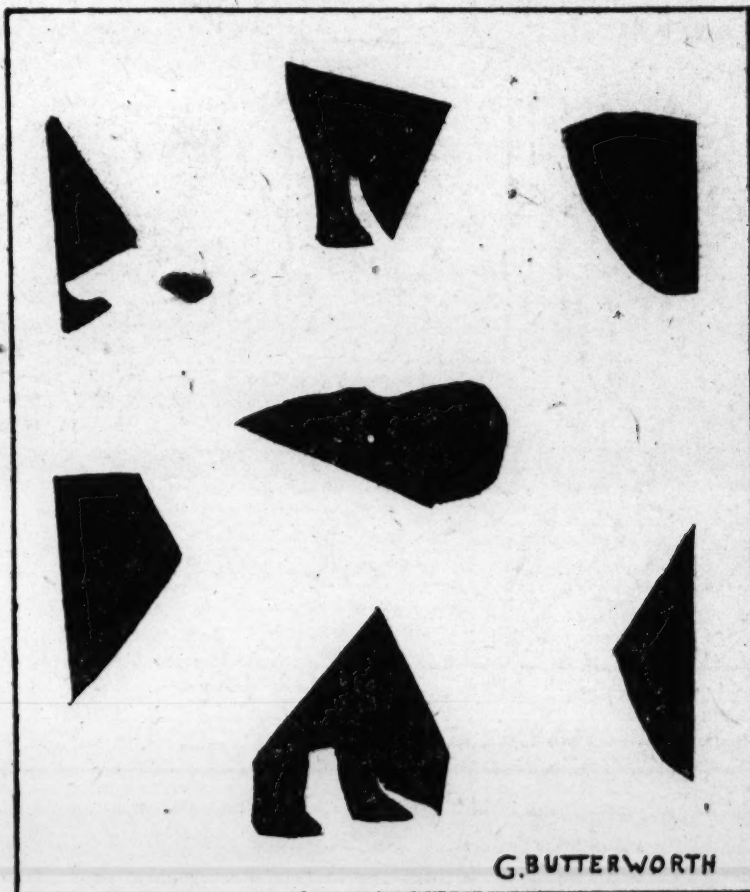

Take your pencil, start at the figure 1 and follow the dots in their order. When you have finished you will have a picture of an old gentleman whom we all love.

CAN YOU READ THIS?

At first glance this looks like a hopeless tangle; but if you hold the page flat and look along it you will instantly see part of our message to you. Then give the page a turn to the right and you can get the complete message.

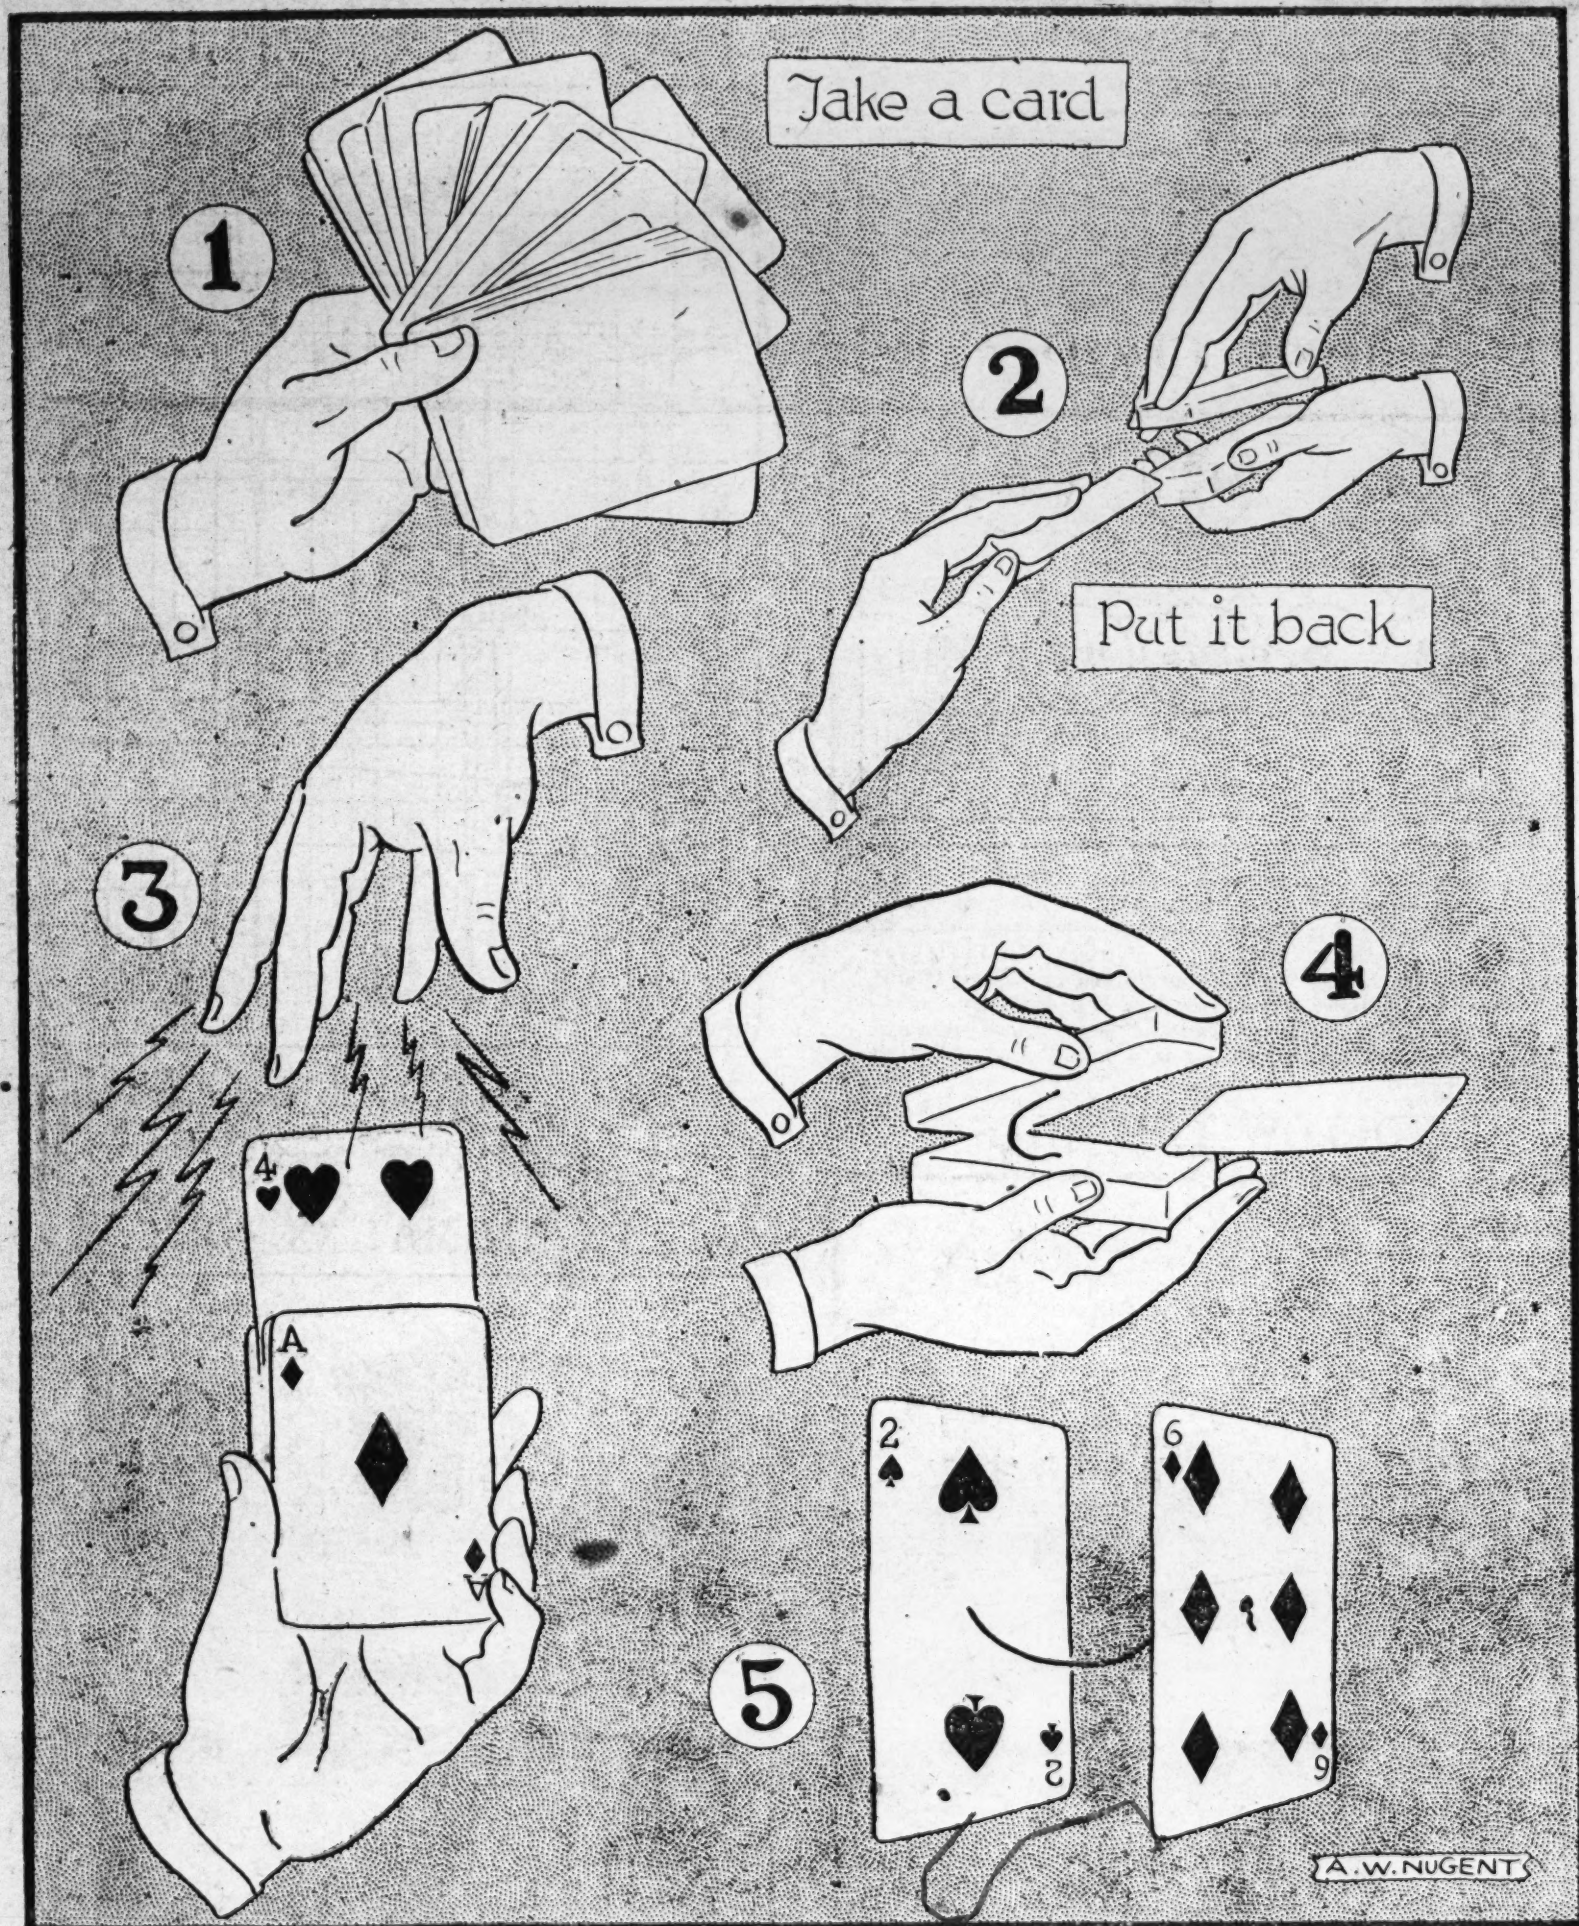

AN ANIMAL CUTOUT

These pieces, when carefully cut out and put together in the right way, will make the picture of a big animal who likes the water. You have probably seen him at the Zoo.

SAVE YOUR MAGIC---ANSWERS NEXT WEEK

THE WONDERFUL JUMPING CARD

This trick will astonish every one who sees it. Its effect is amazing, but it is not difficult to perform. You request a friend to take a card from the deck, as in 1, examine it and put it back, as in 2. You hold the deck in your hand, while with the other you make passes over it. To the wonder of all, the card selected slowly rises from the deck, finally giving a little leap into your hand (3).

The explanation lies in two prepared cards. Take any two cards (if you do not wish to spoil a deck, get two with the same pattern as the deck on their backs) and between them fasten a short piece of rubber elastic (5). Run the elastic through small holes in the centre of the cards and tie a knot in each end. These cards are held on the bottom of the deck when it is offered for the selection of a card. While your friend looks at the card he has taken, quietly cut the deck, bringing the prepared cards to the middle, and when the card is replaced see that it is slipped between the prepared cards (4). Push the selected card home yourself, stretching the elastic; grip the deck tightly, and as you make passes over it gradually release your grip. The elastic will naturally make the card rise slowly. Loosen your grip and the card will fly out of the deck.

Of course care must be taken not to open the deck too wide when having the card replaced, lest the elastic be seen.

DOLLY DIMPLE FINDS A CURE FOR ACHING EYES

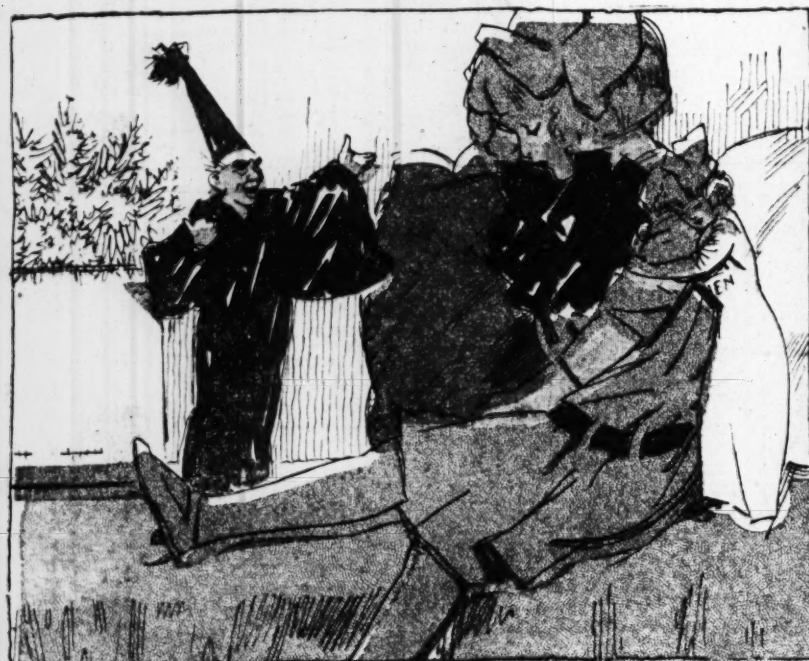

"My eyes are heavy," Dolly says. "They feel like lumps of lead."
"I'll fix your eyes," a voice declares. "I'm very widely read."

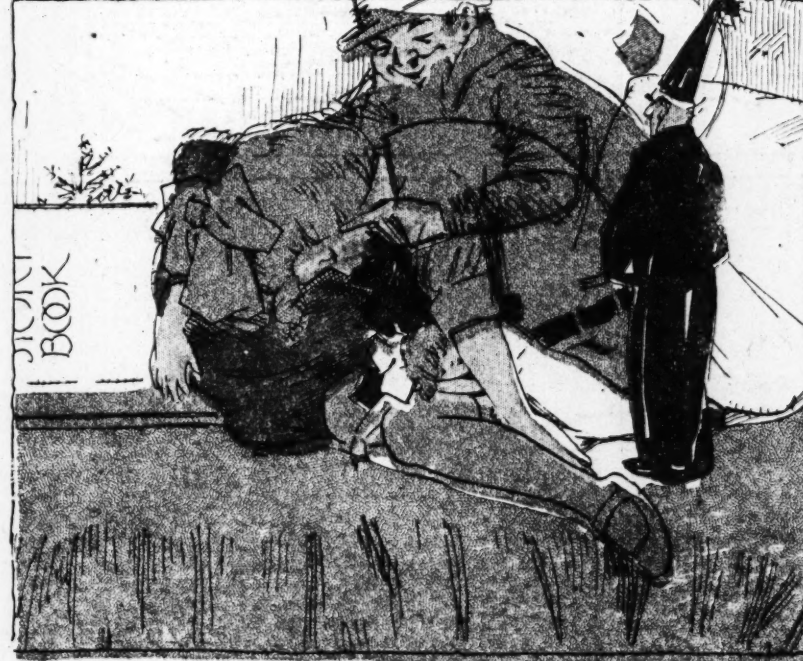

"I'm wondrous wise, and people's eyes I've studied all about.
I've brought my bramble-bush along, jump in and scratch them out."

"Jump in and scratch out fiddlesticks!" says Dolly. "OH—HO—HUM!
I beg your pardon, sir, I'm sure. That awful yawn would come."

"I shan't scratch out my eyes!" "Why not, I pray?" he asks. "And then You'll jump into another bush and scratch them in again."

He thus expounds, his cure propounds; but while his wits he tries,
The Sand Man, softly stealing in, strokes Dolly on the eyes.

"Come on, old bramble-brain," he says, "your cure won't stand the test.
For little ailments such as these, old-fashioned ones are best."
